Special rules apply to a tax-exempt organization described in section 501(c)(3) or (c)(4) (i.e., a charity or social welfare organization) that is engaged in commercial-type insurance activities. Such activities are treated as an unrelated trade or business and the tax-exempt organization is subject to tax on the income from such insurance activities (including investment income that might otherwise be excluded from the definition of unrelated business taxable income) under subchapter L (sec. 501(m)(2)).[82] Accordingly, a tax-exempt organization described in section 501(c)(3) or (c)(4) is generally subject to tax on its income from commercial-type insurance activities in the same manner as a taxable insurance company.

A tax-exempt organization that conducts insurance activities through a foreign corporation is not subject to U.S. tax with respect to such activities. Under the subpart F rules, the United States shareholders (as defined in sec. 951(b)) of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) are required to include in income currently their shares of certain income of the CFC, whether or not such income is actually distributed to the shareholders. This current inclusion rule applies to certain insurance income of the CFC (sec. 953). However, income inclusions under subpart F have been characterized as dividends for unrelated business income tax purposes.[83] Accordingly, insurance income earned by the CFC that is includible in income currently under subpart F by the taxable United States shareholders of the CFC is excluded from unrelated business taxable income in the case of a shareholder that is a tax-exempt organization.

House Bill

The House bill applies a look-through rule in characterizing certain subpart F insurance income for unrelated business income tax purposes. The look-through rule applies to amounts that constitute insurance income currently includible in gross income under the subpart F rules and that are not attributable to the insurance of risks of (1) the tax-exempt organization itself, (2) tax-exempt affiliates of such organization, and (3) directors, officers, or employees of such organization or such affiliates if the insurance covers solely risks associated with the performance of services for the benefit of such organization or affiliates. Such amounts are treated as income from an unrelated trade or business to the extent such amounts would constitute income from an unrelated trade or business if received directly by the tax-exempt organization. Deductions connected with amounts treated as unrelated business taxable income are allowed to the same extent as such deductions are allowed to a taxable entity.

[82] If the commercial-type insurance activities constitute a substantial part of the organization's activities, the organization will not be tax-exempt under section 501 (c)(3) or (c)(4) (sec. 501(m)(1)).

[83] The Internal Revenue Service has concluded in private letter rulings, which are not to be used or cited as precedent, that subpart F inclusions are treated as dividends received by the United States shareholder (a tax-exempt entity) for purposes of computing the shareholder's UBTI (see LTRs 9407007 (November 12, 1993), 9027051 (April 13, 1990), 9024086 (March 22, 1990), 9024026 (March 15, 1990), 8922047 (March 6, 1989), 8836037 (June 14, 1988), 8819034 (February 10, 1988)). However, the IRS issued one private ruling in which it concluded that subpart F inclusions are treated as if the underlying income were realized directly by the United States shareholder (a tax-exempt entity) for purposes of computing the shareholder's UBTI (see LTR 9043039 (July 30, 1990)). This ruling gave no explanation for the IRS's departure from the position in its prior rulings, and the IRS reiterated in a subsequent ruling the position that subpart F inclusions are characterized as dividends for purposes of computing UBTI. Moreover, the application of the look-through rule in the ruling in question did not affect the ultimate result in the ruling because the income to which the subpart F inclusion was attributable was of a type that was excludible from UBTI. The conferees believe that LTR 9043039 (July 30, 1990) is incorrect in its application of a look-through rule in characterizing income inclusions under subpart F for unrelated business income tax purposes.

Effective date.—The provision applies to amounts includible in gross income in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with modifications. Under the conference agreement, the look-through rule applies to amounts that constitute insurance income currently includible in gross income under the subpart F rules and that are not attributable to the insurance of risks of (1) the tax-exempt organization itself, (2) certain tax-exempt affiliates of such organization, and (3) any individual who performs services for the benefit of the tax-exempt organization (or certain tax-exempt affiliates) provided that the insurance covers primarily risks associated with the individual's performance of services for the benefit of the tax-exempt organization (or tax-exempt affiliates). The conferees intend that the determination of whether insurance covers primarily risks associated with the performance of services for the benefit of the tax-exempt organization or its tax-exempt affiliates is to be based on all the facts and circumstances. The conferees further intend that a safe harbor be provided under which this "primarily" requirement will be considered to be satisfied where at least 80 percent of the services covered by the insurance are performed by the insured individual for the benefit of the tax-exempt organization or its tax-exempt affiliates.

The conference agreement clarifies that, for purposes of this provision, a tax-exempt organization is an affiliate of another tax-exempt organization if (1) the two organizations have significant common purposes and substantial common membership or (2) the two organizations have directly or indirectly substantial common direction or control.

Finally, the conferees clarify the operation of the look-through rule in the case of a CFC that insures the risks of multiple shareholders of the CFC, one or more of which are tax-exempt organizations. The specified exceptions from the look-through rule apply on a shareholder by shareholder basis. Accordingly, if the subpart F insurance income allocable to a tax-exempt organization includes both income attributable to the insurance of risks of the organization itself and income attributable to the insurance of risks of another shareholder that is not a tax-exempt affiliate of such organization, the look-through rule applies only to that portion of the income that represents income attributable to the insurance of risks of such other shareholder (and does not apply to the portion of the income that represents income attributable to the insurance of risks of the organization itself). In this regard, the conferees intend that if the CFC serves as a vehicle for the separate funding by each shareholder of its risks or liabilities for claims, without any pooling of a shareholder's risks or liabilities for claims with those of another shareholder either directly or through reinsurance, allocations that fairly reflect such arrangement will be respected for purposes of applying the look-through rule.

32. $1 MILLION COMPENSATION DEDUCTION LIMIT EXTENDED TO ALL EMPLOYEES (SEC. 12878 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, the otherwise allowable deduction for compensation paid or accrued with respect to a covered employee of a publicly held corporation is limited to no more than $1 million per year. A person is a covered employee if (1) they are the chief executive officer of the corporation, or (2) their total compensation is required to be reported for the taxable year under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 because the employee is one of the 4 highest compensated officers for the year (other than the chief executive officer). The deduction limitation applies to (1) all remuneration for services, including cash and the cash value of all remuneration paid in a form other than cash, other than remuneration payable on a commission basis, (2) certain performance-based compensation, (3) payments to a tax-qualified retirement plan, and (4) amounts excludable from the executive's gross income (e.g., health benefits).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, the denial of the deduction for compensation is extended to compensation of all employees, other than employees of personal service corporations. The definition of compensation subject to the deduction denial is not modified.

The Commissioner of Social Security is to increase the amount of earnings that an individual may receive and still qualify for full social security benefits by an amount which takes into account the revenues resulting from the expansion of the compensation deduction denial.

Effective date.—The expansion of the deduction denial applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995, except that it does not apply to remuneration payable under a written binding contract in effect on October 25, 1995, and which was not modified thereafter in any material respect before the remuneration was paid.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment provision.

33. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING AN INCREASE IN THE SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS LIMIT (SEC. 12879 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

In 1995, social security beneficiaries aged 62 to 64 lose $1 in benefits for each $2 of earnings from work in excess of $8,160. Social security beneficiaries aged 65 to 69 lose $1 in benefits for each

$3 of earnings from work in excess of $11,280. These earnings limits are indexed for inflation.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment expresses the sense of the Senate that Congress intends to pass legislation before the end of 1995 to raise the social security earnings limit for social security beneficiaries aged 65 to 69 in a manner that will insure the financial integrity of the social security trust funds and that will be consistent with the goal of achieving a balanced Federal budget in seven years.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

34. INCREASE DEDUCTIBILITY OF BUSINESS MEAL EXPENSES FOR INDIVIDUALS SUBJECT TO FEDERAL HOURS OF SERVICE LIMITATIONS (SEC. 12880(A) OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

In general, 50 percent of meal and entertainment expenses incurred in connection with a trade or business that are ordinary and necessary (and not lavish or extravagant) are deductible (sec. 274). Food or beverage expenses are fully deductible provided that they are (1) required by Federal law to be provided to crew members of a commercial vessel, (2) provided to crew members of similar commercial vessels not operated on the oceans, or (3) provided on certain oil or gas platforms or drilling rigs.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides that 80 percent of meal expenses are deductible with respect to food or beverages consumed by an individual during, or incident to, any period of duty subject to the hours of service limitations of the Department of Transportation. There are four general groupings of individuals subject to these limitations. The first is certain air transportation employees, such as pilots, crew, dispatchers, mechanics, and control tower operators, pursuant to Federal Aviation Administration regulations. The second is interstate truck and bus drivers, pursuant to Department of Transportation regulations. The third is certain railroad employees, such as engineers, conductors, train crews, dispatchers, and control operations personnel, pursuant to Federal Railroad Administration regulations. The fourth is certain merchant mariners, pursuant to Coast Guard regulations.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

35. ALLOCATION AND APPORTIONMENT OF INTEREST EXPENSE OF CERTAIN NONFINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS (SEC. 12880(B) OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

For foreign tax credit purposes, taxpayers generally are required to allocate and apportion interest expense between U.S. and foreign source income based on the proportion of the taxpayer's total assets in each location. Such allocation and apportionment is required to be made for affiliated groups (as defined in sec. 864(e)(5)) as a whole rather than on a subsidiary-by-subsidiary basis. However, certain types of financial institutions that are members of an affiliated group are treated as members of a separate affiliated group for purposes of the allocation and apportionment of interest expense (sec. 864(e)(5)(B)). Section 1215(c)(5) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (P.L. 99–514, 100 Stat. 2548) includes a targeted rule which treats a certain corporation as a financial institution for this purpose.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment repeals the targeted rule of section 1215(c)(5) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

36. ROLLOVER OF GAIN FROM SALE OF FARM ASSETS TO INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS (SEC. 12881 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, gain recognized upon the sale of farm assets is generally includible in the gross income of the taxpayer. There is no provision under present law for deferring the recognition of such gain by making contributions to an asset rollover account.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

In general

Under the Senate amendment, a taxpayer who has a qualified net farm gain from the sale of a qualified farm asset may, at the taxpayer's election, recognize the gain from such sale only to the extent the gain exceeds the contributions to one or more asset rollover accounts of the taxpayer for the taxable year in which such sale occurs.

Contributions to an asset rollover account

No deductions are permitted with respect to contributions to an asset rollover account. Contributions to an asset rollover account are subject to an annual limit and a lifetime limit. Under the annual limit, the total contributions that can be made to an asset rollover account in a taxable year cannot exceed 100 percent of the lesser of (1) the qualified net farm gain for the taxable year, or (2) an amount equal to the number of years the taxpayer is a qualified farmer times $10,000 ($20,000 for years the taxpayer files a joint return). The Secretary may reduce the 100 percent in the preceding sentence to a lower percentage to the extent necessary if the reduction in Federal receipts as a result of this provision exceeds the increases in Federal receipts resulting from the amendments made by section 12882 (disposition of stock in domestic corporations by 10-percent foreign shareholders) and section 12883 (limitation on treaty benefits) of the Balanced Budget Reconciliation Act of 1995 (as passed by the Senate). Qualified net farm gain is, for the taxable year, the lesser of (1) the net capital gain of the taxpayer, or (2) the net capital gain only taking into account gain in connection with a disposition of a qualified farm asset. Qualified farm asset means an asset used by a qualified farmer in the active conduct of the trade or business of farming. A qualified farmer is a taxpayer who (1) during the 5-year period ending on the date of the disposition of the qualified farm asset materially participated in the trade or business of farming, and (2) owned (or the taxpayer's spouse owned) 50 percent or more of such trade or business during such 5-year period. Under the lifetime limit on contributions to an asset rollover account, the aggregate amount for all taxable years that can be contributed to all asset rollover accounts by an individual cannot exceed $500,000 ($250,000 in the case of a separate return filed by a married individual), reduced by the amount by which the aggregate value of assets held in all individual retirement arrangements ("IRAs") by the individual exceeds $100,000. The lifetime limit is applied as of the close of the taxable year in which a contribution to an asset rollover account is made. To the extent contributions to an asset rollover account exceed the annual or lifetime limits, such excess contributions are subject to a 6-percent excise tax.

Definition and tax treatment of an asset rollover account

In general, an asset rollover account is treated in the same manner as an IRA. Consequently, earnings are not currently includible in income. Amounts in an asset rollover account are includible in income when withdrawn. In addition, the 10-percent additional tax on early distributions applies, unless the distribution is made after the individual attains age 59-½, dies, or becomes disabled, or the distribution is paid in the form of a life annuity. Amounts in an asset rollover account may be rolled over to another asset rollover account without income inclusion.

Reporting

Any individual who makes a contribution to an asset rollover account or receives a distribution from such account is required to include such information on the individual's Federal income tax return as the Secretary may prescribe. Such information is the same information required by the Secretary to be reported by individuals making nondeductible contributions to an IRA.

Effective date

The provision applies to sales and exchanges after the date of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

37. TAXATION OF CERTAIN STOCK GAINS OF FOREIGN PERSONS (SECS. 12882 AND 12883 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Disposition of stock in domestic corporations

Foreign persons generally are subject to a 30-percent U.S. tax on dividends received from a U.S. corporation. Foreign persons generally are not subject to U.S. tax on gain realized on the disposition of stock in a U.S. corporation (other than a U.S. real property holding corporation), unless the gain is effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business in the United States. Many U.S. income tax treaties contain provisions that preclude the imposition of U.S. tax on such gains realized by treaty-country residents.

Limitation on treaty benefits

The United States has entered into bilateral income tax treaties with many foreign countries. A function served by these treaties is to reduce the U.S. tax on U.S. source income earned by a resident of a treaty country. Tax treaty abuse (or "treaty shopping") occurs when a person who is not a resident of either country seeks certain benefits under the income tax treaty between the two countries. Newer treaties negotiated by the United States usually contain a "Limitation on Benefit" article that may deny treaty benefits to foreign persons that wish to "treaty-shop" the U.S. treaty network. However, not all of the U.S. income tax treaties now in force contain such an article.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Disposition of stock in domestic corporations

Under the Senate amendment, where a foreign person owns, or has owned at any time during the previous 5 years, 10 percent or more of the stock in a U.S. corporation, gain or loss from the disposition of the stock is subject to U.S. income tax at graduated rates. Constructive ownership rules apply in determining whether a foreign person is a 10-percent shareholder. In addition, certain ownership interests are treated as stock for purposes of this provision.

Certain nonrecognition provisions that would otherwise apply to dispositions of U.S. stock are suspended, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe regulations providing the extent to which nonrecognition provisions will apply for purposes of this provision. Special alternative minimum tax rules apply in the case of nonresident aliens who recognize net gains on dispositions of stock that are subject to this provision.

This tax generally is collected through withholding at the rate of 10 percent of the proceeds of the disposition giving rise to the liability. Exceptions apply in cases of dispositions of stock that is regularly traded on an established securities market. Amounts withheld in excess of the tax liability are refundable.

This provision does not override any current U.S. income tax treaty obligations. However, in certain cases where a treaty prevents the imposition of U.S. tax on stock gains of a qualified resident of a treaty country (as defined below), the provision treats as dividends gain resulting from any distribution in liquidation or redemption that would (but for the treaty) be subject to U.S. tax. Dividend treatment only applies to such gain to the extent of the earnings and profits of the distributing corporation which are attributable to the stock with respect to which the distribution is made.

Effective date.—The provision generally is effective for dispositions after December 31, 1995. The withholding requirements are applicable only to dispositions occurring 6 months or more after the date of enactment.

Limitation on treaty benefits

The Senate amendment imposes a qualified resident requirement as a prerequisite for the reduction of U.S. tax on a foreign entity under any treaty. For this purpose, a foreign entity that is a resident of a foreign country is a qualified resident of such country unless (1) 50 percent or more (by value) of the interests in such entity are owned (directly or indirectly) by individuals who are not residents of such country or citizens or residents of the United States, or (2) 50 percent or more of the entity's income is used (directly or indirectly) to meet liabilities to persons who are not residents of the foreign country or citizens or residents of the United States. Special rules apply in the case of entities that are publicly traded or that are wholly-owned by publicly-traded corporations. The Secretary of the Treasury may, in certain cases, treat a foreign entity as a qualified resident.

In addition, the Senate amendment provides that no person is entitled to benefits granted by the United States under a treaty with respect to any income that bears a significantly lower tax under the laws of the other treaty country than similar income arising from sources within such foreign country derived by residents of such foreign country.

Effective date.—The provision takes effect on January 1, 1996, and applies to any treaty whether entered into before, on, or after such date.

38. TREATMENT OF BAD DEBT DEDUCTIONS OF THRIFT INSTITUTIONS (H.R. 2494 AND SEC. 12884 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present Law and Background

Reserve method of accounting for bad debts of thrift institutions

Generally, a taxpayer engaged in a trade or business may deduct the amount of any debt that becomes wholly or partially worthless during the year (the "specific charge-off" method of sec. 166). Certain thrift institutions (building and loan associations, mutual savings banks, or cooperative banks) are allowed deductions for bad debts under rules more favorable than those granted to other taxpayers (and more favorable than the rules applicable to other financial institutions). Qualified thrift institutions may compute deductions for bad debts using either the specific charge-off method or the reserve method of section 593. To qualify for this reserve method, a thrift institution must meet an asset test, requiring that 60 percent of its assets consist of "qualifying assets" (generally cash, government obligations, and loans secured by residential real property). This percentage must be computed at the close of the taxable year, or at the option of the taxpayer, as the annual average of monthly, quarterly, or semiannual computations of similar percentages.

If a thrift institution uses the reserve method of accounting, it must establish and maintain a reserve for bad debts and charge actual losses against the reserve, and is allowed a deduction for annual additions to restore the reserve to its permitted balance. Under section 593, a thrift institution annually may elect to calculate its addition to its bad debt reserve under either (1) the "percentage of taxable income" method applicable only to thrift institutions, or (2) the "experience" method that also is available to small banks.

Under the "percentage of taxable income" method, a thrift institution generally is allowed a deduction for an addition to its bad debt reserve equal to 8 percent of its taxable income (determined without regard to this deduction and with additional adjustments). Under the experience method, a thrift institution generally is allowed a deduction for an addition to its bad debt reserve equal to the greater of: (1) an amount based on its actual average experience for losses in the current and five preceding taxable years, or (2) an amount necessary to restore the reserve to its balance as of the close of the base year. For taxable years beginning before 1988, the "base year" was the last taxable year before the most recent adoption of the experience method (i.e., generally, the last year the taxpayer was on the percentage of taxable income method). For taxable years beginning after 1987, the base year is the last taxable year beginning before 1988. Prior to 1988, computing bad debts under a "base year" rule allowed a thrift institution to claim a deduction for bad debts for an amount at least equal to the institution's actual losses that were incurred during the taxable year.

Bad debt methods of commercial banks

A small commercial bank (i.e., one with adjusted bases of assets of $500 million or less) may use the experience method or the specific charge-off method for purposes of computing its deduction for bad debts. A large commercial bank only may use the specific charge-off method of section 166. If a small bank becomes a large bank, it must recapture its existing bad debt reserve (i.e., include the amount of the reserve in income) through one of two elective methods. Under the 4-year recapture method, the bank generally includes 10 percent of the reserve in income in the first taxable year, 20 percent in the second year, 30 percent in the third year, and 40 percent in the fourth year. Under the cut-off method, the bank generally neither restores its bad debt reserve to income nor may it deduct losses relating to loans held by the bank as of the date of the required change in the method of accounting. Rather, the amount of such losses are charged against and reduce the existing bad debt reserve; any losses in excess of the reserve are deductible. Any reserve balance in excess of the balance of related loans is includible in income.

Recapture of bad debt reserves by thrift institutions

If a thrift institution becomes a commercial bank, or if the institution fails to satisfy the 60-percent qualified asset test, it is required to change its method of accounting for bad debts and, under proposed Treasury regulations,[84] is required to recapture its bad debt reserve. The percentage-of-taxable-income portion of the reserve generally is included in income ratably over a 6-taxable year period. The experience method portion of the reserve is not restored to income if the former thrift institution qualifies as a small bank. If the former thrift institution is treated as a large bank, the experience method portion of the reserve is restored to income ratably over a 6-taxable year period, or under the 4-year recapture method or the cut-off method described above.

In addition, a thrift institution may be subject to a form of reserve recapture even if the institution continues to qualify for the percentage of taxable income method. Specifically, if a thrift institution distributes to its shareholders an amount in excess of its post-1951 earnings and profits, such excess is deemed to be distributed from the institution's bad debt reserve and is restored to income. In the case of any distribution in redemption of stock or in partial or complete liquidation of an institution, the distribution is treated as first coming out of the bad debt reserves of the institution (sec. 593(e)).

Proposed banking legislation (H.R. 2491)

Treatment of thrift institutions under H.R. 2491

Title II (Chapter 2, subtitle B) of H.R. 2491, which passed the House of Representatives on October 26, 1995, would require savings and loan institutions to forego their Federal thrift charters and become either State-chartered depository institutions or Federally-chartered banks. Under proposed Treasury regulations, if a thrift institution becomes a bank, the institution would be required to recapture all or a portion of its bad debt reserve. As described in detail below, the conferees understand that such recapture would require the institution immediately to record, for financial accounting purposes, a current or deferred tax liability for the amount of bad debt recapture for which liabilities previously had not been recorded (generally, with respect to the pre-1988 reserves), regardless of when such recapture is taken into account for Federal income tax purposes. The conferees further understand that the recording of this liability generally would decrease the regulatory capital of the new bank.

