JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1722) to provide emergency unemployment compensation, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991 (S. 1722), as agreed to by House and Senate conferees, has three major objectives. First, it establishes a time-limited program of emergency unemployment compensation benefits to assist unemployed workers who have exhausted their benefits under the current unemployment programs. Second, it corrects an inequitable situation whereby unemployed, former members of the armed forces must wait longer to receive regular unemployment benefits and receive fewer weeks of benefits than civilians who become unemployed. Finally, the conference agreement establishes an unemployment compensation advisory council which will meet every four years to review the status of the unemployment program and recommend needed improvements.

In addition, the conference agreement establishes a demonstration program to test the effectiveness of providing job search services to unemployment compensation claimants, and directs the Secretary of Labor to report to the Congress on an improved method of allocating unemployment compensation administrative funds among States.

The conference agreement provides that all provisions of the Act shall be treated as provisions designated as emergency requirements by the President and the Congress under the terms of the Budget Act, and no spending resulting from the Act shall be considered for any purpose under the Budget Act. The agreement also provides that payments for emergency benefits are exempt from sequester. The cost of emergency unemployment compensation benefits is Federally financed from existing balances in the Extended Unemployment Compensation Account of the Unemployment Trust Fund.

TITLE I.—EMERGENCY UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Present law.—Under current law, the Extended Benefits program provides for the payment of a maximum of 13 additional weeks of benefits after an unemployed worker has received the 26 weeks (maximum) of regular benefits provided under State law. The extended benefits program is activated when: (1) a State's insured unemployment rate has averaged at least 5 percent for 13 consecutive weeks, and (2) that rate is at least 20 percent higher than the State's average insured unemployment rate for the corresponding 13-week period in the 2 preceding years. At their option, States may apply an alternative trigger mechanism. Under the alternative, extended benefits can be paid if a State's insured unemployment rate is at least 6 percent, even though the rate is less than 20 percent higher than the rate in the preceding 2 years. Thirty seven States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands have adopted this alternative trigger mechanism.

Fifty percent of the benefits paid under the Extended Benefits program are paid for with State funds. The remaining 50 percent are paid from Federal funds drawn from the Extended Unemployment Compensation Account in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

Senate bill.—The bill establishes a temporary program of emergency unemployment compensation benefits, to be in effect from October 6, 1991 through July 4, 1992. The program would pay Federally-funded benefits to unemployed workers who had exhausted their benefit rights under the regular unemployment compensation program, and to certain workers who had exhausted the additional benefits available to them under the Extended Benefit program.

A. Scope and duration of emergency benefits

Beginning in October all States would be eligible to provide emergency unemployment compensation benefits financed entirely by the Federal government. The bill would establish three levels of weeks of eligibility for these emergency benefits. The number of weeks of benefits payable to an unemployed worker who had exhausted regular unemployment benefits in a particular State would be determined by the average total unemployment rate, or TUR, in that State for the most recent six months for which data are available:

States with a TUR of 8 percent or higher would be eligible to provide 20 weeks of benefits;

States with a TUR of 7 percent up to 8 percent would be eligible to provide 13 weeks of benefits;

All other States would be eligible to provide 7 weeks of benefits (including the Virgin Islands).

At any time that a State was not eligible for one of the two higher levels of benefits, unemployed workers in the State who exhausted their regular unemployment benefits would be eligible for 7 weeks of emergency benefits.

B. Eligibility for emergency benefits

Emergency unemployment compensation benefits would be paid to unemployed workers who exhaust their regular unemployment benefits during the effective period of the program, October 6, 1991 through July 4, 1992.

The bill also "reaches back" to aid workers in States with higher levels of unemployment who exhausted their regular employment benefits in the six-month period prior to the start of the emergency program. Unemployed workers who exhausted benefits after March 1, 1991 and before the first week beginning after October 5 would be eligible to receive 7, 13, or 20 weeks of benefits in eligible States. The "reach back" would not be available in States that do not have a six percent TUR period in effect as of September 1 or October 6, 1991.

Some unemployed workers who had received extended benefits and exhausted their eligibility for them, either during the effective period of the program or during the "reach back" period, would also be eligible for emergency benefits. The bill provides that the number of weeks of extended benefits the worker received would be deducted from the number of weeks of emergency benefits available in the State. The number of weeks of emergency benefits that remained, if any, would be paid to the worker.

