280	S. 3250	Mr. Long of Louisiana. Oct. 2, 1964.	To amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to provide an optional simplified tax method, and for other purposes. (This bill has 3 principal features: (1) increases the minimum standard deduction from $100 per exemption plus $200 to $100 per exemption plus $300; (2) increases the dollar limitation on the 10 percent standard deduction from $1,000 to $2,000; (3) provides an alternative simplified method for determining tax. Under the simplified tax plan taxpayers would elect for 5-year periods to determine their tax under the simplified plan at rates ranging from 20 percent of the simplified taxable income when taxable income is not over $10,000 up to 50 percent of the simplified taxable income when taxable income exceeds $50,000. Simplified taxable income is computed by including in gross income numerous types of income which presently are excluded. These are: proceeds of life insurance contracts; gifts and inheritances; discharge of indebtedness; recovery of bad debts, etc.; foreign income; social security and railroad retirement income; unemployment compensation; pension plan contributions; stock options; group-term insurance; and the entire amount of capital gains. In addition, the following deductions are denied on computing simplified taxable income: State, local and foreign income taxes; circulation expenses; soil and water conservation expenses; farm fertilizer expenses; expenses in clearing land; intangible drilling and development cost; exploration expenses; percentage depletion and development expenditures; contributions to self-employed pension plan; and the deduction of 50 percent for net capital gains.)	Oct. 15, 1964.—Reports requested of Bureau of Budget and Department of the Treasury.