Financial accounting treatment of tax reserves of bad debts of thrift institutions

In general, for financial accounting purposes, a corporation must record a deferred tax liability with respect to items that are deductible for tax purposes in a period earlier than they are expensed for book purposes. The deferred tax liability signifies that, although a corporation may be reducing its current tax expense because of the accelerated tax deduction, the corporation will become liable for tax in a future period when the timing item "reverses" (i.e., when the item is expensed for book purposes but for which the tax deduction had already been allowed). Under the applicable accounting standard (Accounting Principles Board Opinion 23), deferred tax liabilities generally were not required for pre-1988 tax deductions attributable to the bad debt reserve method of thrift institutions because the potential reversal of the bad debt reserve was indefinite (i.e., generally, a reversal only would occur by operation of sec. 593(e), a condition within the control of a thrift institution). However, the establishment of 1987 as a base year increased the likelihood of bad debt reserve reversals with respect to post-1987 additions to the reserve and the conferees understand that thrift institutions generally have recorded deferred tax liabilities for these additions under the current generally accepted accounting principles.[85]

[85] For taxable years beginning before 1988, the base year balance of a thrift institution was the reserve balance whenever the institution changed from one bad debt method to another (e.g., from the percentage of taxable income method to the experience method). How the establishment of 1987 as a permanent base year changed the nature of the bad debt reserves of thrift institutions between pre-1988 years and post-1987 years (which, in turn, contributed to the change in the financial accounting treatment of such reserves) can be illustrated by the following example:

Assume that a thrift institution ("T") always had used the percentage of taxable income ("PHI") method to deduct bad debts through 1986 when its reserve balance was $10,000. Further assume that in 1987, T: (1) has insufficient taxable income to use the PHI method, (2) has actual bad debt losses of $1,000, and (3) under the six-year average formula of the experience method, would be allowed a deduction of $900. Under these facts, T would be allowed a bad debt deduction of $1,000 (rather than $900) in 1987 because $1,000 is the amount necessary to restore the reserve to its base year (PHI) level. Specifically, in 1987, T would charge the year-end 1986 reserve of $10,000 for the $1,000 actual loss and then add (and deduct) $1,000 to the reserve so that the balance of the reserve at year end 1987 is once again $10,000. Thus, T's former PHI deductions, which gave rise to the $10,000 reserve balance, generally would not be restored to income (unless subject to sec. 593(e)).

Further assume that in 1988, T has sufficient taxable income to be allowed a PHI deduction of $1,500, increasing the balance of the reserve to $11,500 at year-end 1988. Further assume that in 1989, T: (1) again has insufficient taxable income to use the PHI method, (2) has actual bad debts of $2,500, and (3) under the six-year average formula of the experience method would be allowed a deduction of $900. Under these facts, T would be allowed a deduction of $1,000

No provision in H.R. 2491. However, on November 7, 1995, the Committee on Ways and Means reported, with an amendment, H.R. 2494 (the "Thrift Charter Conversion Act of 1995").[86] The provisions of H.R. 2494 are described below.

Repeal of section 593

The House bill repeals the section 593 reserve method of accounting for bad debts by thrift institutions, effective for taxable years beginning after 1995. Under the House bill, thrift institutions that qualify as small banks are allowed to utilize the experience method applicable to such institutions, while thrift institutions that are treated as large banks are required to use only the specific charge-off method.

Treatment of recapture of bad debt reserves

In general

A thrift institution required to change its method of computing reserves for bad debts will treat such change as a change in a method of accounting, initiated by the taxpayer, and having been made with the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury. Any section 481(a) adjustment required to be taken into account with respect to such change generally will be determined solely with respect to the "applicable excess reserves" of the taxpayer. The amount of applicable excess reserves shall be taken into account ratably over a 6-taxable year period, beginning with the first taxable year beginning after 1995, subject to the residential loan requirement described below. In the case of a thrift institution that becomes a "large bank" (as determined under sec. 585(c)(2)), the amount of the institution's applicable excess reserves will be the excess of (1) the balance of its reserves described in section 593(c)(1) (i.e., its supplemental reserve for losses on loans, its reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans, and its reserve for losses on nonqualifying loans) as of the close of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1996, over (2) the balance of such reserves as of the close of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1988 (i.e., the "pre-1988 reserves"). Similar rules are provided for "small banks" and for small banks that subsequently become large banks.

The balance of the pre-1988 reserves will continue to be subject to the provisions of present-law section 593(e) (requiring recapture in the case of certain excess distributions to, and redemptions of, shareholders).

Residential loan requirement

Under a special rule, if the taxpayer meets the "residential loan requirement" for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, the recapture of the applicable excess reserves otherwise

(i.e., the amount necessary to in the restore the reserve to its base year (year-end 1987) level). Specifically, T would charge the year-end 1988 reserve balance of $11,500 for the $2,500 actual loss and then add (and deduct) $1,000 to the reserve to restore the balance to the $10,000 base year amount. Thus, T's post-1987 PHI deduction of $1,500 is restored to income (i.e., T actually had losses of $2,500 in 1989, but only was allowed to deduct $1,000).

to be taken into account as a section 481(a) adjustment for such year will be suspended. A taxpayer generally meets the residential loan requirement if, for any taxable year, the principal amount of residential loans made by the taxpayer during the year is not less than its base amount. A taxpayer will be deemed to meet the residential loan requirement for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1997, if the taxpayer met the requirement for the two preceding years (determined without the application of this special, two-out-of-three rule). For the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, the "base amount" for a taxpayer generally means the average of the principal amounts of the residential loans made by the taxpayer during the six most recent taxable years beginning before January 1, 1996. For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1996, the base amount is indexed for inflation.

Treatment of special assessments

The House bill also provides for the deductibility of certain special assessments to be paid by thrift institutions to the Savings Association Insurance Fund ("SAIF") pursuant to a provision of Title II of H.R. 2491.

Effective date

The provision of H.R. 2494 relating to the deduction for bad debts by thrift institutions generally is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995. The provision of H.R. 2494 relating to the treatment of the special assessments to be paid to the SAIF is effective upon enactment.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a Sense of the Senate that, in order to further national banking policy and assist in the conversion of thrift charters to bank charters, Code section 593 (relating to reserves for losses on loans) should be repealed and appropriate relief should be granted for the pre-1988 portion of any bad debt reserves of a thrift institution.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement includes the following.

Repeal of section 593

The conference agreement repeals the section 593 reserve method of accounting for bad debts by thrift institutions, effective for taxable years beginning after 1995. Thrift institutions that qualify as small banks are allowed to utilize the experience method applicable to such institutions, while thrift institutions that are treated as large banks are required to use only the specific charge-off method. Thus, the percentage of taxable income method of accounting for bad debts is no longer available for any financial institution. The conference agreement also repeals the following present-law provisions that only apply to thrift institutions to which section 593 applies: (1) the denial of a portion of certain tax credits to a thrift institution (sec. 50(d)(1)); (2) the special rules with respect to the foreclosure of property securing loans of a thrift institution (sec. 595); (3) the reduction in the dividends received reduction of a thrift institution (sec. 596); and (4) the ability of a thrift institution to use a net operating loss to offset its income from a residual interest in a REMIC.

In general

A thrift institution required to change its method of computing reserves for bad debts will treat such change as a change in a method of accounting, initiated by the taxpayer, and having been made with the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury.[87] Any section 481(a) adjustment required to be taken into account with respect to such change generally will be determined solely with respect to the "applicable excess reserves" of the taxpayer. The amount of applicable excess reserves shall be taken into account ratably over a 6-taxable year period, beginning with the first taxable year beginning after 1995, subject to the residential loan requirement described below. In the case of a thrift institution that becomes a "large bank" (as determined under sec. 585(c)(2)), the amount of the institution's applicable excess reserves generally is the excess of (1) the balance of its reserves described in section 593(c)(1) (i.e., its supplemental reserve for losses on loans, its reserve for losses on qualifying real property loans, and its reserve for losses on nonqualifying loans) as of the close of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1996, over (2) the balance of such reserves as of the close of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1988 (i.e., the "pre-1988 reserves").[88] Thus, a thrift institution that is treated as a large bank generally is required to recapture its post-1987 additions to its bad debt reserves, whether such additions are made pursuant to the percentage of taxable income method or the experience method. The timing of this recapture may be delayed for a two-year period to the extent the residential loan requirement described below applies.

In the case of a thrift institution that becomes a "small bank" (as determined under sec. 585(c)(2)), the amount of the institution's applicable excess reserves will be the excess of (1) the balance of its reserves described in section 593(c)(1) as of the close of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1996, over (2) the greater of the balance of: (a) its pre-1988 reserves or (b) what the institution's reserves would have been at the close of its last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1996, had the institution always used the experience method described in section 585(b)(2)(A) (i.e., the six-year average method). For purposes of the future application of section 585, the beginning balance of the small bank's reserve for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, will be the greater of the two amounts described in (2) in the preceding sentence, and the balance of the reserve at the close of the base year (for purposes of sec. 585(b)(2)(B)) will be the amount of its pre-1988 reserves. The residential loan requirement described below also applies to small banks. If such small bank later becomes a large bank, any section 481(a) adjustment amount required to be taken into account under section 585(c)(3) will not include any portion of the bank's pre-1988 reserve. Similarly, if the bank elects the cutoff method to implement its conversion to large bank status, the amount of the reserve against which the bank charges its actual losses will not include any portion of the bank's pre-1988 reserve and the amount by which the pre-1988 reserve exceeds actual losses will not be included in gross income.

[87] A thrift institution that uses a reserve method described in sec. 593 will be deemed to have changed its method of computing reserves for bad debts even though such institution will be allowed to use the reserve method of section 585. Similarly, a large thrift institution will be deemed to have changed its method of computing reserves for bad debts even though such institution used the experience-method portion of sec. 593 in lieu of the percentage-of-taxable-income method of sec. 593.

The balance of the pre-1988 reserves is subject to the provisions of present-law section 593(e) (requiring recapture in the case of certain excess distributions to, and redemptions of, shareholders). Thus, section 593(e) will continue to apply to an institution regardless of whether the institution becomes a bank or remains a thrift institution. In addition, the balance of the pre-1988 reserve will be treated as a tax attribute to which section 381 applies. Treasury regulations are expected to provide rules for the continued application of section 593(e) in the case of mergers, acquisitions, spin-offs, and other reorganizations of thrift and other institutions. The conferees believe that any such regulations should provide that if the stock of an institution with a pre-1988 reserve is acquired by another depository institution, the pre-1988 reserve will not be restored to income by reason of the acquisition. Similarly, if an institution with a pre-1988 reserve is merged or liquidated tax-free into a bank, the pre-1988 reserve should not be restored to income by reason of the merger or liquidation.[89] Rather, the bank will inherit the pre-1988 reserve and the post-1951 earnings and profits of the former thrift institution and section 593(e) will apply to the bank as if it were a thrift institution. That is, the pre-1988 reserve will be restored into income in the case of any distribution in redemption of the stock of the bank or in partial or complete liquidation of the bank following the merger or liquidation. In the case of any other distribution, the pre-1988 reserve will not be restored to income unless the distribution is in excess of the sum of the post-1951 earnings and profits inherited from the thrift institution and the post-1913 earnings and profits of the acquiring bank.[90] Treasury regulations should address the case where the shareholders of an institution with a pre-1988 reserve are "cashed out" in a taxable merger of the institution and a bank. Such regulations may provide that the pre-1988 reserve may be restored to income if such redemption represents a concealed distribution from the former thrift institution. For example, cash received by former thrift shareholders pursuant to a taxable reverse merger may represent a concealed distribution if, immediately preceding the merger, the acquiring bank had no available resources to distribute and its existing debt structure, indenture restrictions, financial condition, or regulatory capital requirements precluded it from borrowing money for purposes of making the cash payment to the former thrift shareholders. Treasury regulations also should address the treatment of boot received in a tax-free reorganization. No inference is intended as to the application of section 593(e) to these and similar transactions under present law.

[89] The issue of whether section 593(e) applies in cases where a thrift institution is merged into a bank generally does not arise under present law because such merger results in a charter change and, under proposed Treasury regulations, requires full bad debt reserve recapture.

[90] If the acquiring bank is a former thrift itself and the pre-1988 reserves of neither institution are restored to income pursuant to the merger, the conferees expect that the pre-1988 reserves and the post-1951 earnings and profits of the two institutions will be combined for purposes of the continued application of sec. 593(e) with respect to the combined institution.

Further, if a taxpayer no longer qualifies as a bank (as defined by sec. 581), the balance of the taxpayer's pre-1988 reserve is restored to income ratably over a 6-year period, beginning in the taxable year the taxpayer no longer qualifies as a bank.

Residential loan requirement

Under a special rule, if the taxpayer meets the "residential loan requirement" for a taxable year, the recapture of the applicable excess reserves otherwise required to be taken into account as a section 481(a) adjustment for such year will be suspended. A taxpayer meets the residential loan requirement if, for the taxable year, the principal amount of residential loans made by the taxpayer during the year is not less than its base amount. The residential loan requirement is applicable only for taxable years that begin after December 31, 1995, and before January 1, 1998, and must be applied separately with respect to each such year. Thus, all taxpayers are required to recapture their applicable excess reserves within six, seven, or eight years after the effective date of the provision.

The "base amount" of a taxpayer means the average of the principal amounts of the residential loans made by the taxpayer during the six most recent taxable years beginning before January 1, 1996. At the election of the taxpayer, the base amount may be computed by disregarding the taxable years within that 6-year period in which the principal amounts of loans made during such years were highest and lowest. This election must be made for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, and applies to the succeeding taxable year unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate.

For purposes of the residential loan requirement, a loan will be deemed to be "made" by a financial institution to the extent the institution is, in fact, the principal source of the loan financing. Thus, any loan only can be "made" once. The conferees expect that loans "made" by a financial institution may include, but are not limited to, loans (1) originated directly by the institution through its place of business or its employees, (2) closed in the name of the institution, (3) originated by a broker that acts as an agent for the institution, and (4) originated by another person (other than a financial institution) and that are acquired by the institution pursuant to a preexisting, enforceable agreement to acquire such loans. In addition, Treasury regulations also may provide that loans "made" by a financial institution may include loans originated by another person (other than a financial institution) acquired by the institution soon after origination if such acquisition is pursuant to a customary practice of acquiring such loans from such person. A loan acquired by a financial institution from another financial institution generally will be considered to be made by the transferor rather than the transferee of the loan; however, such loan may be completely disregarded if a principal purpose of the transfer was to allow the transferor to meet the residential loan requirement. A loan may be considered to be made by a financial institution even if such institution has an arrangement to transfer such loan to the Federal National Mortgage Association or the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation.

For purposes of the residential loan requirement, a "residential loan" is a loan described in section 7701(a)(19)(C)(v) (generally, loans secured by residential real and church property and certain mobile homes),[91] but only to the extent the loan is made to the owner of the property to acquire, construct, or improve the property. Thus, mortgage refinancings and home equity loans are not considered to be residential loans, except to the extent the proceeds of the loan are used to acquire, construct, or improve qualified residential real property. The conferees understand that pursuant to the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, financial institutions are required to disclose the purpose for which loans are made. The conferees further understand that for purposes of this disclosure, institutions are required to classify loans as home purchase loans, home improvement loans, refinancings, and multifamily dwelling loans (whether for purchase, improvement or refinancing of such property). The conferees expect that taxpayers (and the Secretary of the Treasury in promulgating guidance) may take such reporting into account, and make such adjustments as are appropriate,[92] in determining: (1) whether or not a loan qualifies as a "residential loan" and (2) whether the institution "made" the loan. A taxpayer must use consistent standards for determining whether loans qualify as residential loans made by the institution both for purposes of determining its base amount and for purposes of determining whether it met the residential loan requirement for a taxable year.

The residential loan requirement is determined on a controlled group basis. Thus, for example, if a controlled group consists of two thrift institutions with applicable excess reserves that are wholly-owned by a bank, the residential loan requirement will be met (or not met) with respect to both thrift institutions by comparing the principal amount of the residential loans made by all three members of the group during the taxable year to the group's base amount. The group's base amount will be the average principal amount of residential loans made by all three members of the group during the base period. The election to disregard the high and low taxable years during the 6-year base period also would be applied on a controlled group basis (i.e., generally by treating the members of the group as one taxpayer so that all members of the group must join in the election, and the same corresponding years of each member would be so disregarded).

[91] For this purpose, as under present law, if a multifamily structure securing a loan is used in part for nonresidential purposes, the entire loan will be deemed a residential real property loan if the planned residential use exceeds 80 percent of the property's planned use (determined as of the time the loan is made). In additions, loans made to finance the acquisition or development of land will be deemed to be loans secured by an interest in residential real property if, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, there is a reasonable assurance that the property will become residential real property within a period of three years from the date of acquisition of the land.

[92] For example, adjustments will be required with respect to the reporting of multifamily dwellings in order to distinguish home purchase, home improvement, and refinancing loans.

The balance of a taxpayer's applicable excess reserve is treated as a tax attribute to which section 381 applies. Thus, if an institution with an applicable excess reserve is acquired in a tax-free reorganization, the balance of such reserve will not be immediately restored to income but will continue to be subject to the residential loan requirement in the hands of the acquirer. Treasury regulations may provide rules for the application of the residential loan requirement in the case of mergers, acquisitions, and other reorganizations of thrift and other institutions. The conferees expect that if a financial institution joins or merges into (or leaves) a group of financial institutions, the base amount of the acquiring (or remaining) group will be appropriately adjusted to reflect the base amount of the acquired (or departing) institution for purposes of determining whether the group meets the residential loan requirement for the year of the acquisition (or departure) and subsequent years. Similarly, if a controlled group of institutions had made an election to disregard its high and low years in computing its base amount, it is anticipated that such election shall be binding on any institution that subsequently joins the group and the election shall be applied to the new member by disregarding the high and low years of the new member even if such years do not correspond to the years applicable to the other members of the group.

Treatment of conversions to credit unions

The conference agreement provides that if a thrift institution to which the repeal of section 593 applies becomes a credit union (as described in sec. 501(c)(14)(A)), the credit union will be treated as a institution that is not a bank and any section 481(a) adjustment required to be included in gross income will be treated as derived from an unrelated trade or business. Thus, if a thrift institution becomes a credit union in its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, the entire balance of the institution's bad debt reserve will be included in income, and subject to tax, over a 6-year period beginning with such taxable year. No inference is intended as to the Federal income tax treatment of any other aspect of the conversion of a financial institution to a credit union.

Treatment of special assessments

The conferees did not adopt the provision of H.R. 2494 that provided for the deductibility of certain special assessments to be paid to the SAIF. The conferees understand that it is the view of the Department of the Treasury that such payments would be deductible under present law.[93] The conferees understand that the Treasury analysis is based, in part, upon the fact that the proposed special assessments are designed to provide SAIF coverage for 1996. As such, the conferees believe that a special statutory provision providing deductibility is unnecessary and the special assessments should give rise to deductions to which section 172(f) does not apply.[94]

Effective date

The repeal of section 593 is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995. The repeal of section 595 is effective for property acquired in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

39. LIMITATION ON STATE INCOME TAXATION OF CERTAIN PENSION INCOME (H.R. 394 AND SEC. 12944 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present Law

Certain State laws provide that some or all retirement income is included in income for State income tax purposes if the income was earned within the State, even though the individual resides outside the State when the retirement income is actually received. Some States achieve this result through general rules that tax income earned within the State, whereas others have explicit provisions regarding retirement income.

House bill

No provision in H.R.2491. However, on October 31, 1995, the House Committee on the Judiciary ordered favorably H.R. 394, which would amend title 4 of the United States Code (entitled "Flag and Seal, Seat of Government, and the States"), to prohibit any State, including any political subdivision of a State, the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States, from imposing income tax on any retirement income of any individual who is not a resident or domiciliary of the State. For this purpose, retirement income would include any income from a qualified retirement or annuity plan, a simplified employee pension, a tax-sheltered annuity plan, an eligible deferred compensation plan of a tax-exempt or State and local government, an individual retirement arrangement, a governmental plan, a trust created before June 25, 1959, and that is part of a plan funded only by employee contributions, and certain retired or retainer pay of a member or former member of the uniformed services. The term retirement income also would include income from a nonqualified deferred compensation plan, provided such income is part of a series of substantially equal periodic payments made over (1) the life or life expectancy of the recipient (or the joint lives or life expectancies of the recipient and the recipient's beneficiary), or (2) a period not less than 10 years. The preceding sentence would not apply to a plan, program, or arrangement which provides benefits in excess of certain limitations contained in the Code on benefits provided under qualified retirement plans. The provision would not apply to any retirement income received by an individual who renounces his or her United States citizenship for reasons of avoiding Federal and State income taxation (as determined by the Attorney General).

[94] Under present law, net operating losses can be carried back three years. Section 172(f) allows "specified liability losses' to be carried back ten years. Specified liability losses include amounts allowable as deductions with respect to product liabilities or with respect to certain acts (or failures to act) that occurred more than three years ago.

The Attorney General would publish quarterly a list of such individuals in the Federal Register. The provision would have no effect on the application of the provision in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA") that generally preempts State laws.

Effective date.—H.R. 394 would be effective with respect to amounts received after December 31, 1994.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment amends title 4 of the United States Code (entitled "Flag and Seal, Seat of Government, and the States"), to prohibit any State, including any political subdivision of a State, the District of Columbia, and the possessions of the United States, from imposing income tax on any retirement income of any individual who is not a resident or domiciliary of the State. For this purpose, retirement income includes any income from a qualified retirement or annuity plan, a simplified employee pension, a tax- sheltered annuity plan, an eligible deferred compensation plan of a tax-exempt or State and local government, an individual retirement arrangement, a governmental plan, a trust created before June 25, 1959, and that is part of a plan funded only by employee contributions, and certain retired or retainer pay of a member or former member of the uniformed services. The term retirement income also includes income from a nonqualified deferred compensation plan, provided such income is part of a series of substantially equal periodic payments made over (1) the life or life expectancy of the recipient (or the joint lives or life expectancies of the recipient and the recipient's beneficiary), or (2) a period not less than 10 years. The provision has no effect on the application of the provision in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA") that generally preempts State laws.

Effective date.—The provision applies to amounts received after December 31, 1994.

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

40. COAL INDUSTRY RETIREE HEALTH SECURITY (SEC. 13901 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The financing of retiree health benefits previously provided by the United Mine Workers of America ("UMWA") 1950 and 1974 Benefit Funds was substantially revised by the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (H.R. 776, P.L. 102-486), enacted October 24, 1992. The relevant provisions, contained in the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 (the "Coal Act"), created two new UMWA retiree health benefit funds and completely changed the financing mechanism. The two funds, known as the UMWA Combined Benefit Fund (the "Combined Fund") and the UMWA 1992 Benefit Plan, service beneficiaries who retired on or before September 30, 1994. The Combined Fund provides benefits to coal miners (and their beneficiaries) who retired on or before July 20, 1992, and the 1992

UMWA Benefit Plan provides benefits to coal miners (and their beneficiaries) who retired between July 21, 1992, and September 30, 1994, and (1) would have been eligible for benefits under the Combined Fund had they retired earlier, or (2) whose last employer does not provide the benefits promised under a 1978 or later collective bargaining agreement. No provision was made for employees who retired or will retire after September 30, 1994. Future retirees will remain dependent on the provisions of future collective bargaining agreements.