C. Other benefit provisions

The Senate provision is structured to ensure that an unemployed worker receives the maximum number of weeks of benefits to which the worker is entitled, and to prevent any sudden and unexpected removal of a worker from benefit status if a State "triggers off" while the worker is in the middle of a benefit period. Once a State's average TUR has caused it to "trigger on" for a 13- or 20-week period of emergency benefits, the State would remain triggered on for at least 13 weeks, even if its TUR declined during this period.

Alternatively, if a State's average unemployment rate were to increase so that the State qualified for a higher number of weeks of benefits, workers in that State would receive the additional benefits. Further, once an unemployed worker became eligible for 7, 13, or 20 weeks of emergency benefits, the worker would be paid benefits for all weeks to which he or she was entitled, even if the State "triggered off" or the program expired before the worker had received the full number of weeks of benefits.

D. Measure for triggering benefits

To determine the number of weeks of benefits which may be paid in the State, the bill requires the Secretary of Labor to use the average unadjusted total rate of unemployment for a State for the most recent 6-calendar month period for which data are available.

E. Funding source for emergency benefits

All benefits are fully Federally-funded out of the Extended Unemployment Compensation Account.

House amendment.—The House amendment establishes a new permanent Federal Supplemental Compensation program that would replace the current Extended Benefits program. It would provide three tiers of benefits added to the 26 weeks of regular State benefits. A temporary provision would add a fourth tier during fiscal year 1992.

A. Scope and duration of benefits

Beginning the month after the month of enactment, all States would be eligible to provide supplemental benefits financed entirely by the Federal government. The number of weeks of benefits payable in a State would be based on the State's seasonally-adjusted total unemployment rate for the most recent three months.

States would be eligible for the following weeks of benefits:

20 weeks if the TUR is at least 8 percent and is at least 120 percent of the average in the same three-month periods during the last two years;

15 weeks if the TUR is at least 7 percent (plus at least 120 percent); and 10 weeks if the TUR is at least 6 percent (plus at least 120 percent).

In addition, in fiscal year 1992, all States not otherwise eligible for a higher benefit period would be eligible for five weeks of benefits if the three-month moving average of the seasonally adjusted national TUR is at least 6 percent.

B. Eligibility for benefits

Benefits would be paid to unemployed workers who exhaust their regular unemployment benefits under State law after the effective date of the program.

In addition, workers who have exhausted regular benefits before the effective date, but on or after January 1, 1991, would be eligible under a "reach back" provision for 5, 10, 15, or 20 weeks of benefits depending on the number of weeks activated in their States upon enactment.

C. Other benefit provisions

The House amendment includes provisions that are similar to those in the Senate bill.

D. Measure for triggering benefits

To determine the number of weeks of benefits which may be paid in a State, the House amendment requires the Secretary to use the three-month moving average of the State's seasonally adjusted total unemployment rate. However, until the Bureau of Labor Statistics is able to adjust State rates for seasonal fluctuations, a six-month moving average of unadjusted rates would be used instead.

E. Funding source for benefits

Most benefits are paid out of Federal funds in the Extended Unemployment Compensation Account. Benefits for employees of non-profit organizations and governmental agencies are paid out of general revenues.

F. Repeal of existing program

The existing Extended Benefits program is repealed the month after the month of enactment.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the Senate bill, modified to provide an effective date for the "reach back" provision of March 1, 1991. It also clarifies that the data to be used in determining a State's TUR would be for the most recent six calendar month period for which data have been published.

TITLE II.—DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM TO PROVIDE JOB SEARCH

Present law.—Federal law is silent on eligibility conditions for unemployment benefits. However, under State laws, all States require claimants to be able to work and available for work. Also, most States require the claimant to register with a local employment office and to seek work actively or to make a reasonable effort to obtain work.

Senate bill.—No provision.

House amendment.—The House amendment authorizes three State demonstration projects to assess the cost-effectiveness of intensive job search services for unemployment compensation claimants. Claimants who have at least 126 weeks of employment at $30 per week with their last employer in the last three years may be required to participate in an intensive job search program after they have received 6 to 10 weeks of regular State benefits. However, no more than five percent of the claimants for unemployment compensation in a State could be selected to participate. Workers with definite recall dates or those hiring out of union halls would not be eligible to participate.