Under the Coal Act, which supersedes the retiree health benefits financing provisions of the 1988 National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement (''NBCWA''), a company is charged an insurance premium based on the number of beneficiaries assigned to the company in its role as the retiree's "last signatory employer." Under what are referred to as the "reachback" provisions of the Coal Act, companies responsible for paying premiums include any company that had signed any NBCWA since 1946 or any related company as defined under the Act. To cover the costs associated with beneficiaries who cannot be assigned, up to $70 million per year is transferred into the Combined Fund. The first three transfers came from the surplus in the UMWA 1950 Pension Plan. Subsequent transfers will be made from the interest earnings of the Federal Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund. If costs for unassigned beneficiaries exceed the annual transfer, they can be allocated to the companies in proportion to their share of assigned beneficiaries. If, for any plan year, there is a shortfall in the Combined Fund, the insurance premiums payable by companies for the following plan year are proportionally increased.

The per beneficiary insurance premium is calculated each year by the Commissioner of the Social Security Administration, and is based on a base insurance premium increased each year for medical inflation. The base insurance premium is equal to the payments from the 1950 UMWA and 1974 UMWA Benefit Plans for health benefits (including administrative costs) for the plan year beginning July 1, 1991, divided by the number of individuals covered by such plans. The base insurance premium was determined initially by the Secretary of Health and Human Services to be equal to $2,116.67 per beneficiary. There has been some dispute regarding the initial determination of the base insurance premium, and on June 2, 1995, a United States District Court in Alabama granted summary judgment on behalf of eight companies holding that the Secretary of Health and Human Services misapplied the provisions of the Coal Act in initially determining the base insurance premium.[95] This decision is currently on appeal.

Under present law, the Coal Act does not require the trustees of the Combined Fund to disclose any information pertaining to the financial solvency and operational status of the Combined Fund to companies required to pay insurance premiums to the Combined Fund.

[95] National Coal Association v. Shalala (No. CV94–H–780–S, Slip opinion (N.D. Ala. June 2, 1995). As a result of this decision, the Social Security Administration, which is responsible for calculating the annual insurance premium, set the annual insurance premium for the 1996 Combined Fund year (beginning October 1, 1995) at $2,200.53 per beneficiary. According to the Social Security Administration, if the decision is overturned, the per beneficiary insurance premium would rise to $2,454.05.

House bill

The House bill exempts from the Coal Act's provisions companies that did not sign the 1988 NBCWA (or an agreement (other than the National Coal Mine Construction Agreement and the Coal Haulers' Agreement) containing pension and health care contribution and benefit provisions identical to the 1988 NBCWA) and companies who made withdrawal liability payments under the terms of the 1988 NBCWA. Such companies are no longer obligated to pay insurance premiums to the Combined Fund or the 1992 UMWA Benefit Plan. Beneficiaries allocated to these companies are reallocated to the unassigned pool. To the extent the insurance premiums associated with these unassigned beneficiaries are not paid from amounts transferred from the Federal Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund, the insurance premiums will be allocated to the companies that signed the 1988 NBCWA (or an agreement (other than the National Coal Mine Construction Agreement and the Coal Haulers' Agreement) containing pension and health care contribution and benefit provisions identical to the 1988 NBCWA) in proportion to their share of assigned beneficiaries. As under present law, if, for any plan year, there is a shortfall in the Combined Fund, the insurance premiums payable by companies for the following plan year are proportionally increased.

The House bill also provides that the trustees of the Combined Fund must provide to any company required to pay insurance premiums to the Combined Fund, within 30 days of a written request, information regarding the financial and operational status of the Combined Fund.

Effective date.—The provision is effective with respect to plan years beginning after September 30, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

41. MODIFICATION OF LUXURY EXCISE TAX ON AUTOMOBILES

Present law

Present law imposes a 10-percent excise tax on that amount of an automobile's sales price in excess of $32,000. The $32,000 threshold is indexed for inflation. The tax is scheduled to expire after December 31, 1999.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement extends the luxury excise tax on automobiles through December 31, 2002, and reduces the rate of tax by one percentage point per year beginning in 1996. Thus, the rate of tax for 1996 is nine percent; for 1997, eight percent; for 1998, seven percent; for 1999, six percent; for 2000, five percent; for 2001, four percent; and for 2002, three percent. The conference agreement provides that the luxury tax on automobiles expires after December 31, 2002.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on January 1, 1996.

X. Technical Corrections Provisions

A. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO THE REVENUE RECONCILIATION ACT OF 1990 (SEC. 6602 OF H.R. 1215)

House bill

1. Application of the 2.5-cents-per-gallon tax on fuel used in rail transportation to States and local governments (sec. 6602(b)(2))

The House bill clarifies that the 2.5-cents-per-gallon tax on fuel used in rail transportation does not apply to such uses by States and local governments.

2. Small winery production credit and bonding requirements (secs. 6602(b)(5), (6), and (7))

The House bill clarifies that wine produced by eligible small wineries may be transferred without payment of tax to bonded warehouses that become liable for payment of the wine excise tax without losing credit eligibility.

3. Deposits of Railroad Retirement Tax Act taxes (sec. 6602(c)(3))

The House bill conforms the Internal Revenue Code to the provision in the Railroad Retirement Solvency Act of 1993 that applies the deposit rules for income taxes withheld from employees' wages and FICA taxes to Railroad Retirement Tax Act taxes.

4. Treatment of salvage and subrogation of property and casualty insurance companies (sec. 6602(c)(4))

The House bill makes adjustments to the calculation of a property and casualty insurance company's earnings and profits, so as to equalize the treatment of companies that did, and those that did not, take into account estimated salvage and subrogation recoverable in determining losses incurred prior to 1990.

5. Information with respect to certain foreign-owned or foreign corporations: Suspension of statute of limitations during certain judicial proceedings (sec. 6602(c)(5))

The House bill modifies the provisions in sections 6038A and 6038C that suspend the statute of limitations to clarify that the suspension applies to any taxable year the determination of the amount of tax imposed for which is affected by the transaction or item to which the summons relates.

6. Rate of interest for large corporate underpayments (secs. 6602(c)(6) and (7))

The House bill provides that an IRS notice that is later withdrawn because it was issued in error does not trigger the higher rate of interest applicable to certain corporate underpayments.

7. Research credit provision: Effective date for repeal of special proration rule (sec. 6602(d)(1))

The bill repeals for all taxable years ending after December 31, 1989, the special proration rule for certain qualified research provided for by the 1989 Act.

8. Energy tax provision: Alternative minimum tax adjustment based on energy preferences (secs. 6602(e)(1) and (4))

The House bill clarifies that the amount of alternative tax net operating loss that is utilized in any taxable year is to be appropriately adjusted to take into account the amount of special energy deduction claimed for that year.

The House bill also provides that the ACE adjustment for taxable years beginning in 1991 and 1992 is to be computed without regard to the special energy deduction.

9. Estate tax freezes (sec. 6602(f))

Chapter 14 of the Code contains rules that supersede the willing buyer, willing seller standard for valuation of preferred interest in corporations and partnerships, property held in trust, and term interests in property.

The House bill provides that an applicable retained interest conferring a distribution right to qualified payments with respect to which there is no liquidation, put, call, or conversion right is valued without regard to section 2701. The House bill also provides that the retention of such right gives rise to potential inclusion in the transfer tax base.

The House bill modifies the definition of junior equity interest by granting regulatory authority to treat a partnership interest with rights that are junior with respect to either income or capital as a junior equity interest. The House bill also modifies the definition of distribution right by replacing the junior equity interest exception with an exception for a right under an interest that is junior to the rights of the transferred interest.

The House bill modifies the rules for electing into or out of qualified payment treatment. A dividend payable on a periodic basis and at a fixed rate under a cumulative preferred stock held by the transferor is treated as a qualified payment unless the transferor elects otherwise. If held by an applicable family member, such stock is not treated as a qualified payment unless the holder so elects. In addition, a transferor or applicable family member holding any other distribution right may treat such right as a qualified payment to be paid in the amounts and at the times specified in the election.

The House bill grants the Treasury Department regulatory authority to make subsequent transfer tax adjustments to reflect the inclusion of unpaid amounts with respect to a qualified payment. The House bill treats a transfer to a spouse falling under the annual exclusion the same as a transfer qualifying for the marital deduction. The bill also clarifies that the inclusion continues to apply if an applicable family member transfers a right to qualified payments to the transferor. Under the House bill, the election to treat a distribution as giving rise to an inclusion results in an inclusion only with respect to the payment for which the election is made.

The House bill conforms section 2702 to existing regulatory terminology by substituting the term "incomplete gift" for "incomplete transfer." In addition, the House bill limits the exception for incomplete gifts to instances in which the entire gift is incomplete. The Treasury Department is granted regulatory authority, however, to create additional exceptions not inconsistent with the purposes of the section.

10. Conforming amendments to the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine (secs. 6602(g)(1) and (2))

The House bill makes three conforming changes to the Code with respect to the repeal of the General Utilities doctrine. Two of the changes affect section 1248: the first includes a reference to section 355(c)(1) and the second clarifies that, with respect to any transaction in which a U.S. person is treated as realizing gain from the sale or exchange of stock of a controlled foreign corporation, the U.S. person shall be treated as having sold or exchanged the stock for purposes of applying section 1248. The third change repeals section 897(f) as deadwood.

11. Prohibited transaction rules (sec. 6602(g)(3))

The House bill conforms the statutory language to legislative intent by providing that transactions that are exempt from the prohibited transaction rules of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA") by reason of ERISA section 408(b)(12) are also exempt from the prohibited transaction rules of the Code.

12. Effective date of LIFO adjustment for purposes of computing adjusted current earnings (sec. 6602(g)(4))

The House bill clarifies that the calculation of the LIFO adjustment of the adjusted current earnings component of the corporate alternative minimum tax would be effective with respect to adjustments occurring in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1989.

13. Low-income housing tax credit (sec. 6602(g)(5))

The House bill repeals a 1990 technical correction regarding treatment of low-income housing buildings financed with tax-exempt bonds. The House bill provides, however, that pre-1989 Act law will apply to a bond-financed building if the owner of the building establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury reasonable reliance upon the 1990 technical correction.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provisions.

B. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO THE REVENUE RECONCILIATION ACT OF 1993 (SEC. 6603 OF H.R. 1215)

House bill

1. Treatment of full-time students under the low-income housing credit (sec. 6603(b))

The House bill provides that the full-time student provision is effective on the date of enactment of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1993 ("1993 Act").

2. Indexation of threshold applicable to excise tax on luxury automobiles (sec. 6603(c))

The House bill corrects the application of the indexing adjustment applicable to the threshold above which the excise tax on luxury automobiles is to apply so that the adjustment calculated for a given calendar year applies for that calendar year rather than in the subsequent calendar year. The House bill is effective on the date of enactment of this act.

3. Indexation of the limitation based on modified adjusted gross income for income from United States savings bonds used to pay higher education tuition and fees (sec. 6603(d))

The House bill corrects the indexing of the $60,000 ($40,000 for taxpayers filing as single) threshold to provide that the thresholds be indexed for inflation after 1989.

4. Reporting and notification requirements for lobbying and political expenditures of tax-exempt organizations (sec. 6603(g))

Tax-exempt organizations that incur political expenditures are subject to tax under section 527(f). Section 6033(e) requires tax-exempt organizations (other than charities) to (1) report on their annual information returns both the total amount of their lobbying and political expenditures, and the total amount of dues payments allocable to such expenditures, and (2) provide notice to their members of the portion of dues allocable to lobbying and political expenditures (so that such amounts are not deductible to members), or the organization may elect to pay a proxy tax on its lobbying and political expenditures, up to the amount of its dues receipts. The House bill amends section 6033(e) to clarify that any political expenditures on which tax is paid pursuant to section 527(f) are not subject to the reporting and notification requirements of section 6033(e). In addition, the House bill clarifies that the reporting and notification requirements of section 6033(e) apply to organizations exempt from tax under section 501(a), other than charities described in section 501(c)(3).

5. Estimated tax rules for certain tax-exempt organizations (sec. 6603(h))

The House bill clarifies that the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1993 did not change the method by which a tax-exempt organization annualizes its current year tax liability for purposes of avoiding an underpayment of estimated tax.

6. Current taxation of certain earnings of controlled foreign corporations—application of foreign tax credit limitation (sec. 6603(I)(l))

The House bill clarifies that a U.S. shareholder's inclusion of a controlled foreign corporation's earnings invested in excess passive assets is treated like a dividend for purposes of the foreign tax credit limitation.

7. Current taxation of certain earnings of controlled foreign corporations—measurement of accumulated earnings (sec. 6603(I)(2))

The House bill clarifies that the accumulated earnings and profits of a controlled foreign corporation taken into account for purposes of determining the foreign corporation's earnings invested in excess passive assets do not include any deficit in accumulated earnings and profits, and do not include current earnings (which are taken into account separately).

8. Current taxation of certain earnings of controlled foreign corporations—aggregation and look-through rules (sec. 6603(I)(3))

The House bill clarifies that, within the regulatory authority provided to the Secretary of the Treasury under the 1993 Act, regulations are specifically authorized to coordinate the CFC group treatment and look-through treatment applicable for purposes of determining a foreign corporation's earnings invested in excess passive assets. Pending the promulgation of guidance by the Secretary, it is intended that taxpayers be permitted to coordinate such treatment using any reasonable method for taking assets into account only once, so long as the method is consistently applied to all controlled foreign corporations (whether or not members of any CFC group) in all taxable years.

9. Treatment of certain leased assets for PFIC purposes (sec. 6603(I)(5))

The House bill clarifies that, in the case of any item of property leased by a foreign corporation and treated as an asset actually owned by the foreign corporation in measuring the assets of the foreign corporation for purposes of the PFIC asset test, the amount taken into account with respect to the leased property is the amount determined under the 1993 Act's special measurement rule, which is based on the unamortized portion of the present value of the payments under the lease for the use of the property.

10. Amortization of goodwill and certain other intangibles (sec. 6603(k))

The House bill clarifies the antichurning rules of the 1993 Act amortization of intangibles provision. It is clarified that when a taxpayer and its related parties have made an election to apply the 1993 Act to all acquisitions after July 25, 1991, the antichurning rules will not apply when property acquired from an unrelated party after July 25, 1991 (and not subject to the antichurning rules in the hands of the acquirer) is transferred to a taxpayer related to the acquirer after the date of enactment of the 1993 Act.

11. Empowerment zones and eligibility of small farms for tax incentives (sec. 6603(l))

The bill provides that the $500,000 asset test for determining whether a farm is eligible for section 179 expensing in an empowerment zone and expanded tax-exempt financing benefits in an empowerment zone or enterprise community is applied based on assets of the farm at the end of the current taxable year.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except with respect to the indexation of the threshold applicable to the excise tax on luxury automobiles (item B.2., above). With respect to the indexation of the threshold applicable to the excise tax on luxury automobiles, the conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. OTHER TAX TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS (SEC. 6604 OF H.R. 1215)

1. Hedge bonds (sec. 6604(b))

The House bill clarifies that the 30-day exception for temporary investments of investment earnings applies to amounts (i.e., principal and earnings thereon) temporarily invested during the 30-day period immediately preceding redemption of the bonds as well as such periods preceding reinvestment of the proceeds.

2. Withholding on distributions from U.S. real property holding companies (sec. 6604(c))

The House bill clarifies that withholding requirements under section 1445 apply to any section 301 distribution to a foreign person by a domestic corporation that is or was a U.S. real property holding corporation which distribution is not made out of the corporation's earnings and profits and is therefore treated as an amount received in a sale or exchange of a U.S. real property interest. The provision is effective for distributions made after the date of enactment of the bill.

3. Treatment of credits attributable to working interests in oil and gas properties (sec. 6604(d))

A working interest in an oil and gas property which does not limit the liability of the taxpayer is not a "passive activity" for purposes of the passive loss rules (sec. 469). However, if any loss from an activity is treated as not being a passive loss by reason of being from a working interest, any net income from the activity in subsequent years is not treated as income from a passive activity, notwithstanding that the activity may otherwise have become passive with respect to the taxpayer.

The House bill clarifies that any credit attributable to a working interest in an oil and gas property, in a taxable year in which the activity is no longer treated as not being passive activity, will not be treated as attributable to a passive activity to the extent of any tax allocable to the net income from the activity for the taxable year.

4. Clarification of passive loss disposition rule (sec. 6604(e))

The House bill clarifies the rule relating to the computation of the overall loss allowed upon the disposition of a passive activity under the passive loss rules.

5. Estate tax unified credit allowed nonresident aliens under treaty (sec. 6604(f)(1))

The House bill clarifies that in determining the pro rata unified credit required by treaty, property exempted by the treaty from U.S. estate tax is not treated as situated in the United States. The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

6. Limitation on deduction for certain interest paid by corporation to related person (sec. 6604(f)(2))

The House bill clarifies that, under the earnings stripping provision, excess interest carried forward from a year in which the debt-equity ratio threshold is exceeded may be deducted in a subsequent year in which that threshold is not exceeded, but only to the extent that such interest would not otherwise be treated as excess interest expense in the carryforward year. The provision is effective as if included in the amendments made by section 7210(a) of the 1989 Act.

7. Branch-level interest tax (sec. 6604(f)(3))

The House bill clarifies that where an interest expense of a foreign corporation is allocable to U.S. effectively connected income, but that interest expense would not have been fully deductible for tax purposes under another Code provision had it been paid by a U.S. corporation, such interest is nonetheless treated for branch level interest tax purposes like a payment by a U.S. corporation to a foreign corporate parent. Similarly, with regard to the Treasury's regulatory authority to treat an interest payment by a foreign corporation's U.S. branch as though not paid by a U.S. person for source and withholding purposes, the bill clarifies that the authority extends to interest payments in excess of those reasonably expected to be allocable to U.S. effectively connected income of the foreign corporation. These provisions are effective as if they were made by the Tax Reform Act of 1986 ("1986 Act").

8. Determination of source in case of sales of inventory property (sec. 6604(f)(4))

The House bill clarifies that, to the extent that the Secretary of the Treasury had general regulatory authority to provide rules for the sourcing of income from the sales of personal property prior to the 1986 Act, the Secretary of the Treasury retains that authority under present law with respect to inventory property. The provision is effective as if it were included in the 1986 Act.

9. Repeal of obsolete provisions (sec. 6604(f)(5))

The House bill repeals as obsolete the information reporting requirements of sections 6038 and 6038A relating to section 453C.

10. Clarification of certain stadium bond transition rule in Tax Reform Act of 1986 (sec. 6604(g))

The House bill permits the residual interest in the stadium currently held by the City of Cleveland to be assigned to Cuyahoga County, Ohio (the county in which both Cleveland and the stadium are located) because of a change in Ohio State law prior to issuance of the bonds. The House bill does not extend the time for issuing the bonds or otherwise affect the amount of bonds or the location or design of the stadium.

11. Health care continuation rules (sec. 6604(h))

The 1989 Act amended the health care continuation rules to provide that if a covered employee is entitled to Medicare and within 18 months of such entitlement separates from service or has a reduction in hours, the duration of continuation coverage for the spouse and dependents is 36 months from the date the covered employee became entitled to Medicare. One possible unintended interpretation of the statutory language, however, would permit continuation coverage for up to 54 months. The House bill amends the Code (sec. 4980B), title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (sec. 602), and the Public Health Service Act (sec. 2202(2)(A)), to limit the continuation coverage in such cases to no more than 36 months. The provision is effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1989.

12. Taxation of excess inclusions of a residual interest in a REMIC for taxpayers subject to alternative minimum tax with net operating losses (sec. 6604(I))

The House bill provides the following three rules for determining the alternative minimum taxable income of a taxpayer that is not a thrift institution that holds residual interests in a REMIC: (1) the alternative minimum taxable income of such a taxpayer is computed without regard to the REMIC rule that taxable income cannot be less than the amount of excess inclusions; (2) the alternative minimum taxable income of such a taxpayer for a taxable year cannot be less than the excess inclusions of the residual interests for that year; and (3) the amount of any alternative minimum tax net operating loss deduction of such a taxpayer is computed without regard to any excess inclusions. The provision is effective for all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, unless the taxpayer elects to apply the rules of the bill only to taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

13. Application of harbor maintenance tax to Alaska and Hawaii ship passengers (sec. 6604(j))

The House bill clarifies that the harbor maintenance tax does not apply to passenger fares where the passengers are transported on U.S. flag vessels operating solely within the State waters of Alaska or Hawaii and adjacent international waters (i.e., leaving and returning to a port in the same State without stopping elsewhere). The provision is effective as of April 1, 1987 (the effective date of the tax).

14. Modify effective date provision relating to the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (sec. 6604(k))

The House bill corrects several cross-references in the Energy Policy Act of 1992, and also clarifies the relationship between the basis adjustment rules for the electric vehicle credit (sec. 30(d)(1) and the alternative minimum tax.

15. Determination of unrecovered investment in annuity contract (sec. 6604(m))

In the case of an annuity contract with a refund feature, the House bill modifies the definition of the unrecovered investment in the contract, so that the entire investment in the contract can be recovered tax-free.

16. Election by parent to claim unearned income of certain children on parent's return (sec. 6604(n))

The House bill provides for adjustments for inflation, effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1994.

17. Exclusion from income for combat zone compensation (sec. 6604(o)(4))

The House bill changes obsolete references to "combat pay" to references to "combat zone compensation."

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provisions.

D. ADDITIONAL TAX TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS (SECS. 13401–13405 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

House bill

1. Reporting of real estate transactions (sec. 13401)

The House bill clarifies that real estate reporting persons may take into account the cost of complying with the reporting requirements of Code section 6045 in establishing charges for their services, so long as a separately listed charge for such costs is not made.

2. Clarification of denial of deduction for stock redemption expenses (sec. 13402)

The House bill clarifies that amounts properly allocable to indebtedness on which interest is deductible and properly amortized over the term of that indebtedness are not subject to the provision of section 162(k) denying a deduction for any amount paid or incurred by a corporation in connection with the redemption of its stock. This clarification is effective as if included in the 1986 Act.

In addition, the House bill clarifies that the rules of section 162(k) apply to any acquisition of its stock by a corporation or by a party that has a relationship to the corporation described in section 465(b)(3)(C)(which applies a more than 10-percent relationship test in certain cases). These clarifications apply to amounts paid or incurred after September 13, 1995.

3. Clarification of depreciation class for certain energy property (sec. 13403)

The House bill clarifies that solar or wind property owned by a public utility may qualify as 5-year MACRS property.

4. Treatment of certain veterans' reemployment rights (sec. 13405)

The House bill conforms the Internal Revenue Code provisions relating to tax-qualified retirement plans to the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 ("USERRA"), which provides for the rights of reemployed veterans. Thus, under the House bill, the tax-qualified status of a plan will not be affected merely because the plan provides benefits to a reemployed veteran as required or authorized by USERRA. The provision is effective as of December 12, 1994, the effective date of the benefits-related provisions of USERRA.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provisions.

E. TREAT QUALIFIED FOOTBALL COACHES PLAN AS MULTIEMPLOYER PENSION PLAN FOR PURPOSES OF THE INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

(SEC. 6604(L) OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12705 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, a tax-qualified pension plan (including a qualified cash or deferred arrangement) must be maintained for the exclusive benefit of the employees and their beneficiaries covered under the plan.

The American Football Coaches Association ("AFCA") is a tax-exempt organization described in section 501(c)(6) of the Code. The members of the AFCA include college coaches, athletic directors, and high school coaches. The participating members of the AFCA are not employees of the organization. The AFCA maintains a cash or deferred arrangement (i.e., a "401(k) plan") on behalf of participating members.

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA"), as amended by the Continuing Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1988, provides that, for purposes of the labor law provisions of ERISA, a qualified football coaches plan generally is treated as a multiemployer plan and may include a qualified cash or deferred arrangement. Under ERISA, a qualified football coaches plan is defined as any defined contribution plan established and maintained by an organization described in Code section 501(c)(6), the membership of which consists entirely of individuals who primarily coach football as full-time employees of 4-year colleges or universities, if the organization was in existence on September 18, 1986. This definition is generally intended to apply to the AFCA.

However, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 provided that certain provisions of ERISA are not applicable in interpreting the Internal Revenue Code, except to the extent specifically provided in the Code or as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Internal Revenue Service determined that the cash or deferred arrangement maintained by the AFCA is not a qualified cash or deferred arrangement under the Internal Revenue Code. In making this determination, the IRS also observed that the AFCA plan may also violate a number of provisions of the Code. For example, the Code requires that a qualified plan be maintained for the benefit of employees, but the coaches are not employees of the AFCA.

House bill

Under the House bill, a correction to the Continuing Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1988 provides that a qualified football coaches plan (as defined in ERISA) is eligible to maintain a qualified cash or deferred arrangement under the Internal Revenue Code on behalf of the football coaches belonging to the AFCA.

Effective date.—The provision generally is effective as if included in the Continuing Appropriations for Fiscal Year 1988 (i.e., years beginning after December 22, 1987).

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except that in order for the plan to be reinstated as a qualified football coaches plan, a $25,000 excise tax is imposed on the plan.

Effective date.—Same as the House bill, except that the excise tax is required to be paid in the first plan year beginning after the date of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill or Senate amendment provision.

XI. Simplification Provisions Relating to Individuals

1. PROVISIONS RELATING TO ROLLOVER OF GAIN ON SALE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE (SECS. 14101–14102 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In general.—No gain is recognized on the sale of a principal residence if a new residence at least equal in cost to the sales price of the old residence is purchased and used by the taxpayer as his or her principal residence within a specified period of time (sec. 1034). This replacement period generally begins two years before and ends two years after the date of sale of the old residence. The basis of the replacement residence is reduced by the amount of any gain not recognized on the sale of the old residence by reason of section 1034.

Multiple rollovers.—In general, nonrecognition treatment is available only once during any two-year period. In addition, if the taxpayer purchases more than one residence during the replacement period and such residences are each used as the taxpayer's principal residence within two years after the date of sale of the old residence, only the last residence so used is treated as the replacement residence.

Special rules apply, however, if residences are sold in order to relocate for employment reasons. First, the number of times nonrecognition treatment is available during a two-year period is not limited. Second, if a residence is sold within two years after the sale of the old residence, the residence sold is treated as the last residence used by the taxpayer and thus as the only replacement residence.

Rollovers in the case of divorce or separation.—The determination whether property is used by a taxpayer as a principal residence depends upon all the facts and circumstances in each case, including the good faith of the taxpayer. No safe harbor is provided for sales of principal residences incident to divorce or marital separation.

House bill

Multiple rollovers.—Gain is rolled over from one residence to another residence in the order the residences are purchased and used, regardless of the taxpayer's reasons for the sale of the old residence. In addition, gain may be rolled over more than once within a two-year period. Thus, the rules that formerly applied only if a taxpayer sold his residence in order to relocate for employment purposes will apply in all cases. As under present law, the basis of each succeeding residence is reduced by the amount of gain not recognized on the sale of the prior residence.

Rollovers in the case of divorce or separation.—The House bill provides a safe harbor in the determination of principal residence in certain cases incident to divorce or marital separation. Specifically, the House bill provides that a residence is treated as the taxpayer's principal residence at the time of sale if (1) the residence is sold pursuant to a divorce or marital separation and (2) the taxpayer used such residence as his or her principal residence at any time during the two-year period ending on the date of sale.

Effective date.—Sales of old residences (within the meaning of sec. 1034) after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. ONE-TIME EXCLUSION OF GAIN FROM SALE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE FOR CERTAIN SPOUSES (SEC. 14103 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In general, a taxpayer may exclude from gross income up to $125,000 of gain from the sale or exchange of a principal residence if the taxpayer (1) has attained age 55 before the sale, and (2) has used the residence as a principal residence for three or more years of the five years preceding the sale. This election is allowed only once in a lifetime unless all previous elections are revoked. For these purposes, sales on or before July 26, 1978 are not counted against the once in a lifetime limit.

House bill

The House bill allows an exclusion to an individual who otherwise qualifies for an exclusion under section 121 of the Code but for a marriage to a spouse with an existing election in effect. The exclusion will only be available if the individual held the property which is the subject of the exclusion for at least three years prior to marrying the spouse with the existing election.

Effective date.—Sales or exchanges after September 13, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. PAYMENT OF TAXES BY COMMERCIALLY ACCEPTABLE MEANS (SEC. 14111 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Payment of taxes may be made by checks or money orders, to the extent and under the conditions provided by regulations.

House bill

The House bill allows the IRS to accept payment by any commercially acceptable means that the Secretary deems appropriate, to the extent and under the conditions provided in Treasury regulations.

Effective date.—Nine months after the date of enactment. The IRS may, in this interim period, conduct internal tests and negotiate with card issuers, but may not accept credit or debit cards for payment of tax liability.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

4. SIMPLIFIED FOREIGN TAX CREDIT LIMITATION FOR INDIVIDUALS (SEC. 14112 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In order to compute the foreign tax credit, a taxpayer computes foreign source taxable income and foreign taxes paid in each of the applicable separate foreign tax credit limitation categories. In the case of an individual, this requires the filing of IRS Form 1116, designed to elicit sufficient information to perform the necessary calculations.

House bill

The House bill allows individuals with no more than $200 ($400 in the case of married persons filing jointly) of creditable foreign taxes, and no foreign source income other than passive income, to elect a simplified foreign tax credit limitation equal to the lesser of 25 percent of the individual's foreign source gross income or the amount of the creditable foreign taxes paid or accrued by the individual during the taxable year. For this purpose, passive income is defined to include all types of income that is foreign personal holding company income under the subpart F rules, provided that the income is shown on a payee statement furnished to the individual. Under the election, a credit is allowed only for taxes shown on a payee statement.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

5. TREATMENT OF PERSONAL TRANSACTIONS BY INDIVIDUALS UNDER FOREIGN CURRENCY RULES (SEC. 14113 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

When a U.S. taxpayer with a U.S. dollar functional currency makes a payment in a foreign currency, gain or loss (referred to as "exchange gain or loss") arises from any change in the value of the foreign currency relative to the U.S. dollar between the time the currency was acquired (or the obligation to pay was incurred) and the time that the payment is made. The 1986 Act provisions designed to clarify the treatment of currency transactions, primarily found in section 988, apply to transactions entered into by an individual only to the extent that expenses attributable to such transactions will be deductible under section 162 (as a trade or business expense) or section 212 (as an expense of producing income, other than expenses incurred in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of taxes). Therefore, the principles of pre-1986 law continue to apply to personal currency transactions.

House bill

In a case where an individual acquires nonfunctional currency and then disposes of it in a personal transaction, and where exchange rates have changed in the intervening period, the House bill provides for nonrecognition of an individual's resulting exchange gain provided that such gain does not exceed $200. The House bill does not change the treatment of resulting exchange losses.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

6. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN REIMBURSED EXPENSES OF RURAL MAIL CARRIERS (SEC. 14114 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A taxpayer who uses his or her automobile for business purposes may deduct the business portion of the actual operation and maintenance expenses of the vehicle, plus depreciation (subject to the limitations of sec. 280F). Alternatively, the taxpayer may elect to utilize a standard mileage rate in computing the deduction allowable for business use of an automobile that has not been fully depreciated. Under this election, the taxpayer's deduction equals the applicable rate multiplied by the number of miles driven for business purposes and is taken in lieu of deductions for depreciation and actual operation and maintenance expenses.

An employee of the U.S. Postal Service may compute his deduction for business use of an automobile in performing services involving the collection and delivery of mail on a rural route by using, for all business use mileage, 150 percent of the standard mileage rate.

House bill

The House bill repeals the special rate for Postal Service employees of 150 percent of the standard mileage rate. In its place, the House bill provides that the rate of reimbursement provided by the Postal Service to rural letter carriers is considered to be equivalent to their expenses. The rate of reimbursement that is considered to be equivalent to their expenses is the rate of reimbursement contained in the 1991 collective bargaining agreement, which may in the future be increased by no more than the rate of inflation.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

7. EXCLUSION OF COMBAT PAY FROM WITHHOLDING LIMITED TO AMOUNT EXCLUDED FROM GROSS INCOME (SEC. 14115 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Gross income does not include certain combat pay of members of the Armed Forces (Code sec. 112). If enlisted personnel serve in a combat zone during any part of any month, military pay for that month is excluded from gross income. In the case of commissioned officers, these exclusions from income are limited to $500 per month of military pay.

There is no income tax withholding with respect to military pay for a month in which a member of the Armed Forces of the United States is entitled to the benefits of section 112 (sec. 3401(a)(2)). With respect to enlisted personnel, this income tax withholding rule parallels the exclusion from income under section 112: there is total exemption from income tax withholding and total exclusion from income. With respect to officers, however, the withholding rule is not parallel: there is total exemption from income tax withholding, although the exclusion from income is limited to $500 per month.

House bill

The House bill makes the income tax withholding exemption rules parallel to the rules providing an exclusion from income for combat pay.

Effective date.—Remuneration paid after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

8. TREATMENT OF TRAVELING EXPENSES OF CERTAIN FEDERAL EMPLOYEES ENGAGED IN CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS (SEC. 14116 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Unreimbursed ordinary and necessary travel expenses paid or incurred by an individual in connection with temporary employment away from home are generally deductible, subject to the two-percent floor on miscellaneous itemized deductions. Travel expenses paid or incurred in connection with indefinite employment away from home, however, are not deductible. A taxpayer's employment away from home in a single location is indefinite rather than temporary if it lasts for one year or more; thus, no deduction is permitted for travel expenses paid or incurred in connection with such employment (sec. 162(a)). If a taxpayer's employment away from home in a single location lasts for less than one year, whether such employment is temporary or indefinite is determined on the basis of the facts and circumstances.

House bill

The one-year limitation with respect to deductibility of expenses while temporarily away from home does not include any period during which a Federal employee is certified by the Attorney General (or the Attorney General's designee) as traveling on behalf of the Federal Government in a temporary duty status to investigate or provide support services for the investigation of a Federal crime. Thus, expenses for these individuals during these periods are fully deductible, regardless of the length of the period for which certification is given (provided that the other requirements for deductibility are satisfied).

Effective date.—Taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

XII. PENSION SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS

A. SIMPLIFIED DISTRIBUTION RULES (SECS. 14201–14204 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SECS. 12911–12914 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

In general, a distribution of benefits from a tax-favored retirement arrangement (i.e., a qualified plan) generally is includible in gross income in the year it is paid or distributed under the rules relating to the taxation of annuities. A qualified plan includes a qualified pension plan, a qualified annuity plan, and a tax-sheltered annuity contract (sec. 403(b) annuity).

Lump-sum distributions

Lump-sum distributions from qualified plans and annuities are eligible for special 5-year forward averaging. In general, a lump-sum distribution is a distribution within one taxable year of the balance to the credit of an employee that becomes payable to the recipient first, on account of the death of the employee, second, after the employee attains age 59½, third, on account of the employee's separation from service, or fourth, in the case of self-employed individuals, on account of disability. Lump-sum treatment is not available for distributions from a tax-sheltered annuity.

A taxpayer is permitted to make an election with respect to a lump-sum distribution received on or after the employee attains age 59½ to use 5-year forward income averaging under the tax rates in effect for the taxable year in which the distribution is made. In general, this election allows the taxpayer to pay a separate tax on the lump-sum distribution that approximates the tax that would be due if the lump-sum distribution were received in 5 equal installments. If the election is made, the taxpayer is entitled to deduct the amount of the lump-sum distribution from gross income. Only one such election on or after age 59½ may be made with respect to any employee.

$5,000 exclusion for employer-provided death benefits

Under present law, the beneficiary or estate of a deceased employee generally can exclude up to $5,000 in benefits paid by or on behalf of an employer by reason of the employee's death (sec. 101(b)).

Recovery of basis

Amounts received as an annuity under a qualified plan generally are includible in income in the year received, except to the extent they represent the return of the recipient's investment in the contract (i.e., basis). Under present law, a pro-rata basis recovery rule generally applies, so that the portion of any annuity payment that represents nontaxable return of basis is determined by applying an exclusion ratio equal to the employee's total investment in the contract divided by the total expected payments over the term of the annuity.

Under a simplified alternative method provided by the IRS, the taxable portion of qualifying annuity payments is determined under a simplified exclusion ratio method.

In no event can the total amount excluded from income as nontaxable return of basis be greater than the recipient's total investment in the contract.

Required distributions

Present law provides uniform minimum distribution rules generally applicable to all types of tax-favored retirement vehicles, including qualified plans and annuities, IRAs, and tax-sheltered annuities.

Under present law, a qualified plan is required to provide that the entire interest of each participant will be distributed beginning no later than the participant's required beginning date (sec. 401(a)(9)). The required beginning date is generally April 1 of the calendar year following the calendar year in which the plan participant or IRA owner attains age 70½. In the case of a governmental plan or a church plan, the required beginning date is the later of first, such April 1, or second, the April 1 of the year following the year in which the participant retires.

House bill

Lump-sum distributions

The House bill repeals 5-year averaging for lump-sum distributions from qualified plans. Thus, the bill repeals the separate tax paid on a lump-sum distribution and also repeals the deduction from gross income for taxpayers who elect to pay the separate tax on a lump-sum distribution. The bill preserves the transition rules adopted in the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

$5,000 exclusion for employer-provided death benefits

The House bill repeals the $5,000 exclusion for employer-provided death benefits.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Recovery of basis

The House bill provides that basis recovery on payments from qualified plans generally is determined under a method similar to the present-law simplified alternative method provided by the IRS. The portion of each annuity payment that represents a return of basis is equal to the employee's total basis as of the annuity starting date, divided by the number of anticipated payments under the following table:

Age:	Number of payments
Not more than 55	300
56–60	260
61–65	240
66–70	170
More than 70	120

Effective date.—Annuity starting dates after December 31, 1995.

Required distributions

The House bill modifies the rule that requires all participants in qualified plans to commence distributions by age 70½ without regard to whether the participant is still employed by the employer and generally replaces it with the rule in effect prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986. Under the House bill, distributions generally are required to begin by April 1 of the calendar year following the later of first, the calendar year in which the employee attains age 70½ or second, the calendar year in which the employee retires. However, in the case of a 5-percent owner of the employer, distributions are required to begin no later than the April 1 of the calendar year following the year in which the 5-percent owner attains age 70½.

In addition, in the case of an employee (other than a 5-percent owner) who retires in a calendar year after attaining age 70½, the bill generally requires the employee's accrued benefit to be actuarially increased to take into account the period after age 70½ in which the employee was not receiving benefits under the plan. Thus, under the House bill, the employee's accrued benefit is required to reflect the value of benefits that the employee would have received if the employee had retired at age 70½ and had begun receiving benefits at that time.

The actuarial adjustment rule and the rule requiring 5-percent owners to begin distributions after attainment of age 70½ do not apply, under the House bill, in the case of a governmental plan or church plan.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

B. INCREASED ACCESS TO PENSION PLANS

1. MODIFICATIONS OF SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYEE PENSIONS (SEC. 14211 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Certain employers (other than tax-exempt and governmental employers) can establish a simplified employee pension (''SEP'') for the benefit of their employees under which the employees can elect to have contributions made to the SEP or to receive the contributions in cash. The amounts the employee elects to have contributed to the SEP are not currently includible in income.

The election to have amounts contributed to a SEP or received in cash is available only if at least 50 percent of the eligible employees of the employer elect to have amounts contributed to the

SEP. In addition, such election is available for a taxable year only if the employer maintaining the SEP had 25 or fewer eligible employees at all times during the prior taxable year.

Elective deferrals under SEPs are subject to a special nondiscrimination test.

House bill

The House bill modifies the rules relating to salary reduction SEPs by providing that such SEPs may be established by employers with 100 or fewer employees. The House bill repeals the requirement that at least 50 percent of eligible employees actually participate in a salary reduction SEP. The House bill modifies the special nondiscrimination test applicable to elective deferred under SEPs and permits a salary reduction SEP to satisfy the design-based safe harbor available to qualified cash or deferred arrangements (see C.3., below).

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision. However, the Senate amendment adopts a new type of retirement plan (called a "SIMPLE" retirement plan) (see the description in II.B., above).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS AND TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS ELIGIBLE UNDER SECTION 401(K) (SEC. 14212 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12917 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, tax-exempt and State and local government organizations are generally prohibited from establishing qualified cash or deferred arrangements (sec. 401(k) plans). Qualified cash or deferred arrangements (1) of rural cooperatives, (2) adopted by State and local governments before May 6, 1986, or (3) adopted by tax-exempt organizations before July 2, 1986, are not subject to this prohibition.

House bill

The House bill allows tax-exempt organizations and State and local governments and their agencies and instrumentalities to maintain qualified cash or deferred arrangements, unless the entity maintains a section 457 plan.

Tax-exempt and governmental plans eligible to maintain qualified cash or deferred arrangements under present law are not to be subject to the prohibition on maintaining such a plan if the entity maintains a section 457 plan.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment permits organizations exempt from tax (other than an organization described in sec. 501(c)(3)) to maintain qualified cash or deferred arrangements.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except that the provision applies to all tax-exempt organizations (including, for this purpose, Indian tribes). The conference report retains the present-law prohibition in the maintenance of cash or deferred arrangements by State and local governments, (except to the extent it may apply to Indian tribes).

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1996.

3. TAX CREDIT FOR PENSION PLAN START-UP COSTS OF SMALL EMPLOYERS (SEC. 12916 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

An employer is generally entitled to deduct ordinary and necessary business expenses, including expenses associated with establishing pension plans.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

In lieu of the present-law deduction, small employers would be entitled to a credit with respect to the expenses of establishing a SIMPLE retirement plan (see the description in II.B., above). The credit equals 50 percent of the start-up costs of establishing the plan up to a maximum credit of $500.

The credit is not available to an employer that made contributions to a qualified plan (or a SIMPLE plan) during the 2 years preceding the year in question. In addition, the credit is not available to employers—substantially all of the activities of which involve the performance of services in the fields of health, law, engineering, architecture, accounting, actuarial science, performing arts, or consulting.

Effective date.—Costs incurred after the date of enactment in taxable years ending after that date.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

C. NONDISCRIMINATION PROVISIONS

1. DEFINITION OF HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES AND FAMILY AGGREGATION RULES (SECS. 14221–14222 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12901 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Definition of highly compensated employee

An employee, including a self-employed individual, is treated as highly compensated if, at any time during the year or the preceding year, the employee (1) was a 5-percent owner of the employer, (2) received more than $100,000 (for 1995) in annual compensation from the employer, (3) received more than $66,000 (for 1995) in annual compensation from the employer and was one of the top-paid 20 percent of employees during the same year, or (4) was an officer of the employer who received compensation in excess of $60,000 (for 1995). If, for any year, no officer has compensation in excess of the threshold, then the highest paid officer of the employer is treated as a highly compensated employee.

Family aggregation rules

A special rule applies with respect to the treatment of family members of certain highly compensated employees for purposes of the nondiscrimination rules applicable to qualified plans. Under the special rule, if an employee is a family member of either a 5-percent owner or 1 of the top-10 highly compensated employees by compensation, then any compensation paid to such family member and any contribution or benefit under the plan on behalf of such family member is aggregated with the compensation paid and contributions or benefits on behalf of the 5-percent owner or the highly compensated employee in the top-10 employees by the compensation. Therefore, such family member and employee are treated as a single highly compensated employee. An individual is considered a family member if, with respect to an employee, the individual is a spouse, lineal ascendant or descendant, or spouses of a lineal ascendant or descendant of the employee.

Similar family aggregation rules apply with respect to the $150,000 (for 1995) limit on compensation that may be taken into account under a qualified plan (sec. 401(a)(17)) and for deduction purposes (sec. 404(1)). However, under such provisions, only the spouse of the employee and lineal descendants of the employee who have not attained the age 19 are taken into account.