Lack of compliance could lead to disqualification of up to 10 weeks of benefits. However, States may waive the requirement for participation if the individual shows good cause.

Participants would be entitled to a voucher worth the lesser of the average weekly benefit (about $167 nationwide) in their State of residence or the reasonable cost of providing the services. Costs of operating a job search program would be funded out of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Account.

Intensive job search assistance would include all basic employment services such as orientation, testing, a job-search workshop, and an individual assessment and counseling interview. Additional services would involve periodically contacting the intensive job search assistance program staff, receiving follow-up assistance, and using resource centers and job search materials and equipment, such as telephones, job listings, and word processors for resume writing.

Demonstration projects would last for one year. States would be required to evaluate their programs and to submit interim reports to the Congress, with a final report due no later than five years after the commencement of each project.

The provision would be effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the House amendment.

TITLE III.—OTHER PROVISIONS

A. Payment of unemployment compensation to former members of the Armed Forces

Present law.—Under current law, regular unemployment compensation benefits are payable to unemployed ex-service members who (1) are separated under honorable conditions (and in the case of officers, did not resign for the good of the service); and (2) have completed the first full term of active service. Ex-service members who are separated prior to completing their first full term of active service can also qualify for unemployment compensation benefits if they are separated under honorable conditions: (1) for the convenience of the Government under an early release program; (2) because of medical disqualifications, pregnancy, parenthood, or any service-incurred injury or disability; (3) because of hardship; or (4) if they have served for 365 continuous days, because of personality disorder or inaptitude.

Through most of the history of the Unemployment Compensation program, ex-service members received the same number of weeks of benefits as civilians, and benefits were payable to service members after waiting the same length of time as civilians had to wait. In 1982 the law was amended so that ex-service members must wait four weeks from the date of their separation from the service before they may receive benefits. Civilians serve a one-week waiting period. Ex-service members can receive regular unemployment compensation benefits based on employment in the military for a maximum of 13 weeks. Civilians receive regular unemployment benefits for up to 26 weeks.

To be used as the basis for paying unemployment compensation benefits, active duty service by a member of a reserve military component must have been for not less than 180 consecutive days.

Senate bill.—The Senate bill would repeal the provision enacted in 1982 requiring ex-service members to wait four weeks before being eligible for unemployment compensation benefits, and limiting the duration of their benefits to 13 weeks. It would also reduce from 180 to 90 the number of consecutive days an individual in a reserve military component must serve on active duty before that service may be counted for purposes of eligibility for benefits.

House amendment.—The House amendment is the same as the Senate bill.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the Senate bill and the House amendment.

B. Advisory Council on Unemployment Compensation

Present law.—Title IX of the Social Security Act requires the Secretary of Labor to establish a Federal Advisory Council on unemployment compensation. The number of members must not exceed 16, including the chairman. The Council's purpose is to review the Federal-State unemployment compensation system and to make recommendations for change to the Secretary.

The Council is appointed by the Secretary, and members must consist of representatives of employers and employees, in equal numbers, and the public. The Council held its last formal meeting on April 22 and 23 of 1981. Its charter expired in 1986.

Senate bill.—The bill would repeal present law and establish a new Advisory Council on Unemployment Insurance. The Council would be patterned after the advisory councils established for the Social Security program.

The Secretary of Labor would establish the first Advisory Council on Unemployment Compensation not later than February 1, 1992. Subsequent Advisory Councils would be appointed every fourth year after the appointment of the first Council. Each Advisory Council would be comprised of 11 members: three members appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate, in consultation with the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Committee on Finance; three members appointed by the Speaker of the House, in consultation with the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Committee on Ways and Means; and five members appointed by the President. The Chairman would be appointed by the President.

Selections made by the President would be required to include representatives of business, labor, State government, and the public. The President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House would each appoint one representative of business, one representative of labor, and one representative of the interests of State governments.

The function of each Advisory Council would be to evaluate the unemployment compensation program, including the purpose, goals, countercyclical effectiveness, coverage, benefit adequacy, trust fund solvency, funding of State administrative costs, administrative efficiency, and any other aspects of the program, and to make recommendations for improvement. The bill specifically directs the first Advisory Council to include in its report findings and recommendations with respect to determining eligibility for extended unemployment benefits on the basis of unemployment statistics for regions, States, and subdivisions of States. The report of the first Council is due February 1, 1994.