House bill

Definition of highly compensated employee

Under the House bill, an employee is highly compensated if the employee (1) was a 5-percent owner of the employer at any time during the year or the preceding year or (2) had compensation for the preceding year in excess of $80,000 (indexed for inflation). The House bill repeals the rule requiring the highest paid officer to be treated as a highly compensated employee.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Family aggregation rules

The House bill repeals the family aggregation rules.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

Definition of highly compensated employee

Under the Senate amendment, an employee is highly compensated if the employee (1) was a 5-percent owner of the employer at any time during the year or the preceding year, (2) had compensation for the preceding year in excess of $80,000 (indexed for inflation), or (3) was the most highly compensated officer of the employer for the preceding year. The rule providing that the most highly compensated officer is a highly compensated employee does not apply to plans maintained by tax-exempt or State and local governmental organizations for purposes of applying the nondiscrimination tests applicable to cash or deferred arrangements.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Family aggregation rules

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

Definition of highly compensated employee

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except that an employee with compensation for the preceding year in excess of $80,000 (indexed for inflation) is not considered highly compensated unless the employee was in the top 20 percent of employees by compensation for such year.

Family aggregation rules

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

2. MODIFICATION OF ADDITIONAL PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS (SEC. 14223 OF THE BILL AND SEC. 12903 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, a plan is not a qualified plan unless it benefits no fewer than the lesser of (a) 50 employees of the employer or (b) 40 percent of all employees of the employer (sec. 401(a)(26)). This requirement may not be satisfied by aggregating comparable plans, but may be applied separately to different lines of business of the employer. A line of business of the employer does not qualify as a separate line of business unless it has at least 50 employees.

House bill

The bill provides that the minimum participation rule applies only to defined benefit pension plans. In addition, the bill provides that a defined benefit pension plan does not satisfy the rule unless it benefits no fewer than the lesser of first, 50 employees or second, the greater of (a) 40 percent of all employees of the employer or (b) 2 employees (1 employee if there is only 1 employee).

The bill provides that the requirement that a line of business has at least 50 employees does not apply in determining whether a plan satisfies the minimum participation rule on a separate line of business basis.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

3. NONDISCRIMINATION RULES FOR QUALIFIED CASH OR DEFERRED ARRANGEMENTS AND MATCHING CONTRIBUTIONS (SEC. 14224 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12904 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, a special nondiscrimination test applies to qualified cash or deferred arrangements. The special nondiscrimination test is satisfied if the actual deferral percentage (ADP) for eligible highly compensated employees for a plan year is equal to or less than either (1) 125 percent of the ADP of all nonhighly compensated employees eligible to defer under the arrangement or (2) the lesser of 200 percent of the ADP of all eligible nonhighly compensated employees or such ADP plus 2 percentage points.

Employer matching contributions and after-tax employee contributions under qualified defined contribution plans are subject to a special nondiscrimination test similar to the special nondiscrimination test applicable to qualified cash or deferred arrangements.

A plan that would otherwise fail to meet the special nondiscrimination test for qualified cash or deferred arrangements is not treated as failing such test if excess contributions (with allocable income) are distributed to the employee or, in accordance with Treasury regulations, recharacterized as after-tax employee contributions. For purposes of this rule, in determining the amount of excess contributions and the employees to whom they are allocated, the elective deferrals of highly compensated employees are reduced in the order of their actual deferral percentage beginning with those highly compensated employees with the highest actual deferral percentages. A similar rule applies to matching contributions.

House bill

Prior-year data.—The House bill modifies the special nondiscrimination tests applicable to elective deferrals and employer matching and after-tax employee contributions to provide that the maximum permitted actual deferral percentage for highly compensated employees for the year is determined by reference to the actual deferral percentage for nonhighly compensated employees for the preceding, rather than the current, year. A special rule applies for the first plan year.

Safe harbor for cash or deferred arrangements.—The bill provides that a cash or deferred arrangement satisfies the special nondiscrimination tests if the plan satisfies one of two contribution requirements and satisfies a notice requirement.

A plan satisfies the contribution requirements under the safe harbor rule for qualified cash or deferred arrangements if the plan either first, satisfies a matching contribution requirement or second, the employer makes a nonelective contribution to a defined contribution plan of at least 3 percent of an employee's compensation on behalf of each nonhighly compensated employee who is eligible to participate in the arrangement without regard to whether the employee makes elective contributions under the arrangement.

A plan satisfies the matching contribution requirement if, under the arrangement: First, the employer makes a matching contribution on behalf of each nonhighly compensated employee that is equal to (a) 100 percent of the employee's elective contributions up to 3 percent of compensation and (b) 50 percent of the employee's elective contributions from 3 to 5 percent of compensation; and second, the level of match for highly compensated employees is not greater than the match rate for nonhighly compensated employees at any level of compensation.

Alternatively, if the matching contribution requirement is not satisfied at some level of employee compensation, the requirement is deemed to be satisfied if first, the level of employer matching contributions does not increase as employee elective contributions increase and second, the aggregate amount of matching contributions with respect to elective contributions up to that level of compensation at least equals the amount of matching contributions that would be made if matching contributions satisfied the percentage requirements. For example, the alternative test would be satisfied if an employer matches 125 percent of an employee's elective contributions up to the first 3 percent of compensation, 25 percent of elective deferrals from 3 to 4 percent of compensation, and provides no match thereafter. This is because the employer match does not increase and the aggregate amount of matching contributions is at least equal to the matching contributions required under the general safe harbor rule.

Employer matching and nonelective contributions used to satisfy the contribution requirements of the safe harbor rules are required to be nonforfeitable and subject to the restrictions on withdrawals that apply to an employee's elective deferrals under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (sec. 401(k)(2)(B) and (C)).

The notice requirement is satisfied if each employee eligible to participate in the arrangement is given written notice, within a reasonable period before any year, of the employee's rights and obligations under the arrangement.

Alternative method of satisfying special nondiscrimination test for matching contributions.—The bill provides a safe harbor method of satisfying the special nondiscrimination test applicable to employer matching contributions. Under this safe harbor, a plan is treated as meeting the special nondiscrimination test if first, the plan meets the contribution and notice requirements applicable under the safe harbor method of satisfying the special nondiscrimination requirement for qualified cash or deferred arrangements, and second, the plan satisfies a special limitation on matching contributions. After-tax employee contributions are tested separately under the ACP test.

The limitation on matching contributions is satisfied if first, the matching contributions on behalf of any employee may not be made with respect to employee contributions or elective deferrals in excess of 6 percent of compensation and second, the level of an employer's matching contribution does not increase as an employee's contributions or elective deferrals increase.

Simplified employee pensions.—The bill modifies the present-law nondiscrimination test applicable to salary reduction SEPs to provide that the average of deferral percentages for all nonhighly compensated employees for the preceding, rather than the current, year is to be used. In addition, the bill permits a salary reduction SEP to satisfy the qualified cash or deferred arrangement safe harbor nondiscrimination test.

Distribution of excess contributions.—The House bill provides that the total amount of excess contributions is determined as under present law, but the distribution of excess contributions is required to be made on the basis of the amount of contribution by, or on behalf of, each highly compensated employee. Thus, excess contributions are deemed attributable first to those highly compensated employees who have the greatest dollar amount of elective deferrals.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

Prior-year data.—Same as the House bill, except that an employer is allowed to elect to use current year actual deferral percentages. Such an election can be revoked only as provided by the Secretary.

Safe harbor for cash or deferred arrangements.—Same as House bill.

Alternative method of satisfying special nondiscrimination test for matching contributions.—Same as House bill, except that an employer is allowed to elect to use current year actual deferral percentages. Such an election can be revoked only as provided by the Secretary.

Simplified employee pensions.—No provision. However, the Senate amendment adopts a new type of retirement plan (called a "SIMPLE" retirement plan) (see the description in II.B., above).

Distribution of excess contributions.—No provision.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except that it includes the House bill provision providing that allocations of excess contributions are to be made on the basis of the amount of contribution by, or on behalf of, each highly compensated employee.

Effective date.—The safe harbor for cash or deferred arrangements and the alternative method of satisfying the special nondiscrimination test for matching contributions are effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1998. The provision relating to the distribution of excess contributions is effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 1995.

4. DEFINITION OF COMPENSATION FOR PURPOSES OF THE LIMITS ON CONTRIBUTIONS AND BENEFITS (SEC. 12902 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Present law imposes limits on contributions and benefits under qualified plans based on the type of plan. For purposes of these limits, present law provides that the definition of compensation generally does not include elective employee contributions to certain employee benefit plans.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides that elective deferrals to section 401(k) plans and similar arrangements, elective contributions to nonqualified deferred compensation plans of tax-exempt employers and State and local governments (sec. 457 plans), and salary reduction contributions to a cafeteria plan are considered compensation for purposes of the limits on contributions and benefits.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

D. MISCELLANEOUS PENSION SIMPLIFICATION

1. TREATMENT OF LEASED EMPLOYEES (SEC. 14231 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12931 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

An individual (a leased employee) who performs services for another person (the recipient) may be required to be treated as the recipient's employee for various employee benefit provisions, if the services are performed pursuant to an agreement between the recipient and any other person (the leasing organization) who is otherwise treated as the individual's employer (sec. 414(n)). The individual is to be treated as the recipient's employee only if the individual has performed services for the recipient on a substantially full-time basis for a year, and the services are of a type historically performed by employees in the recipient's business field.

An individual who otherwise would be treated as a recipient's leased employee will not be treated as such an employee if the individual participates in a safe harbor plan maintained by the leasing organization meeting certain requirements. Each leased employee is to be treated as an employee of the recipient, regardless of the existence of a safe harbor plan, if more than 20 percent of an employer's nonhighly compensated workforce are leased.

House bill

Under the House bill, the present-law "historically performed" test is replaced with a new rule under which an individual is not considered a leased employee unless the services are performed under significant direction or control by the recipient.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1995, except that the changes do not apply to relationships that have been previously determined by an IRS ruling not to involve leased employees. In applying the leased employee rules to years beginning before the effective date, it is intended that the Secretary use a reasonable interpretation of the statute to apply the leasing rules to prevent abuse.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, the present-law "historically performed" test is replaced with a new rule under which an individual is not considered a leased employee unless the individual's services are performed under the primary direction or control of the service recipient.

Effective date.—Same as House bill.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. Consequently, an individual is not considered a leased employee unless the individual's services are performed under primary direction or control by the service recipient. As under present law, the determination of whether someone is a leased employee is made after determining whether the individual is a common-law employee of the recipient. Thus, an individual who is not a common-law employee of the service recipient could nevertheless be a leased employee of the service recipient. Similarly, the fact that a person is or is not found to perform services under primary direction or control of the recipient for purposes of the employee leasing rules is not determinative of whether the person is or is not a common-law employee of the recipient.

Whether services are performed by an individual under primary direction or control by the service recipient depends on the facts and circumstances. In general, primary direction and control means that the service recipient exercises the majority of direction and control over the individual. Factors that are relevant in determining whether primary direction or control exists include whether the individual is required to comply with instructions of the service recipient about when, where, and how he or she is to perform the services, whether the services must be performed by a particular person, whether the individual is subject to the supervision of the service recipient, and whether the individual must perform services in the order or sequence set by the service recipient. Factors that generally are not relevant in determining whether such direction or control exists include whether the service recipient has the right to hire or fire the individual and whether the individual works for others.

For example, an individual who works under the direct supervision of the service recipient would be considered to be subject to primary direction or control of the service recipient even if another company hired and trained the individual, had the ultimate (but unexercised) legal right to control the individual, paid his wages, withheld his employment and income taxes, and had the exclusive right to fire him. Thus, for example, temporary secretaries, receptionists, word processing personnel and similar office personnel who are subject to the day-to-day control of the employer in essentially the same manner as a common-law employee are treated as leased employees if the period of service threshold is reached.

On the other hand, an individual who is a common-law employee of Company A who performs services for Company B on the business premises of Company B under the supervision of Company A would generally not be considered to be under primary direction or control of Company B. The supervision by Company A must be more than nominal, however, and not merely a mechanism to avoid the literal language of the direction or control test.

An example of the situation in the preceding paragraph might be a work crew that comes into a factory to install, repair, maintain, or modify equipment or machinery at the factory. The work crew includes a supervisor who is an employee of the equipment (or equipment repair) company and who has the authority to direct and control the crew, and who actually does exercise such direction and control. In this situation, the supervisor and his or her crew are required to comply with the safety and environmental precautions of the manufacturer. As another example, certain professionals (e.g., attorneys, accountants, actuaries, doctors, computer programmers, systems analysts, and engineers) who regularly make use of their own judgement and discretion on matters of importance in the performance of their services and are guided by professional or industry standards, are not leased employees merely because the service recipient requires the services to be performed on site and according to certain stages and timetables.

Under the direction or control test, clerical and similar support staff (e.g., secretaries and nurses in a doctor's office) generally would be considered to be subject to primary direction or control of the service recipient and would be leased employees provided the other requirements of section 414(n) are met. On the other hand, outside professionals who maintain their own businesses (e.g., lawyers and accountants) generally would not be considered to be subject to such primary direction or control.

In many cases, the "historically performed" test is overly broad, and results in the unintended treatment of individuals as leased employees. One of the principal purposes for changing the leased employee rules is to relieve the unnecessary hardship and uncertainty created for employers in these circumstances. However, it is not intended that the direction or control test enable employers to engage in abusive practices. Thus, it is intended that the Secretary interpret and apply the leased employee rules in a manner so as to prevent abuses. This ability to prevent abuses under the leasing rules is in addition to the present-law authority of the Secretary under section 414(o). For example, one potentially abusive situation exists where the benefit arrangements of the service recipient overwhelmingly favor its highly compensated employees, the employer has no or very few nonhighly compensated common-law employees, yet the employer makes substantial use of the services of nonhighly compensated individuals who are not its common-law employees.

The conferees do not intend this provision to have any impact whatsoever on the interpretation or applicability of Federal, State, or local labor laws.

2. PLANS COVERING SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS (SEC. 14232 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12932 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Prior to the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (''TEFRA''), different rules applied to retirement plans maintained by incorporated employers and unincorporated employers (such as partnerships and sole proprietors). In general, plans maintained by unincorporated employers were subject to special rules in addition to the other qualification requirements of the Code. Most, but not all, of this disparity was eliminated by TEFRA. Under present law, certain special aggregation rules apply to plans maintained by owner employees of unincorporated businesses that do not apply to other qualified plans (sec. 401(d)(1) and (2)).

House bill

The bill eliminates the special aggregation rules that apply to plans maintained by self-employed individuals that do not apply to other qualified plans.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

3. ELIMINATION OF SPECIAL VESTING RULE FOR MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS (SEC. 14233 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12933 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, except in the case of multiemployer plans, a plan is not a qualified plan unless a participant's employer-provided benefit vests at least as rapidly as under one of two alternative minimum vesting schedules. A plan satisfies the first schedule if a participant acquires a nonforfeitable right to 100 percent of the participant's accrued benefit derived from employer contributions upon the participant's completion of 5 years of service. A plan satisfies the second schedule if a participant has a nonforfeitable right to at least 20 percent of the participant's accrued benefit derived from employer contributions after 3 years of service, 40 percent at the end of 4 years of service, 60 percent at the end of 5 years of service, 80 percent at the end of 6 years of service, and 100 percent at the end of 7 years of service.

In the case of a multiemployer plan, a participant's accrued benefit derived from employer contributions is required to be 100-percent vested no later than upon the participant's completion of 10 years of service. This special rule applies only to employees covered by the plan pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement.

House bill

The bill conforms the vesting rules for multiemployer plans to the rules applicable to other qualified plans.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for plan years beginning on or after the earlier of (1) the later of January 1, 1996, or the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements pursuant to which the plan is maintained terminates, or (2) January 1, 1998, with respect to participants with an hour of service after the effective date.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

4. DISTRIBUTIONS UNDER RURAL COOPERATIVE PLANS (SEC. 14232 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12938 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

A qualified cash or deferred arrangement can permit withdrawals of employee elective deferrals only after the earlier of (1) the participant's separation from service, death, or disability, (2) termination of the arrangement, or (3) in the case of a profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, the attainment of age 59½ or the occurrence of a hardship of the participant. In the case of a money purchase pension plan, including a rural cooperative plan, withdrawals by participants cannot occur upon attainment of age 59½ or upon hardship.

House bill

The House bill provides that a rural cooperative plan that includes a cash or deferred arrangement may permit distributions to plan participants after the attainment of age 59½.

Effective date.—Distributions after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

Same as House bill, except that withdrawals are also permitted on account of hardship. In addition, the definition of a rural cooperative is expanded to include certain public utility districts, a national association of rural cooperatives, and any other organization providing services related to the activities of rural cooperatives, but only in the case of a plan with respect to which substantially all of the organizations maintaining are rural cooperatives.

Effective date.—Distributions after the date of enactment. The modifications to the definition of a rural cooperative applies to plan years beginning after December 31, 1994.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except that the definition of rural cooperative does not include any other organization providing services related to the activities of rural cooperatives.[96]

5. TREATMENT OF GOVERNMENTAL PLANS UNDER SECTION 415 (SEC. 14235 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12935 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Present law imposes limits on contributions and benefits under qualified plans based on the type of plan (sec. 415). Certain special rules apply to State and local governmental plans under which such plans may provide benefits greater than those permitted by the limits on benefits applicable to plans maintained by private employers.

In the case of defined benefit pension plans, the limit on the annual retirement benefit is the lesser of (1) 100 percent of compensation or (2) $120,000 (indexed for inflation). The dollar limit is reduced in the case of early retirement or if the employee has less than 10 years of plan participation.

House bill

The House bill makes the following modifications to the limits on contributions and benefits as applied to governmental plans:

(1) compensation includes employer contributions to certain plans under a salary reduction arrangement;

(2) the 100 percent of compensation limitation on defined benefit pension plan benefits does not apply; and

(3) the early retirement reduction and the 10-year phase in of the defined benefit plan dollar limit do not apply to certain disability and survivor benefits.

The House bill also permits State and local government employers to maintain excess benefit plans without regard to the limits on unfunded deferred compensation arrangements of State and local government employers (sec. 457).

Effective date.—Years beginning on or after January 1, 1996. Governmental plans are treated as if in compliance with the requirements of section 415 for years beginning before January 1, 1996.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill, except that the exemption from the 100 percent of compensation limit does not apply to State legislators. The modification of the definition of compensation to include contributions under a salary reduction agreement is contained in another provision (see C.4., above) and applies to all employers.

[96] Of course, such organizations may be eligible to maintain a qualified cash or deferred arrangement under the provision of the conference agreement allowing tax-exempt employers to maintain cash or deferred arrangements.

Effective date.—Years beginning on or after January 1, 1995. With respect to governmental plans, no inference is intended with respect to prior years.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except the provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1994. The provision should not be construed to infer that a governmental plan fails to satisfy the requirements of section 415 with respect to years beginning before January 1, 1995. With respect to years before the effective date of this provision, the Secretary is directed to enforce the requirements of section 415 consistent with the amendments in this provision.

6. UNIFORM RETIREMENT AGE (SEC. 14236 OF THE BILL AND SEC. 12940 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

A qualified plan generally must provide that payment of benefits under the plan must begin no later than 60 days after the end of the plan year in which the participant reaches age 65. Also, for purpose of the vesting and benefit accrual rules, normal retirement age generally can be no later than age 65. For purposes of applying the limits on contributions and benefits (sec. 415), Social Security retirement age is generally used as retirement age. The Social Security retirement age as used for such purposes is presently age 65, but is scheduled to gradually increase.

House bill

The bill provides that for purposes of the general nondiscrimination rule (sec. 401(a)(4)) the Social Security retirement age (as defined in sec. 415) is a uniform retirement age and that subsidized early retirement benefits and joint and survivor annuities are not treated as not being available to employees on the same terms merely because they are based on an employee's Social Security retirement age (as defined in sec. 415).

Effective date.—The provision is effective for years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

7. UNIFORM PENALTY PROVISIONS TO APPLY TO CERTAIN PENSION REPORTING REQUIREMENTS (SEC. 14237 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Any person who fails to file an information report with the IRS on or before the prescribed filing date is subject to penalties for each failure. A different, flat-amount penalty applies for each failure to provide information reports to the IRS or statements to payees relating to pension payments.

House bill

The House bill incorporates into the general penalty structure the penalties for failure to provide information reports relating to pension payments to the IRS and to recipients.

Effective date.—Returns and statements the due date for which is after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

8. CONTRIBUTIONS ON BEHALF OF DISABLED EMPLOYEES (SEC. 14238 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12937 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, an employer may elect to continue deductible contributions to a defined contribution plan on behalf of an employee who is permanently and totally disabled. For purposes of the limit on annual additions (sec. 415(c)), the compensation of a disabled employee is deemed to be equal to the annualized compensation of the employee prior to the employee's becoming disabled. Contributions are not permitted on behalf of disabled employees who were officers, owners, or highly compensated before they became disabled.

House bill

The bill provides that the special rule for contributions on behalf of disabled employees is applicable without an employer election and to highly compensated employees if the defined contribution plan provides for the continuation of contributions on behalf of all participants who are permanently and totally disabled.

Effective date.—The provision applies to years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

9. TREATMENT OF DEFERRED COMPENSATION PLANS OF STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS AND TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS (SEC. 14239 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12936 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under a section 457 plan, an employee who elects to defer the receipt of current compensation is taxed on the amounts deferred when such amounts are paid or made available. The maximum annual deferral under such a plan is the lesser of (1) $7,500 or (2) 33⅓ percent of compensation (net of the deferral).

Amounts deferred under a section 457 plan may not be made available to an employee before the earlier of (1) the calendar year in which the participant attains age 70½, (2) when the participant is separated from the service with the employer, or (3) when the participant is faced with an unforeseeable emergency.

Benefits under a section 457 plan are not treated as made available if the participant may elect to receive a lump sum payable after separation from service and within 60 days of the election. This exception is available only if the total amount payable to the participant under the plan does not exceed $3,500 and no additional amounts may be deferred under the plan with respect to the participant.

House bill

The House bill makes three changes to the rules governing section 457 plans.

(1) The bill permits in-service distributions of accounts that do not exceed $3,500 under certain circumstances.

(2) The bill increases the number of elections that can be made with respect to the time distributions must begin under the plan.

(3) The bill provides for indexing of the dollar limit on deferrals. No rounding rules apply to such indexing.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except that a rounding rule applies to the indexing of the dollar limits on deferrals.

Effective date.—Same as House bill.

Conference agreement

Same as the Senate amendment, except when indexing the dollar limit on deferrals, the limit is rounded to the next lowest multiple of $500.

10. TRUST REQUIREMENT FOR DEFERRED COMPENSATION PLANS OF STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS (SEC. 14240 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Until deferrals under a section 457 plan are made available to a plan participant, such amounts deferred, all property and rights purchased with such amounts, and all income attributable to such amounts, property, or rights must remain solely the property and rights of the employer, subject only to the claims of the employer's general creditors.

House bill

Under the House bill, all amounts deferred under a section 457 plan maintained by a State and local governmental employer are to be held in trust (or custodial account or annuity contract) for the exclusive benefit of employees. The trust (or custodial account or annuity contract) is provided tax-exempt status. Amounts are not considered made available merely because they are held in a trust, custodial account, or annuity contract.

Effective date.—Generally effective with respect to plan assets held on or after the date of enactment. In the case of assets held within the 90-day period after the date of enactment, the provision does not apply until such 90th day.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

Effective date.—Generally effective with respect to amounts held on or after the date of enactment. In the case of amounts deferred before the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular session of the State legislature beginning after the date of enactment, a trust need not be established by reason of this provision before such first day. In the case of a State that has a 2-year legislative session, each year of such session is deemed to be a separate regular session of the State legislature.

11. CORRECTION OF GATT INTEREST AND MORTALITY RATE PROVISIONS IN THE RETIREMENT PROTECTION ACT (SEC. 14241 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The Retirement Protection Act of 1994, enacted as part of the implementing legislation for the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), modified the actuarial assumptions that must be used in adjusting benefits and limitations. In general, in adjusting a benefit that is payable in a form other than a straight life annuity and in adjusting the dollar limitation if benefits begin before Social Security retirement age, the interest rate to be used cannot be less than the greater of 5 percent or the rate specified in the plan. Under the Retirement Protection Act, if the benefit is payable in a form subject to the requirements of section 417(e)(3), then the interest rate on 30-year Treasury securities is substituted for 5 percent. Also under the Retirement Protection Act, for purposes of adjusting any limit or benefit, the mortality table prescribed by the Secretary must be used.

This provision of the Retirement Protection Act is generally effective as of the first day of the first limitation year beginning in 1995.

The Retirement Protection Act made similar changes to the interest rate and mortality assumptions used to calculate the value of lump-sum distributions for purposes of the rule permitting involuntary dispositions of certain accrued benefits. In the case of a plan adopted and in effect before December 8, 1995, those provisions do not apply before the earlier of (1) the date a plan amendment applying the new assumption is adopted or made effective (whichever is later), or (2) the first day of the first plan years beginning after December 31, 1999.

House bill

The House bill conforms the effective date of the new interest rate and mortality assumptions that must be used under section 415 to calculate the limits on benefits and contributions to the effective date of the provision relating to the calculation of lump-sum distributions. This rule applies only in the case of plans that were adopted and in effect before the date of enactment of the Retirement Protection Act (December 8, 1994).

To the extent plans have already been amended to reflect the new assumptions, plan sponsors are permitted within 1 year of the date of enactment to amend the plan to reverse retroactively such amendment.

Effective date.—Effective as if included in the Retirement Protection Act.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except the provision repeals the Retirement Protection Act provision which requires that if the benefit is payable in a form subject to the requirements of section 417(e)(3) (e.g., lump sum), then the interest rate to be used to reduce the dollar limit on benefits under section 415 cannot be less than the greater of the rate on 30-year Treasury securities or the rate specified in the plan. Consequently, regardless of the form of benefit, the interest rate to be used cannot be less than the greater of 5 percent or the rate specified in the plan.

Effective date.—Same as the House bill.

12. MULTIPLE SALARY REDUCTION AGREEMENTS PERMITTED UNDER SECTION 403(B) (SEC. 14242 OF THE BILL AND SEC. 12941 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under Treasury regulations, a participant in a tax-sheltered annuity plan (sec. 403(b)) is not permitted to enter into more than one salary reduction agreement in any taxable year. These regulations further provide that a salary reduction agreement is effective only with respect to amounts "earned" after the agreement becomes effective, and that a salary reduction agreement must be irrevocable with respect to amounts earned while the agreement is in effect.

These restrictions do not apply to other elective deferral arrangements such as a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (sec. 401(k)). Under Treasury regulations, participants in a qualified cash or deferred arrangement may enter into more than one salary reduction agreement in a taxable year, such an agreement is effective with respect to compensation currently available to the participant after the agreement becomes effective even though previously "earned," and the agreement may be revoked by the participant.

House bill

The bill provides that for participants in a tax-sheltered annuity plan, the frequency that a salary reduction agreement may be entered into, the compensation to which such agreement applies, and the ability to revoke such agreement shall be determined under the rules applicable to qualified cash or deferred arrangements.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

13. WAIVER OF MINIMUM WAITING PERIOD FOR QUALIFIED PLAN DISTRIBUTIONS (SEC. 14243 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under present law, in the case of a qualified joint and survivor annuity, a written explanation of the form of benefit must generally be provided to participants no less than 30 days and no more than 90 days before the annuity starting day. Even if a participant has elected to waive the qualified joint and survivor annuity and the spouse has consented to the distribution, the distribution from the plan cannot be made until 30 days after the written explanation was provided to the participant.[97]

House bill

The House bill provides that the minimum period between the date the explanation of the qualified joint and survivor annuity is provided and the annuity starting date does not apply if it is waived by the participant and, if applicable, the participant's spouse. For example, if the participant has not elected to waive the qualified joint and survivor annuity, only the participant need waive the minimum waiting period.

Effective date.—The provision is effective with respect to plan years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

---

[97] On September 15, 1995, Treasury issued temporary regulations (T.D. 8620) which provide that a plan may permit a participant to elect (with any applicable spousal consent) a distribution with an annuity starting date before 30 days have elapsed since the explanation was provided, as long as the distribution commences more than seven days after the explanation was provided. Consequently, even if the participant (and spouse, if applicable) has elected to waive the minimum waiting period for receiving a qualified plan distribution, the distribution from the plan cannot be made until seven days have elapsed since the explanation was provided to the participant.

14. REPEAL OF COMBINED PLAN LIMIT (SEC. 14244 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12921 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Present law provides limits on contributions and benefits under qualified plans based on the type of plan, i.e., based on whether the plan is a defined contribution plan or a defined benefit pension plan.

Combined plan limit.—An overall limit applies if an individual is a participant in both a defined benefit pension plan and a defined contribution plan (the combined plan limit).

Excess distribution tax.—Present law imposes a 15-percent excise tax on excess distributions from qualified retirement plans, tax-sheltered annuities, and IRAs. Excess distributions are generally the aggregate amount of retirement distributions from such plans during any calendar year in excess of $150,000 (or $750,000 in the case of a lump-sum distribution). An additional 15-percent estate tax is also imposed on an individual's excess retirement accumulation.

House bill

Combined plan limit.—The House bill repeals the combined plan limit.

Effective date.—Limitation years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Excess distribution tax.—No provision.

Senate amendment

Combined plan limit.—Same as House bill, except that the repeal of the combined plan limit would not apply with respect to plans maintained by professional service employers (an employer substantially all of the activities of which are in the fields of architecture, science, health, law, performing arts, financial services, actuarial services, engineering, accounting, and consulting).

Effective date.—Limitation years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Excess distribution tax.—Until the repeal of the combined plan limit is effective, the Senate amendment suspends the excise tax on excess distributions. The additional estate tax on excess accumulations continues to apply.

Effective date.—Distributions in 1996, 1997, and 1998.

Conference agreement

Combined plan limit.—The conference agreement follows the House bill, effective with respect to limitation years beginning after December 31, 1998.

Excess distribution tax.—The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

15. DATE FOR ADOPTION OF PLAN AMENDMENTS (SEC. 14245 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12914 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Plan amendments to reflect amendments to the law generally must be made by the time prescribed by law for filing the income tax return of the employer for the employer's taxable year in which the change in law occurs.

House bill

The House bill generally provides that any plan amendments required by the bill are not required to be made before the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1997.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except that the date for plan amendments is extended to the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1999, in the case of a governmental plan.

Effective date.—Same as House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill or the Senate amendment.

16. FULL FUNDING LIMITATION OF MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS (SEC. 12934 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

An employer may make deductible contributions to a defined benefit pension plan up to the full funding limitation. The full funding limitation is generally defined as the lesser of (1) the accrued liability under the plan or (2) 150 percent of the plan's current liability. Valuation of defined benefit pension plans are required annually.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides that the 150 percent of current liability limitation does not apply to multiemployer plans. In addition, the amendment repeals the annual valuation requirement for multiemployer plans and applies the prior-law rule that valuations generally be performed at least every 3 years.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1997.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

17. LIMITS ON CONTRIBUTIONS AND BENEFITS UNDER MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS (SEC. 12935 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Present law imposes limits on contributions and benefits under qualified plans based on the type of plan (sec. 415). In the case of a defined benefit pension plan, the limit on the annual retirement benefit is the lesser of (1) 100 percent of compensation or (2) $120,000 (indexed for inflation). The dollar limit is reduced in the case of early retirement or if the employee has less than 10 years of plan participation.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, in the case of a multiemployer plan, the 100 percent of compensation limit, the early retirement reduction, and the 10-year phase in of the defined benefit plan dollar limit do not apply.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

18. TENURED FACULTY (SEC. 12939 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under a section 457 plan, an employee who elects to defer the receipt of current compensation is taxed on the amounts deferred when such amounts are paid or made available. The maximum annual deferral under such a plan is the lesser of (1) $7,500 or (2) 33½ percent of compensation (net of the deferral).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides that the limits of section 457 do not apply to eligible faculty voluntary retirement incentive pay. In order to qualify for the exception, the payments must be made to employees who elect, during a specified period of time of limited duration (as established by the employer) to retire early, the total amount of the payments cannot exceed twice the individual's annual compensation and all such payments to the employee must be completed within 5 years after the employee's termination of employment.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

19. APPLICATION OF ELECTIVE DEFERRAL LIMIT TO SECTION 403(B) PLANS (SEC. 12941 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

A tax-sheltered annuity plan must provide that elective deferrals made under the plan on behalf of an employee may not exceed the annual limit on elective deferrals ($9,500 for 1995). Plans that do not comply with this requirement may lose their tax-favored status.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment eliminates the requirement that a tax-sheltered annuity plan must provide that elective deferrals under the plan may not exceed the annual limit on elective deferrals. As under present law, employees who make elective deferrals in excess of the annual limit must include such amounts in their taxable income.

Effective date.—The provision is effective with respect to plan years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Conference agreement

Under the conference agreement, each tax-sheltered annuity contract, not the tax-sheltered annuity plan, must provide that elective deferrals made under the contract may not exceed the annual limit on elective deferrals. It is intended that the contract terms be given effect in order for this requirement to be satisfied. Thus, for example, if the annuity contract issuer takes no steps to ensure that deferrals under the contract do not exceed the applicable limit, then the contract will not be treated as satisfying section 403(b). The provision is intended to make clear that the exclusion of elective deferrals from gross income by employees who have not exceeded the annual limit on elective deferrals will not be affected to the extent other employees exceed the annual limit. However, if the occurrence of an uncorrected elective deferral made by an employee is attributable to reasonable error, the contract does not fail to satisfy section 403(b), and only the portion of the elective deferral in excess of the annual limit is includible in gross income.

Effective date.—Years beginning after December 31, 1995.

20. TREATMENT OF INDIAN TRIBAL GOVERNMENTS UNDER SECTION 403(B) (SEC. 12941 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Under present law, certain tax-exempt employers and certain State and local government educational organizations are permitted to maintain tax-sheltered annuity plans (sec. 403(b)). Indian tribal governments are treated as States for this purpose, so certain educational organizations associated with a tribal government are eligible to maintain tax-sheltered annuity plans.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides that any 403(b) annuity contract purchased in a plan year beginning before January 1, 1995.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment and also provides that such contracts may be rolled over into a section 401(k) plan maintained by the Indian tribal government pursuant to the conference agreement.

21. TAX ON PROHIBITED TRANSACTIONS (SEC. 12942 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Present law prohibits certain transactions (prohibited transactions) between a qualified pension plan and a disqualified person in order to prevent persons with a close relationship to the qualified plan from using that relationship to the detriment of plan participants and beneficiaries. A two-tier excise tax is imposed on prohibited transactions. The initial level tax is equal to 5 percent of the amount involved with respect to the transaction. If the transaction is not corrected within a certain period, a tax equal to 100 percent of the amount involved may be imposed.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment increases the initial-level prohibited transaction tax from 5 percent to 10 percent.

Effective date.—Transactions occurring after December 31, 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

E. SPECIAL RULES FOR CHURCH PENSION PLANS (SECS. 12951–12968 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

In general, a church plan is a pension plan established and maintained for employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or a church convention or association of churches that is exempt from tax (sec. 414(e)). Church plans include plans maintained by an organization, whether a corporation or otherwise, that has as its principal purpose or function the administration or funding of a plan or program for providing retirement or welfare benefits for the employees of the church or convention or association of churches. For most purposes, employees of a church include any minister, regardless of the source of his or her compensation, and an employee of an organization which is exempt from tax and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.

Plans maintained by churches and certain church-controlled organizations are exempt from certain of the requirements applicable to pension plans under the code pursuant to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended) (''ERISA''). For example, such plans are not subject to ERISA's vesting, coverage, and funding requirements. In some cases, such plans are subject to provisions in effect before the enactment of ERISA. Church plans may elect to waive the exemption from the qualification rules (sec. 410(d)). Electing plans become subject to all the tax code (sec. 401(a)) qualification requirements. Title I of ERISA, the excise tax on prohibited transactions, and participation in the pension plan termination insurance program administered by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.

Certain eligible employers may maintain tax-sheltered annuity plans (sec. 403(b)). These plans provide tax-deferred retirement savings for employees of public education institutions and employees of certain tax-exempt organizations (including churches and certain organizations associated with churches). In addition to tax-sheltered annuities, alternative funding mechanisms that provide similar tax benefits include church-maintained retirement income accounts (sec. 403(b)(9)).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

In general, the Senate amendment revises the rules relating to church-maintained qualified retirement plans. In addition, the Senate amendment modifies the rules relating to employee annuity contracts and retirement income accounts maintained for the benefit of church employees. The Senate amendment also provides that all retirement benefits of ministers are not subject to self-employment taxes.

No inference is intended with respect to the application of the present-law rules to church-maintained qualified retirement plans.

Effective date.—The provisions of the Senate amendment providing special rules for church plans are generally effective for years beginning after December 31, 1994.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the Senate amendment.

XIII. PARTNERSHIP SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS

A. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1. SIMPLIFIED FLOW-THROUGH FOR LARGE PARTNERSHIPS (SEC. 14301 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A partnership generally is treated as a conduit for Federal income tax purposes. Each partner takes into account separately his distributive share of the partnership's items of income, gain, loss, deduction or credit. The character of an item is the same as if it had been directly realized or incurred by the partner. Limitations affecting the computation of taxable income generally apply at the partner level.

The taxable income of a partnership is computed in the same manner as that of an individual, except that no deduction is permitted for personal exemptions, foreign taxes, charitable contributions, net operating losses, certain itemized deductions, or depletion. Elections affecting the computation of taxable income derived from a partnership are made by the partnership, except for certain elections such as those relating to discharge of indebtedness income and the foreign tax credit.

Taxpayers involved in the search for and extraction of crude oil and natural gas are subject to certain special tax rules. As a result, in the case of partnerships engaged in such activities, certain specific information is separately reported to partners.

House bill

The House bill modifies the tax treatment of a large partnership (generally, a partnership with at least 250 partners, or an electing partnership with at least 100 partners) and its partners. The provision provides that each partner takes into account separately the partner's distributive share of the following items, which are determined at the partnership level: (1) taxable income or loss from passive loss limitation activities; (2) taxable income or loss from other activities (e.g., portfolio income or loss); (3) net capital gain or loss to the extent allocable to passive loss limitation activities and other activities; (4) tax-exempt interest; (5) net alternative minimum tax adjustment separately computed for passive loss limitation activities and other activities; (6) general credits; (7) low-income housing credit; (8) rehabilitation credit; (9) credit for producing fuel from a nonconventional source; (10) creditable foreign taxes and foreign source items; and (11) any other items to the extent that the Secretary determines that separate treatment of such items is appropriate.[98] Separate treatment may be appropriate, for example, should changes in the law necessitate such treatment for any items.

Under the House bill, the taxable income of a large partnership is computed in the same manner as that of an individual, except that the items described above are separately stated and certain modifications are made. These modifications include disallowing the deduction for personal exemptions, the net operating loss deduction and certain itemized deductions.[99] All limitations and other provisions affecting the computation of taxable income or any credit (except for the at risk, passive loss and itemized deduction limitations, and any other provision specified in regulations) are applied at the partnership (and not the partner) level.

[98] In determining the amounts required to be separately taken into account by a partner, those provisions of the large partnership rules governing computations of taxable income would be applied separately with respect to that partner by taking into account that partner's distributive share of the partnership's items of income, gain, loss, deduction or credit. This rule permits partnerships to make otherwise valid special allocations of partnership items to partners.

All elections affecting the computation of taxable income or any credit generally are made by the partnership.

A "large partnership" is any partnership with at least 250 partners in any preceding taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995.[100] Any partnership treated as a large partnership for a taxable year is so treated for all succeeding years, even if the number of partners falls below 250. Regulations may provide, however, that if the number of partners in any taxable year falls below 100, the partnership is not treated as a large partnership. Partnerships with at least 100 partners can elect to be treated as large partnerships. The election applies to the year for which made and all subsequent years and cannot be revoked without the Secretary's consent.

Service partnerships.—A large partnership does not include any partnership if substantially all the partners are: (1) individuals performing substantial services in connection with the partnership's activities, or personal service corporations the owner-employees of which perform such services; (2) retired partners who had performed such services; or (3) spouses of partners who had performed such services. In addition, the term "partner" does not include any individual performing substantial services in connection with the partnership's activities and holding a partnership interest, or an individual who formerly performed such services and who held a partnership interest at the time the individual performed such services.

Commodity partnerships.—The large partnership rules do not apply to any partnership the principal activity of which is the buying and selling of commodities (not described in sec. 1221(l)), or options, futures or forwards with respect to commodities.

Partnerships holding oil and gas properties.—In general, a large partnership that otherwise meets the qualifications for simplified reporting is not required to report information to its partners under the rules of that regime if it is substantially engaged in oil and gas related activities. Rather, such a partnership continues to report information to its partners as under present law. The bill permits such a partnership, however, to elect to utilize the simplified reporting regime, as modified for oil and gas purposes. If an election is made for any taxable year, it will also apply for all subsequent taxable years unless revoked with the consent of the Secretary.

[99] A large partnership would be allowed a deduction under section 212 for expenses incurred for the production of income, subject to 70-percent disallowance. No income from a large partnership would be treated as fishing or farming income.

[100] The number of partners is determined by counting only persons directly holding partnership interests in the taxable year, including persons holding through nominees; persons holding indirectly (e.g., through another partnership) are not counted. It is not necessary for a partnership to have 250 or more partners at any one time in a taxable year for the partnership to constitute a large partnership.

A partnership is considered to be substantially engaged in oil and gas activities if at least 25 percent of the average value of its assets during the taxable year consists of oil or gas properties.[101] In making this determination, a partnership is treated as owning its proportionate share of assets of any partnership in which it holds an interest.

The bill provides special rules for large partnerships with oil and gas activities that operate under the simplified reporting regime (i.e., either (1) large partnerships that are substantially engaged in oil and gas activities and which elect to use the regime, or (2) large partnerships that are not substantially engaged in oil and gas operations, but do have some oil and gas activities).

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, with a modification of the definition of a partnership to which the simplified flow-through rules apply. Under the conference agreement, a partnership to which these rules apply is an electing large partnership, which is defined as any partnership that elects under the provision, if the number of partners in the preceding partnership taxable year is 100 or more. To the extent so provided in regulations, if the number of partners in any taxable year falls below 100, the partnership is not treated as a large partnership. The conference agreement retains the House bill rules relating to service partnerships, commodity partnerships, and partnerships holding oil and gas properties.

2. SIMPLIFIED AUDIT PROCEDURES FOR LARGE PARTNERSHIPS (SEC. 14302 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 ("TEFRA") established unified audit rules applicable to all but certain small (10 or fewer partners) partnerships. These rules require the tax treatment of all "partnership items" to be determined at the partnership, rather than the partner, level. Partnership items are those items that are more appropriately determined at the partnership level than at the partner level, as provided by regulations.

Under the TEFRA rules, a partner must report all partnership items consistently with the partnership return or must notify the IRS of any inconsistency. If a partner fails to report any partnership item consistently with the partnership return, the IRS may make a computational adjustment and immediately assess any additional tax that results.

[101] For this purpose, "oil or gas properties" means the mineral interests in oil gas which are of a character with respect to which a deduction for depletion is allowable under section 611.

Under the TEFRA rules, a partner must report all partnership items consistently with the partnership return or must notify the IRS of any inconsistency. If a partner fails to report any partnership item consistently with the partnership return, the IRS may make a computational adjustment and immediately assess any additional tax that results.

The IRS may challenge the reporting position of a partnership by conducting a single administrative proceeding to resolve the issue with respect to all partners. But the IRS must still assess any resulting deficiency against each of the taxpayers who were partners in the year in which the understatement of tax liability arose.

The IRS generally is required to give notice of the beginning of partnership-level administrative proceedings and any resulting administrative adjustment to all partners whose names and addresses are furnished to the IRS. For partnerships with more than 100 partners, however, the IRS generally is not required to give notice to any partner whose profits interest is less than one percent.

House bill

The House bill creates a new audit system for large partnerships. The provision defines "large partnership" the same way for audit and reporting purposes (generally partnerships with at least 250 partners) except that certain oil and gas partnerships exempted from the large partnership reporting requirements are large partnerships for the audit rules.