Each Council would be authorized to engage any technical assistance required to carry out its functions, including actuarial services. The Secretary of Labor would provide each Council with any staff, office facilities, and other assistance, and any data prepared by the Department of Labor, that are required by the Council to carry out its functions.

The Senate provision would be effective upon enactment.

House amendment.—The House amendment is similar to the Senate bill. It repeals present law and establishes a new Advisory Council on Unemployment Insurance modeled after the quadrennial advisory councils established for the Social Security program. The Council would report to the Congress on the counter-cyclical effectiveness, benefit adequacy, solvency, and administrative efficiency of the unemployment program.

The Council would have 16 members plus the Secretary of Labor. The President would appoint eight members and the Congress would appoint eight members. There would be four members each from the Congress, business, labor, and State government. The Secretary of Labor would serve as chairman.

The provision would be effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the Senate bill.

C. Report on method of allocating administrative funds among States

Present law.—Federal law authorizes appropriations to assist States in the administration of their unemployment compensation laws. The Secretary of Labor certifies to the Secretary of Treasury for payment to States such amounts as the Secretary determines to be necessary for the proper and efficient administration of unemployment compensation during the fiscal year for which the payment is made. The Secretary of Labor's determination must be based on the population of the State, an estimate of the number of persons covered by the State's unemployment compensation law and the cost of proper and efficient administration of such law, and such other factors as the Secretary of Labor finds relevant. The Secretary of Labor may not certify for payment a total amount which exceeds the amount appropriated for the fiscal year.

Senate bill.—No provision.

House amendment.—The Department of Labor would be required to send a report to the Congress with a proposal for revising the method for distributing administrative grants to States. The report would be required to include an analysis of various factors such as productivity, cost, workload levels, and simplicity.

The provision would be effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the House amendment.

D. Assistance to certain dislocated workers

Present law.—Under Part B of Title III of the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), the Secretary of Labor has discretionary authority to spend funds on employment and training services for dislocated workers in certain circumstances, such as unforeseen mass layoffs for which regular Title II State allocations are inadequate. The Secretary may target such assistance on specific industries.

Senate bill.—The Senate bill directs the Secretary of Labor to give special consideration to providing services to dislocated timber workers in Oregon and Washington for purposes of determining the programs and activities to be funded under Part B of Title III of JTPA.

House amendment.—No provision.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the Senate bill.

TITLE IV. BUDGET PROVISIONS

A. Emergency designation

Present law.—The Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Gramm-Rudman-Hollings), as amended by the Budget Enforcement Act of 1990, provides that new outlays to meet an emergency requirement may be exempted from spending caps and from causing sequestration as a result of failure to meet pay-as-you-go requirements. Part C of the Act, in sections 251(b)(2)(D) and 252(e), provides that if the President designates a provision as an emergency requirement, and the Congress also so designates in statute, then the spending authorized by any such provision will not be counted for purposes of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings enforcement procedures.

Senate bill.—The bill provides for designating all direct spending amounts and all appropriations authorized by the bill as emergency requirements within the meaning of part C of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985. However, the bill also stipulates that no provisions will take effect unless, not later than the date of enactment, the President submits to the Congress a written designation of all spending authorized by the bill as emergency requirements within the meaning of the Budget Act.

House amendment.—The House amendment provides that its provisions would constitute an emergency within the meaning of section 252(e) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended. Notwithstanding the cost estimate, any amount of new budget authority, outlays, or receipts resulting from the bill would not be considered for any purpose of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the House amendment with a technical correction.

B. Exemption of Federal supplemental compensation from sequestration

Present law.—The Federal half of Federal-State Extended Benefits is subject to sequestration under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended.

Senate bill.—No provision.

House amendment.—Benefits provided under the new supplemental benefits program would be exempted from sequestration.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement follows the House amendment.

PROVISIONS NOT INCLUDED IN THE CONFERENCE AGREEMENT :

A. MODIFICATIONS TO FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT ACCOUNTS

Present law.—Generally, State accounts in the Federal unemployment trust fund earn interest on funds not required to meet current withdrawals at a rate equal to the average rate of interest of all interest-bearing obligations of the United States forming the public debt.