As under present law, large partnerships and their partners are subject to unified audit rules. Thus, the tax treatment of "partnership items" are determined at the partnership, rather than the partner, level. The term "partnership items" is defined as under present law.

Unlike present law, however, partnership adjustments generally will flow through to the partners for the year in which the adjustment takes effect. Thus, the current-year partners' share of current-year partnership items of income, gains, losses, deductions, or credits will be adjusted to reflect partnership adjustments that take effect in that year. The adjustments generally will not affect prior-year returns of any partners (except in the case of changes to any partner's distributive shares).

In lieu of flowing an adjustment through to its partners, the partnership may elect to pay an imputed underpayment. The imputed underpayment generally is calculated by netting the adjustments to the income and loss items of the partnership and multiplying that amount by the highest tax rate (whether individual or corporate). A partner may not file a claim for credit or refund of his allocable share of the payment. A partnership may make this election only if it meets requirements set forth in Treasury regulations designed to ensure payment (for example, in the case of a foreign partnership).

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

3. DUE DATE FOR FURNISHING INFORMATION TO PARTNERS OF LARGE PARTNERSHIPS (SEC. 14303 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A partnership required to file an income tax return with the Internal Revenue Service must also furnish an information return to each of its partners on or before the day on which the income tax return for the year is required to be filed, including extensions. Under regulations, a partnership must file its income tax return on or before the fifteenth day of the fourth month following the end of the partnership's taxable year (on or before April 15, for calendar year partnerships). This is the same deadline by which most individual partners must file their tax returns.

House bill

The House bill provides that a large partnership must furnish information returns to partners by the first March 15 following the close of the partnership's taxable year. Large partnerships are only those partnerships subject to the simplified reporting rules for large partnerships (generally, those with at least 250 partners, or electing partnerships with at least 100 partners).

The provision also provides that, if the partnership is required to provide copies of the information returns to the Internal Revenue Service on magnetic media, each schedule (such as each Schedule K–1) with respect to each partner is treated as a separate information return with respect to the corrective periods and penalties that are generally applicable to all information returns.

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

4. PARTNERSHIP RETURNS REQUIRED ON MAGNETIC MEDIA (SEC. 14304 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Partnerships are permitted, but not required, to provide the tax return of the partnership (Form 1065), as well as copies of the schedules sent to each partner (Form K–1), to the Internal Revenue Service on magnetic media.

House bill

The bill provides generally that any partnership is required to provide the tax return of the partnership (Form 1065), as well as copies of the schedule sent to each partner (Form K–1), to the Internal Revenue Service on magnetic media. An exception is provided for partnerships with 100 or fewer partners.

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP ITEMS OF INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS (SEC. 14305 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Return filing requirements

An individual retirement account (''IRA'') is a trust which generally is exempt from taxation except for the taxes imposed on income from an unrelated trade or business. A fiduciary of a trust that is exempt from taxation (but subject to the taxes imposed on income from an unrelated trade or business) generally is required to file a return on behalf of the trust for a taxable year if the trust has gross income of $1,000 or more included in computing unrelated business taxable income for that year (Treas. Reg. sec. 1.6012–3(a)(5)).

Unrelated business taxable income is the gross income (including gross income from a partnership) derived by an exempt organization from an unrelated trade or business, less certain deductions which are directly connected with the carrying on of such trade or business (sec. 512(a)(1). In calculating unrelated business taxable income, exempt organizations (including IRAs) generally also are permitted a specific deduction of $1,000 (sec. 512(b)(12)).

Unified audits of partnerships

All but certain small partnerships are subject to unified audit rules established by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. These rules require the tax treatment of all "partnership items" to be determined at the partnership, rather than the partner, level. Partnership items are those items that are more appropriately determined at the partnership level than at the partner level, including such items as gross income and deductions of the partnership.

House bill

The House bill modifies the filing threshold for an IRA with an interest in a partnership that is subject to the partnership-level audit rules. A fiduciary of such an IRA could treat the trust's share of partnership taxable income as gross income, for purposes of determining whether the trust meets the $1,000 gross income filing threshold. A fiduciary of an IRA that receives taxable income from a partnership that is subject to partnership-level audit rules of less than $1,000 (before the $1,000 specific deduction) is not required to file an income tax return if the IRA does not have any other income from an unrelated trade or business.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

B. OTHER PARTNERSHIP AUDIT RULES

1. TREATMENT OF PARTNERSHIP ITEMS IN DEFICIENCY PROCEEDINGS (SEC. 14311 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Partnership proceedings under rules enacted in TEFRA[102] must be kept separate from deficiency proceedings involving the partners in their individual capacities. Prior to the Tax Court's opinion in Munro v. Commissioner, 92 T.C. 71 (1989), the IRS computed deficiencies by assuming that all items that were subject to the TEFRA partnership procedures were correctly reported on the taxpayer's return. However, where the losses claimed from TEFRA partnerships were so large that they offset any proposed adjustments to nonpartnership items, no deficiency could arise from a non-TEFRA proceeding, and if the partnership losses were subsequently disallowed in a partnership proceeding, the non-TEFRA adjustments might be uncollectible because of the expiration of the statute of limitations with respect to nonpartnership items.

Faced with this situation in Munro, the IRS issued a notice of deficiency to the taxpayer that presumptively disallowed the taxpayer's TEFRA partnership losses for computational purposes only. Although the Tax Court ruled that a deficiency existed and that the court had jurisdiction to hear the case, the court disapproved of the methodology used by the IRS to compute the deficiency. Specifically, the court held that partnership items (whether income, loss, deduction, or credit) included on a taxpayer's return must be completely ignored in determining whether a deficiency exists that is attributable to nonpartnership items.

House bill

The House bill overrules Munro and allow the IRS to return to its prior practice of computing deficiencies by assuming that all TEFRA items whose treatment has not been finally determined had been correctly reported on the taxpayer's return. This eliminates the need to do special computations that involve the removal of TEFRA items from a taxpayer's return, and will restore to taxpayers a prepayment forum with respect to the TEFRA items. In addition, the provision provides a special rule to address the factual situation presented in Munro.

Specifically, the House bill provides a declaratory judgment procedure in the Tax Court for adjustments to an oversheltered return. An oversheltered return is a return that shows no taxable income and a net loss from TEFRA partnerships. In such a case, the IRS is authorized to issue a notice of adjustment with respect to non-TEFRA items, notwithstanding that no deficiency would result from the adjustment. However, the IRS could only issue such a notice if a deficiency would have arisen in the absence of the net loss from TEFRA partnerships.

The Tax Court is granted jurisdiction to determine the correctness of such an adjustment as well as to make a declaration with respect to any other item for the taxable year to which the notice of adjustment relates, except for partnership items and affected items which require partner-level determinations. No tax is due upon such a determination, but a decision of the Tax Court is treated as a final decision, permitting an appeal of the decision by either the taxpayer or the IRS. An adjustment determined to be correct would thus have the effect of increasing the taxable income that is deemed to have been reported on the taxpayer's return. If the taxpayer's partnership items were then adjusted in a subsequent proceeding, the IRS has preserved its ability to collect tax on any increased deficiency attributable to the nonpartnership items.

Alternatively, if the taxpayer chooses not to contest the notice of adjustment within the 90-day period, the bill provides that when the taxpayer's partnership items are finally determined, the taxpayer has the right to file a refund claim for tax attributable to the items adjusted by the earlier notice of adjustment for the taxable year. Although a refund claim is not generally permitted with respect to a deficiency arising from a TEFRA proceeding, such a rule is appropriate with respect to a defaulted notice of adjustment because taxpayers may not challenge such a notice when issued since it does not require the payment of additional tax.

In addition, the House bill incorporates a number of provisions intended to clarify the coordination between TEFRA audit proceedings and individual deficiency proceedings. Under these provisions, any adjustment with respect to a non-partnership item that caused an increase in tax liability with respect to a partnership item would be treated as a computational adjustment and assessed after the conclusion of the TEFRA proceeding. Accordingly, deficiency procedures do not apply with respect to this increase in tax liability, and the statute of limitations applicable to TEFRA proceedings are controlling.

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. PARTNERSHIP RETURN TO BE DETERMINATIVE OF AUDIT PROCEDURES TO BE FOLLOWED (SEC. 14312 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

TEFRA established unified audit rules applicable to all partnerships, except for partnerships with 10 or fewer partners, each of whom is a natural person (other than a nonresident alien) or an estate, and for which each partner's share of each partnership item is the same as that partner's share of every other partnership item. Partners in the exempted partnerships are subject to regular deficiency procedures.

House bill

The House bill permits the IRS to apply the TEFRA audit procedures if, based on the partnership's return for the year, the IRS reasonably determines that those procedures should apply. Similarly, the provision permits the IRS to apply the normal deficiency procedures if, based on the partnership's return for the year, the IRS reasonably determines that those procedures should apply.

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

3. PROVISIONS RELATING TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

A. SUSPEND STATUTE WHEN AN UNTIMELY PETITION IS FILED (SEC. 14313(A) OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In a deficiency case, section 6503(a) provides that if a proceeding in respect of the deficiency is placed on the docket of the Tax Court, the period of limitations on assessment and collection is suspended until the decision of the Tax Court becomes final, and for 60 days thereafter. The counterpart to this provision with respect to TEFRA cases is contained in section 6229(d). That section provides that the period of limitations is suspended for the period during which an action may be brought under section 6226 and, if an action is brought during such period, until the decision of the court becomes final, and for 1 year thereafter. As a result of this difference in language, the running of the statute of limitations in a TEFRA case will only be tolled by the filing of a timely petition whereas in a deficiency case, the statute of limitations is tolled by the filing of any petition, regardless of whether the petition is timely.

House bill

The House bill conforms the suspension rule for the filing of petitions in TEFRA cases with the rule under section 6503(a) pertaining to deficiency cases. Under the provision, the statute of limitations in TEFRA cases is suspended by the filing of any petition under section 6226, regardless of whether the petition is timely or valid, and the suspension will remain in effect until the decision of the court becomes final, and for one year thereafter. Hence, if the statute of limitations is open at the time that an untimely petition is filed, the limitations period would no longer continue to run and possibly expire while the action is pending before the court.

Effective date.—All cases in which the period of limitations has not expired under present law as of the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

B. SUSPEND STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS DURING BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS (SEC. 14313(B) OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The period for assessing tax with respect to partnership items generally is the longer of the periods provided by section 6229 or section 6501. For partnership items that convert to nonpartnership items, section 6229(f) provides that the period for assessing tax shall not expire before the date which is 1 year after the date that the items become nonpartnership items. Section 6503(h) provides for the suspension of the limitations period during the pendency of a bankruptcy proceeding. However, this provision only applies to the limitations periods provided in sections 6501 and 6502.

Under present law, because the suspension provision in section 6503(h) applies only to the limitations periods provided in section 6501 and 6502, some uncertainty exists as to whether section 6503(h) applies to suspend the limitations period pertaining to converted items provided in section 6229(f) when a petition naming a partner as a debtor in a bankruptcy proceeding is filed. As a result, the limitations period provided in section 6229(f) may continue to run during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceeding, notwithstanding that the IRS is prohibited from making an assessment against the debtor because of the automatic stay provisions of the Bankruptcy Code.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that the statute of limitations is suspended for a partner who is named in a bankruptcy petition. The suspension period is for the entire period during which the IRS is prohibited by reason of the bankruptcy proceeding from making an assessment, and for 60 days thereafter. The provision does not purport to create any inference as to the proper interpretation of present law.

Effective date.—All cases in which the period of limitations has not expired under present law as of the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

C. EXTEND STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR BANKRUPT TMPS (SEC. 14313(C) OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Section 6229(b)(1)(B) provides that the statute of limitations is extended with respect to all partners in the partnership by an agreement entered into between the tax matters partner (TMP) and the IRS. However, Temp. Treas. Reg. secs. 301.6231(a)(7)–1T(1)(4) and 301.6231(c)–7T(a) provide that upon the filing of a petition naming a partner as a debtor in a bankruptcy proceeding, that partner's partnership items convert to nonpartnership items, and if the debtor was the tax matters partner, such status terminates. These rules are necessary because of the automatic stay provision contained in 11 U.S.C. sec. 362(a)(8). As a result, if a consent to extend the statute of limitations is signed by a person who would be the TMP but for the fact that at the time that the agreement is executed the person was a debtor in a bankruptcy proceeding, the consent would not be binding on the other partners because the person signing the agreement was no longer the TMP at the time that the agreement was executed.

House bill

The House bill provides that unless the IRS is notified of a bankruptcy proceeding in accordance with regulations, the IRS can rely on a statute extension signed by a person who is the tax matters partner but for the fact that said person was in bankruptcy at the time that the person signed the agreement. Statute extensions granted by a bankrupt TMP in these cases are binding on all of the partners in the partnership. The provision is not intended to create any inference as to the proper interpretation of present law.

Effective date.—Effective for extension agreements entered into after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

4. EXPANSION OF SMALL PARTNERSHIP EXCEPTION (SEC. 14314 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

TEFRA established unified audit rules applicable to all partnerships, except for partnerships with 10 or fewer partners, each of whom is a natural person (other than a nonresident alien) or an estate, and for which each partner's share of each partnership item is the same as that partner's share of every other partnership item. Partners in the exempted partnerships are subject to regular deficiency procedures.

House bill

The House bill permits a small partnership to have a C corporation as a partner or to specially allocate items without jeopardizing its exception from the TEFRA rules. However, the provision retains the prohibition of present law against having a flow-through entity (other than an estate of a deceased partner) as a partner for purposes of qualifying for the small partnership exception.

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

5. EXCLUSION OF PARTIAL SETTLEMENTS FROM 1-YEAR LIMITATION ON ASSESSMENT (SEC. 14315 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The period for assessing tax with respect to partnership items generally is the longer of the periods provided by section 6229 or section 6501. For partnership items that convert to nonpartnership items, section 6229(f) provides that the period for assessing tax shall not expire before the date which is 1 year after the date that the items become nonpartnership items. Section 6231(b)(1)(C) provides that the partnership items of a partner for a partnership taxable year become nonpartnership items as of the date the partner enters into a settlement agreement with the IRS with respect to such items.

House bill

The House bill provides that if a partner and the IRS enter into a settlement agreement with respect to some but not all of the partnership items in dispute for a partnership taxable year and other partnership items remain in dispute, the period for assessing any tax attributable to the settled items is determined as if such agreement had not been entered into. Consequently, the limitations period that is applicable to the last item to be resolved for the partnership taxable year is controlling with respect to all disputed partnership items for the partnership taxable year. The provision does not purport to create any inference as to the proper interpretation of present law.

Effective date.—Settlements entered into after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

6. EXTENSION OF TIME FOR FILING A REQUEST FOR ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT (SEC. 14316 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

If an agreement extending the statute is entered into with respect to a non-TEFRA statute of limitations, that agreement also extends the statute of limitations for filing refund claims (sec. 6511(c)). There is no comparable provision for extending the time for filing refund claims with respect to partnership items subject to the TEFRA partnership rules.

House bill

The House bill provides that if a TEFRA statute extension agreement is entered into, that agreement also extends the statute of limitations for filing refund claims attributable to partnership items or affected items until 6 months after the expiration of the limitations period for assessments.

Effective date.—Effective as if included in the amendments made by section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

7. AVAILABILITY OF INNOCENT SPOUSE RELIEF IN CONTEXT OF PARTNERSHIP PROCEEDINGS (SEC. 14317 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In general, an innocent spouse may be relieved of liability for tax, penalties and interest if certain conditions are met (sec. 6013(e)). However, existing law does not provide the spouse of a partner in a TEFRA partnership with a judicial forum to raise the innocent spouse defense with respect to any tax or interest that relates to an investment in a TEFRA partnership.

House bill

The House bill provides both a prepayment forum and a refund forum for raising the innocent spouse defense in TEFRA cases.

With respect to a prepayment forum, the provision provides that within 60 days of the date that a notice of computational adjustment relating to partnership items is mailed to the spouse of a partner, the spouse could request that the assessment be abated. Upon receipt of such a request, the assessment is abated and any reassessment will be subject to the deficiency procedures. If an abatement is requested, the statute of limitations does not expire before the date which is 60 days after the date of the abatement. If the spouse files a petition with the Tax Court, the Tax Court only has jurisdiction to determine whether the requirements of section 6013(e) have been satisfied. In making this determination, the treatment of the partnership items that gave rise to the liability in question is conclusive.

Alternatively, the House bill provides that the spouse of a partner could file a claim for refund to raise the innocent spouse defense. The claim has to be filed within 6 months from the date that the notice of computational adjustment is mailed to the spouse. If the claim is not allowed, the spouse could file a refund action. For purposes of any claim or suit under this provision, the treatment of the partnership items that gave rise to the liability in question is conclusive.

Effective date.—Effective as if included in the amendments made by section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

8. DETERMINATION OF PENALTIES AT PARTNERSHIP LEVEL (SEC. 14318 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Partnership items include only items that are required to be taken into account under the income tax subtitle. Penalties are not partnership items since they are contained in the procedure and administration subtitle. As a result, penalties may only be asserted against a partner through the application of the deficiency procedures following the completion of the partnership-level proceeding.

House bill

The House bill provides that the partnership-level proceeding is to include a determination of the applicability of penalties at the partnership level. However, the provision allows partners to raise any partner-level defenses in a refund forum.

Effective date.—Effective for partnership taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

9. PROVISIONS RELATING TO TAX COURT JURISDICTION (SEC. 14319 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Improper assessment and collection activities by the IRS during the 150-day period for filing a petition or during the pendency of any Tax Court proceeding, "may be enjoined in the proper court." Present law may be unclear as to whether this includes the Tax Court.

For a partner other than the Tax Matters Partner to be eligible to file a petition for redetermination of partnership items in any court or to participate in an existing case, the period for assessing any tax attributable to the partnership items of that partner must not have expired. Since such a partner would only be treated as a party to the action if the statute of limitations with respect to them was still open, the law is unclear whether the partner would have standing to assert that the statute of limitations had expired with respect to them.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that an action to enjoin premature assessments of deficiencies attributable to partnership items may be brought in the Tax Court. The provision also permits a partner to participate in an action or file a petition for the sole purpose of asserting that the period of limitations for assessing any tax attributable to partnership items has expired for that person. Additionally, the provision clarifies that the Tax Court has overpayment jurisdiction with respect to affected items.

Effective date.—Effective for partnership taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

10. TREATMENT OF PREMATURE PETITIONS FILED BY NOTICE PARTNERS OR 5-PERCENT GROUPS (SEC. 14320 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The Tax Matters Partner is given the exclusive right to file a petition for a readjustment of partnership items within the 90-day period after the issuance of the notice of a final partnership administrative adjustment (FPAA). If the Tax Matters Partner does not file a petition within the 90-day period, certain other partners are permitted to file a petition within the 60-day period after the close of the 90-day period. There are ordering rules for determining which action goes forward and for dismissing other actions.

House bill

The House bill treats premature petitions filed by certain partners within the 90-day period as being filed on the last day of the following 60-day period under specified circumstances, thus affording the partnership with an opportunity for judicial review that is not available under present law.

Effective date.—Effective with respect to petitions filed after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

11. BONDS IN CASE OF APPEALS FROM CERTAIN PROCEEDINGS (SEC. 14321 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A bond must be filed to stay the collection of deficiencies pending the appeal of the Tax Court's decision in a TEFRA proceeding. The amount of the bond must be based on the court's estimate of the aggregate deficiencies of the partners.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that the amount of the bond should be based on the Tax Court's estimate of the aggregate liability of the parties to the action (and not all of the partners in the partnership). For purposes of this provision, the amount of the bond could be estimated by applying the highest individual rate to the total adjustments determined by the Tax Court and doubling that amount to take into account interest and penalties.

Effective date.—Effective as if included in the amendments made by section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

12. SUSPENSION OF INTEREST WHERE DELAY IN COMPUTATIONAL ADJUSTMENT RESULTING FROM CERTAIN SETTLEMENTS (SEC. 14322 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Interest on a deficiency generally is suspended when a taxpayer executes a settlement agreement with the IRS and waives the restrictions on assessments and collections, and the IRS does not issue a notice and demand for payment of such deficiency within 30 days. Interest on a deficiency that results from an adjustment of partnership items in TEFRA proceedings, however, is not suspended.

House bill

The House bill suspends interest where there is a delay in making a computational adjustment relating to a TEFRA settlement.

Effective date.—Effective with respect to adjustments relating to taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

13. SPECIAL RULES FOR ADMINISTRATIVE ADJUSTMENT REQUESTS WITH RESPECT TO BAD DEBTS OR WORTHLESS SECURITIES (SEC. 14323 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The non-TEFRA statute of limitations for filing a claim for credit or refund generally is the later of (1) three years from the date the return in question was filed or (2) two years from the date the claimed tax was paid, whichever is later (sec. 6511(b)). However, an extended period of time, seven years from the date the return was due, is provided for filing a claim for refund of an overpayment resulting from a deduction for a worthless security or bad debt (sec. 6511(d)).

Under the TEFRA partnership rules, a request for administrative adjustment ("RAA") must be filed within three years after the later of (1) the date the partnership return was filed or (2) the due date of the partnership return (determined without regard to extensions) (sec. 6227(a)(1)). In addition, the request must be filed before a final partnership administrative adjustment ("FPAA") is mailed for the taxable year (sec. 6227(a)(2)). There is no special provision for extending the time for filing an RAA that relates to a deduction for a worthless security or an entirely worthless bad debt.

House bill

The House bill extends the time for the filing of an RAA relating to the deduction by a partnership for a worthless security or bad debt. In these circumstances, in lieu of the three-year period provided in sec. 6227(a)(1), the period for filing an RAA is seven years from the date the partnership return was due with respect to which the request is made (determined without regard to extensions). The RAA is still required to be filed before the FPAA is mailed for the taxable year.

Effective date.—Effective as if included in the amendments made by section 402 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.

XIV. Foreign Simplification Provisions

A. Modification of Passive Foreign Investment Company Provisions to Eliminate Overlap With Subpart F and to Allow Mark-to-Market Election (Secs. 14401–14404 of the House Bill)

Present law

Under the rules of subpart F (secs. 951–964), certain 10-percent U.S. shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) are required to include in income currently their shares of certain earnings of the CFC.