The Federal unemployment tax on employers is 0.8 percent on the first $7,000 paid annually to each employee. It flows into three Federal accounts: (1) the Employment Security Administration Account (ESAA); (2) the Extended Unemployment Compensation Account (EUCA); and (3) the Federal Unemployment Account (FUA).

The ESAA holds funds for the administration of the Unemployment Insurance and Employment Services. The EUCA holds funds to cover the Federal half of the Extended Benefits (EB) program. The FUA holds funds to lend to States who run out of money in their accounts to cover State benefits and the State half of the EB program.

Currently 90 percent of the 0.8 percentage point (0.72 percentage points) Federal unemployment tax flows into ESSA. The remaining 0.08 percentage point is transferred monthly to EUCA. Up to 95% of the estimated net revenue after this transfer is available to be appropriated for State administrative costs.

The remaining balance is available for Federal administrative costs. At the end of the fiscal year, any excess above 40 percent of the appropriation for the prior fiscal year is transferred to EUCA.

EUCA receives the 0.08 percentage point of the Federal unemployment tax plus any overflows from ESAA. It has a ceiling of 0.375 percent of total wages in covered employment in the prior calendar year. If the ESAA and EUCA are full, any excess at the end of the fiscal year is transferred to the FUA. If the ESAA is not full, the excess is transferred to ESAA and then any remaining funds go to FUA or EUCA to the extent that they are not full.

FUA does not receive Federal unemployment taxes directly. If ESAA and EUCA are full at the end of the fiscal year, FUA receives the excess funds. If all three accounts are full, the excess is allocated to the State accounts in the unemployment trust fund in proportion to each State's share of Federal unemployment taxes paid in the prior calendar year.

Senate bill.—No provision.

House amendment.—The provision would authorize a tiered interest rate structure to reward States for maintaining adequate balances. Interest rates on State balances would earn premiums of 5, 10, and 15 percent higher than the current interest rate if their "high-cost multiples" in the previous quarter exceeded 0.5, 1.0, and 1.5 respectively. The high-cost multiple equals a State's current trust fund balance expressed as a percent of total wages paid in the State divided by the highest ratio of benefit costs to total wages for a 12-month period in the State's experience.

The provision would change the flow of Federal unemployment tax revenue into the three Federal Accounts such that ESAA would receive 80 percent. EUCA and FUA each would receive 10 percent of the annual revenue. The overflows would continue to work as under present law. Interest-free borrowing would be authorized between the accounts. The ceiling in the loan account would be lowered from 0.625 to 0.375 percent of total annual wages. The ceiling on EUCA would be raised from 0.375 to 0.625 percent of total annual wages, and it would be renamed the Supplemental Compensation Account.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement does not include the House amendment.

B. COST ESTIMATE

Present law.—Section 254 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended by the Budget Enforcement Act of 1990, provides that the Office of Management and Budget shall determine and report on amounts to be sequestered to enforce spending limits, pay-as-you-go targets, and deficit targets. If in its final sequestration report OMB estimates that any sequestration is required, the President shall issue an order fully implementing without change all sequestrations required by the OMB calculations set forth in that report.

Senate bill.—No provision.

House amendment.—As required by House rules, the total dollar amounts of outlays and receipts resulting from the provisions of the bill in fiscal years 1991 through 1995, as estimated by the Congressional Budget Office, are written into the bill.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement does not include the House amendment.

C. INTERNATIONAL COFFEE AGREEMENT

Present law.—The International Coffee Agreement is a multilateral commodity agreement, first negotiated in 1962, between consumer and producer countries. Its objective is to stabilize coffee prices and assure adequate supplies of coffee to consuming nations. Negotiations on the renewal of the agreement were broken off in 1989. The statutory authority for U.S. participation in the agreement expired on October 1, 1989.

Senate bill.—The bill contains a Sense of the Senate resolution stating that the International Coffee Organization, through its export quota system, acts like a cartel and directly against the interests of American consumers by keeping prices at artificially high levels.

The resolution expresses the sense of the Senate that the United States should not be a party to any coffee agreement which will increase the price of coffee to the American consumer.

House amendment.—No provision.

Conference agreement.—The conference agreement does not include the Senate provision.