U.S. shareholders of a passive foreign investment company (PFIC) are subject to tax and an interest charge reflecting the value of deferral when earnings of the PFIC are included in the shareholders' income upon a distribution from the PFIC or a disposition of the PFIC stock. Alternatively, the U.S. shareholders may elect to include in income currently their shares of the PFIC's earnings.

A foreign corporation is a PFIC if it satisfies a passive income test or a passive asset test. A foreign corporation that is a CFC may also be a PFIC.

House bill

Elimination of overlap between subpart F and the PFIC provisions

In the case of a PFIC that is also a CFC, the House bill generally treats the corporation as not a PFIC with respect to certain 10-percent shareholders. This rule applies if the corporation is a CFC (within the meaning of section 957(a)) and the shareholder is a U.S. shareholder (within the meaning of section 951(b)) of such corporation (i.e., if the shareholder is subject to the current inclusion rules of subpart F with respect to such corporation). Moreover, the rule applies for that portion of the shareholder's holding period with respect to the corporation's stock which is after December 31, 1995 and during which the corporation is a CFC and the shareholder is a U.S. shareholder. Accordingly, a shareholder that is subject to current inclusion under the subpart F rules with respect to stock of a PFIC that is also a CFC generally is not also subject to the PFIC provisions with respect to the same stock. As under present law, the PFIC provisions continue to apply in the case of a PFIC that is also a CFC to shareholders that are not subject to subpart F (i.e., to shareholders that are U.S. persons and that own (directly, indirectly, or constructively) less than 10 percent of the corporation's stock by vote).

If a shareholder of a PFIC is subject to the rules applicable to nonqualified funds before becoming eligible for the special rules provided under the House bill for shareholders that are subject to subpart F, the stock held by such shareholder continues to be treated as PFIC stock unless the shareholder makes an election to pay tax and an interest charge with respect to the unrealized appreciation in the stock or the accumulated earnings of the corporation. This rule, which applies under current law to PFICs that had been nonqualified funds and that cease to satisfy the tests for PFIC status, prevents the shareholder from avoiding the interest charge imposed by the PFIC rules with respect to amounts accumulated by the PFIC while the shareholder held stock of the corporation but before the shareholder was subject to subpart F.

If a shareholder is not subject to the PFIC provisions because the shareholder is subject to subpart F and the shareholder subsequently ceases to be subject to subpart F with respect to the corporation, for purposes of the PFIC provisions, the shareholder's holding period for such stock is treated as beginning immediately after such cessation. Accordingly, in applying the rules applicable to PFICs that are not qualified electing funds, the earnings of the corporation are not attributed to the period during which the shareholder was subject to subpart F with respect to the corporation and was not subject to the PFIC provisions.

Mark-to-market election

The House bill allows a shareholder of a PFIC to make a mark-to-market election with respect to the stock of the PFIC, provided that such stock is marketable (as defined below). Under such an election, the shareholder includes in income each year an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the fair market value of the PFIC stock as of the close of the taxable year over the shareholder's adjusted basis in such stock. The shareholder is allowed a deduction for the excess, if any, of the adjusted basis of the PFIC stock over its fair market value as of the close of the taxable year. However, deductions are allowable under this rule only to the extent of the excess, if any, of the total amount of mark-to-market gains with respect to the stock included by the shareholder for prior taxable years over the amount of mark-to-market losses with respect to such stock that were allowed as deductions for prior taxable years.

The election provided in the House bill is available only for PFIC stock that is "marketable." For this purpose, PFIC stock is considered marketable if it is regularly traded on a national securities exchange that is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission or on the national market system established pursuant to section 11A of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934. In addition, PFIC stock is considered marketable if it is regularly traded on any exchange or market that the Secretary of the Treasury determines has rules sufficient to ensure that the market price represents a legitimate and sound fair market value. In identifying foreign exchanges that qualify for these purposes, it is intended that the Secretary not be required to include exchanges that satisfy standards established under Federal securities law and regulations. Any option on stock that is considered marketable under the foregoing rules is treated as marketable, to the extent provided in regulations. It is intended that the Secretary may adopt a definition of the term "regularly traded" that differs from definitions provided for other purposes under the Code. Further, it is intended that the Secretary not be bound by definitions applied for purposes of enforcing other laws, including securities laws. PFIC stock also is treated as marketable, to the extent provided in regulations, if the PFIC offers for sale (or has outstanding) stock of which it is the issuer and which is redeemable at its net asset value in a manner comparable to a U.S. regulated investment company (RIC).

In addition, the House bill treats as marketable any PFIC stock owned by a RIC that offers for sale (or has outstanding) any stock of which it is the issuer and which is redeemable at its net asset value. It is believed that the RIC's determination of PFIC stock value for this non-tax purpose would ensure a sufficiently accurate determination of the fair market value of the PFIC stock owned by the RIC. The House bill also treats as marketable any PFIC stock held by any other RIC that otherwise publishes net asset valuations at least annually, except to the extent provided in regulations. It is believed that even for RICs that do not make a market in their own stock, but that do regularly report their net asset values in compliance with the securities laws, inaccurate valuation may bring exposure to legal liabilities, and this exposure may ensure the reliability of the values such RICs assign to the PFIC stock they hold. However, it is intended that Treasury regulations will disallow marketable treatment for nonmarketable PFIC stock held by a RIC that is not required to perform such net asset valuation at the close of each taxable year, that does not publish such valuation, or that otherwise does not provide what the Secretary regards as sufficient indicia of the reliability of its valuations.

The shareholder's adjusted basis in the PFIC stock is adjusted to reflect the amounts included or deducted under this election. In the case of stock owned indirectly by a U.S. person through a foreign entity (as discussed below), the basis adjustments for mark-to-market gains and losses apply to the basis of the PFIC in the hands of the intermediary owner, but only for purposes of the subsequent application of the PFIC rules to the tax treatment of the indirect U.S. owner. In addition, similar basis adjustments are made to the adjusted basis of the property actually held by the U.S. person by reason of which the U.S. person is treated as owning PFIC stock.

Amounts included in income pursuant to a mark-to-market election, as well as gain on the actual sale or other disposition of the PFIC stock, are treated as ordinary income.[103] Ordinary loss treatment also applies to the deductible portion of any mark-to-market loss on PFIC stock, as well as to any loss realized on the actual sale or other disposition of PFIC stock to the extent that the amount of such loss does not exceed the net mark-to-market gains previously included with respect to such stock. The source of amounts with respect to a mark-to-market election generally is determined in the same manner as if such amounts were gain or loss from the sale of stock in the PFIC.

An election to mark to market applies to the taxable year for which made and all subsequent taxable years, unless the PFIC stock ceases to be marketable or the Secretary of the Treasury consents to the revocation of such election.

[103] For purposes of the rules under section 851(b) regarding eligibility as a RIC, income includible pursuant to the election is treated as a dividend.

Under constructive ownership rules, U.S. persons that own PFIC stock through certain foreign entities may make this election with respect to the PFIC. These constructive ownership rules apply to treat PFIC stock owned directly or indirectly by or for a foreign partnership, trust, or estate as owned proportionately by the partners or beneficiaries, except as provided in regulations.[104] Stock in a PFIC that is thus treated as owned by a person is treated as actually owned by that person for purposes of again applying the constructive ownership rules. In the case of a U.S. person that is treated as owning PFIC stock by application of this constructive ownership rule, any disposition by the U.S. person or by any other person that results in the U.S. person being treated as no longer owning the PFIC stock, as well as any disposition by the person actually owning the PFIC stock, is treated as a disposition by the U.S. person of the PFIC stock.

In addition, a CFC that owns stock in a PFIC is treated as a U.S. person that may make the election with respect to such PFIC stock. Any amount includible (or deductible) in the CFC's gross income pursuant to this mark-to-market election is treated as foreign personal holding company income (or a deduction allocable to foreign personal holding company income). The source of such amounts, however, is determined by reference to the actual residence of the CFC.

In the case of a taxpayer that makes the mark-to-market election with respect to stock in a PFIC that is a nonqualified fund after the beginning of the taxpayer's holding period with respect to such stock, a coordination rule applies to ensure that the taxpayer does not avoid the interest charge with respect to amounts attributable to periods before such election. A similar rule applies to RICs that make the mark-to-market election under the House bill after the beginning of their holding period with respect to PFIC stock (to the extent that the regulated investment company had not previously marked to market the stock of the PFIC).

Except as provided in the coordination rules described above, the rules of section 1291 (with respect to nonqualified funds) do not apply to a shareholder of a PFIC if a mark-to-market election is in effect for the shareholder's taxable year. Moreover, in applying section 1291 in a case where a mark-to-market election was in effect for any prior taxable year, the shareholder's holding period for the PFIC stock is treated as beginning immediately after the last taxable year for which such election applied.

A special rule applicable in the case of a PFIC shareholder that becomes a U.S. person treats the adjusted basis of any PFIC stock held by such person on the first day of the year in which such shareholder becomes a U.S. person as equal to the greater of its fair market value on such date or its adjusted basis on such date. Such rule applies only for purposes of the mark-to-market election. This rule ensures that the appreciation in the stock's value prior to the time that the shareholder becomes subject to the U.S. tax jurisdiction is not subject to U.S. tax under the mark-to-market election.

[104] For this purpose, it is intended that proportionate ownership will be determined by taking into account any special or discretionary allocations of the distributions or gains with respect to the PFIC stock.

Clarifications of definition of passive income

The House bill clarifies the definition of passive income for purposes of the PFIC provisions in two respects. First, the House bill clarifies that the same-country exceptions from the definition of foreign personal holding company income in section 954(c) do not apply in determining passive income for purposes of the PFIC definition.[105] Second, the House bill clarifies that foreign trade income of a foreign sales corporation does not constitute passive income for purposes of the PFIC definition.

Effective date

The provision is effective for taxable years of U.S. persons beginning after December 31, 1995, and taxable years of foreign corporations ending with or within such taxable years of U.S. persons.

Senate amendment

No provision.

B. TREATMENT OF CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

1. GENERAL PROVISIONS AFFECTING TREATMENT OF CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS (SECS. 14411–14413 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

If an upper-tier controlled foreign corporation ("CFC") sells stock of a lower-tier CFC, the gain generally is included in the income of certain U.S. shareholders as subpart F income and the U.S. shareholder's basis in the stock of the first-tier CFC is increased to account for the inclusion. The inclusion is not characterized for foreign tax credit limitation purposes by reference to the nature of the income of the lower-tier CFC; instead it generally is characterized as passive income.

For foreign tax credit limitation purposes, a CFC is not treated as a noncontrolled section 902 corporation with respect to any distribution out of its earnings and profits for periods during which it was a CFC and, except as provided in regulations, the recipient of the distribution was a U.S. shareholder in such corporation.

If subpart F income of a lower-tier CFC is included in the gross income of a U.S. shareholder, no provision of present law allows adjustment of the basis of the upper-tier CFC's stock in the lower-tier CFC.

The subpart F income earned by a foreign corporation during its taxable year is taxed to the persons who are U.S. shareholders of the corporation on the last day, in that year, on which the corporation is a CFC. In the case of a U.S. shareholder who acquired stock in a CFC during the year, such inclusions are reduced by all or a portion of the amount of dividends paid in that year by the foreign corporation to any person other than the acquirer with respect to that stock.

[105] H. Rept. No. 100–795, 100th Cong., 2d Sess. 272 (1988); S. Rept. No. 100–445, 100th Cong., 2d Sess. 285 (1988).

If in a year after the year of income inclusion under the subpart F provisions of the Code, a U.S. shareholder in the CFC receives a distribution from the corporation, the distribution may be deemed to come first out of the corporation's previously taxed income and, therefore, may be excluded from the U.S. shareholder's income. However, a distribution by a foreign corporation to a domestic corporation of earnings and profits previously taxed under subpart F is treated as an actual dividend, solely for purposes of determining the indirect foreign tax credit available to the domestic corporation.

As a general rule, subpart F income does not include income earned from sources within the United States if the income is effectively connected with the conduct of a U.S. trade or business by the CFC. This general rule does not apply, however, if the income is exempt from, or subject to a reduced rate of, U.S. tax pursuant to a provision of a U.S. treaty.

A U.S. corporation that owns at least 10 percent of the voting stock of a foreign corporation is treated as if it had paid a share of the foreign income taxes paid by the foreign corporation in the year in which the foreign corporation's earnings and profits become subject to U.S. tax as dividend income of the U.S. shareholder. A U.S. corporation also may be deemed to have paid taxes paid by a second- or third-tier foreign corporation if certain conditions are satisfied.

House bill

Lower-tier controlled foreign corporations

Characterization of gain on stock disposition

The House bill provides that if a CFC is treated as having gain from the sale or exchange of stock in a foreign corporation, the gain is treated as a dividend to the same extent that it would have been so treated under section 1248 if the CFC were a U.S. person. This provision, however, does not affect the determination of whether the corporation whose stock is sold or exchanged is a CFC.

Thus, for example, if a U.S. corporation owns 100 percent of the stock of a foreign corporation, which owns 100 percent of the stock of a second foreign corporation, then under the House bill, any gain of the first corporation upon a sale or exchange of stock of the second corporation is treated as a dividend for purposes of subpart F income inclusions to the U.S. shareholder, to the extent of earnings and profits of the second corporation attributable to periods in which the first foreign corporation owned the stock of the second foreign corporation while the latter was a CFC with respect to the U.S. shareholder.

As another example, assume that the U.S. corporation has always owned 40 percent of the voting stock and 60 percent of the value of all of the stock of a foreign corporation, which has always owned 40 percent of the voting stock and 60 percent of the value of all of the stock of a second foreign corporation. All the other stock of the foreign corporations has always been owned by foreign individuals unrelated to the U.S. corporation. In this case, the second foreign corporation has never been a CFC. Therefore, none of the gain of the first corporation upon a sale of stock of the second corporation is treated as a dividend.

Gain on disposition of stock in a related corporation created or organized under the laws of, and having a substantial part of its assets in a trade or business in, the same foreign country as the gain recipient, even if recharacterized as a dividend under the House bill, is not excluded from foreign personal holding company income under the same-country exception that applies to actual dividends.

The House bill provides that for purposes of this provision, a CFC is treated as having sold or exchanged stock if, under any provision of subtitle A of the Code, the CFC is treated as having gain from the sale or exchange of such stock. Thus, for example, if a CFC distributes to its shareholder stock in a foreign corporation, and the distribution results in gain being recognized by the CFC under section 311(b) as if the stock were sold to the shareholder for fair market value, the House bill makes clear that for purposes of this provision, the CFC is treated as having sold or exchanged the stock.

The House bill also repeals a provision added to the Code by the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 [106] (the "1988 Act") that, except as provided by regulations, requires a recipient of a distribution from a CFC to have been a United States shareholder of that CFC for the period during which the earnings and profits which gave rise to the distribution were generated in order to avoid treating the distribution as one coming from a noncontrolled section 902 corporation. Thus, under the House bill, a CFC is not treated as a noncontrolled section 902 corporation with respect to any distribution out of its earnings and profits for periods during which it was a CFC, whether or not the recipient of the distribution was a U.S. shareholder of the corporation when the earnings and profits giving rise to the distribution were generated.

Adjustments to basis of stock

The House bill also provides that when a lower-tier CFC earns subpart F income, and stock in that corporation is later disposed of by an upper-tier CFC, the resulting income inclusion of the U.S. shareholders are, under regulations, adjusted to account for previous inclusions, in a manner similar to the adjustments currently provided to the basis of stock in a first-tier CFC. Thus, just as the basis of a U.S. shareholder in a first-tier CFC rises when subpart F income is earned and falls when previously taxed income is distributed, so as to avoid double taxation of the income on a later disposition of the stock of that company, it is intended that by regulation the subpart F income from gain on the disposition of a lower-tier CFC generally would be reduced by income inclusions of earnings that were not subsequently distributed by the lower-tier CFC. It is intended that the Secretary will have sufficient flexibility in promulgating regulations under this provision to permit adjustments only in those cases where, by virtue of the historical ownership structure of the corporations involved, the Secretary is satisfied that the inclusions for which adjustments are to be made can be clearly identified.

For example, assume that a U.S. person is the owner of all of the stock of a first-tier CFC which, in turn, is the sole shareholder of a second-tier CFC. In year 1, the second-tier CFC earns $100 of subpart F income which is included in the U.S. person's gross income for that year. In year 2, the first-tier CFC disposes of the second-tier CFC's stock and recognizes $300 of income with respect to the disposition. All of that income would constitute subpart F foreign personal holding company income. Under the House bill, the Secretary is granted regulatory authority to reduce the U.S. person's year 2 subpart F inclusion by $100—the amount of year 1 subpart F income of the second-tier CFC that was included, in that year, in the U.S. person's gross income. Such an adjustment would, in effect, allow for a step-up in the basis of the stock of the second-tier CFC to the extent of its subpart F income previously included in the U.S. person's gross income.

As another example, assume the same facts as in the preceding paragraph except that in year 2, the first-tier CFC distributes the stock of the second-tier CFC to the U.S. person. Assume that as a result of the distribution, the first-tier CFC recognizes taxable income of $300 under section 311(b). This income represents subpart F income, $100 of which is due to no adjustment having been made to the basis of the second-tier CFC's stock for its year 1 subpart F income. The House bill contemplates that in such a situation, the $300 of subpart F income would be reduced under regulations to $200 to account for the year 1 subpart F income inclusion.

Subpart F inclusions in year of acquisition

If a U.S. shareholder acquires the stock of a CFC from another U.S. shareholder during a taxable year of the CFC in which it earns subpart F income, the House bill reduces the acquirer's subpart F income inclusion for that year by a portion of the amount of the dividend deemed (under sec. 1248) to be received by the transferor. The portion by which the inclusion is reduced (as is currently the case if a dividend was paid to the previous owner of the stock) would not exceed the lesser of the amount of dividends with respect to such stock deemed received (under sec. 1248) by other persons during the year or the amount determined by multiplying the subpart F income for the year by the proportion of the year during which the acquiring shareholder did not own the stock.

Distributions of previously taxed income

The House bill clarifies the appropriate scope of regulatory authority with respect to the treatment of cross-chain section 304 dividends out of the earnings of CFCs that were previously included in the income of a U.S. shareholder under subpart F. The House bill contemplates that in such a case, the Secretary in his discretion may by regulation treat such dividends as distributions of previously taxed income, with appropriate basis adjustments. It is also anticipated that other occasions may arise where the exercise of similar regulatory authority may be appropriate to avoid double income inclusions, or an inclusion or exclusion of income without a corresponding basis adjustment. Therefore, the House bill provides that, in addition to cases involving section 304, the Secretary may by regulation modify the application of subpart F in any other case where there would otherwise be a multiple inclusion of any item of income (or an inclusion or exclusion without an appropriate basis adjustment) by reason of the structure of a U.S. shareholder's holdings in CFCs or by reason of other circumstances. The House bill is not intended to create any inference as to the application of present law in these cases.

Treatment of United States income earned by a controlled foreign corporation

The House bill provides that an exemption or reduction by treaty of the branch profits tax that would be imposed under section 884 on a CFC does not affect the general statutory exemption from subpart F income that is granted for U.S. source effectively connected income. For example, assume a CFC earns income of a type that generally would be subpart F income, and that income is earned from sources within the United States in connection with business operations therein. Further assume that repatriation of that income is exempted from the U.S. branch profits tax under a provision of an applicable U.S. income tax treaty. The House bill provides that, notwithstanding the treaty's effect on the branch tax, the income is not treated as subpart F income as long as it is not exempt from U.S. taxation (or subject to a reduced rate of tax) under any other treaty provision.

Extension of indirect foreign tax credit

The House bill extends the application of the indirect foreign tax credit (secs. 902 and 960) to certain taxes paid or accrued by certain fourth-, fifth-, and sixth-tier foreign corporations. In general, three requirements must be satisfied by a foreign company at any of these tiers to qualify for the credit. First, the company must be a CFC. Second, the domestic corporation referred to in section 902(a) must be a U.S. shareholder (as defined in sec. 951(b)) with respect to the foreign company. Third, the product of the percentage ownership of voting stock at each level from the U.S. corporation down must equal at least 5 percent. The House bill limits the application of the indirect foreign tax credit below the third tier to taxes paid or incurred in taxable years during which the payor is a CFC. No inference is intended as to the availability of indirect foreign tax credits, under present law, for taxes paid by foreign corporations in the first three tiers, for periods prior to the time when the present-law ownership requirements were met as to those corporations. All foreign taxes paid below the sixth tier of foreign corporations remain ineligible for the indirect foreign tax credit.

Effective dates

Lower-tier controlled foreign corporations.—The provision of the House bill that treats gains on dispositions of stock in lower-tier CFCs as dividends under section 1248 principles applies to gains recognized on transactions occurring after the date of enactment of the House bill.

The provision that expands look-through treatment, for foreign tax credit limitation purposes, of dividends from CFCs, is effective for distributions after the date of enactment.

The provision that provides for regulatory adjustments to U.S. shareholder inclusions, with respect to gains of CFCs from dispositions of stock in lower-tier CFCs the earnings of which have been previously taxed under the subpart F provisions of the Code, is effective for determining inclusions for taxable years of U.S. shareholders beginning after December 31, 1995. Thus, the House bill permits regulatory adjustments to an inclusion occurring after the effective date to account for income previously taxed under the subpart F provisions occurring both prior to and subsequent to the effective date of the provision.

Subpart F inclusions in year of acquisition.—The provision that permits dispositions of stock to be taken into consideration in determining a U.S. shareholder's subpart F inclusion for a taxable year is effective with respect to dispositions occurring after the date of enactment.

Distributions of previously taxed income.—The provision that allows the Secretary to make regulatory adjustments to avoid double inclusions in cases such as those to which section 304 applies takes effect on the date of enactment.

Treatment of United States source income earned by a controlled foreign corporation.—The provision concerning the effect of treaty exemptions from, or reductions of, the branch profits tax on the determination of subpart F income is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986.

Extension of indirect foreign tax credit.—The provision that extends application of the indirect foreign tax credit to certain CFCs below the third tier is effective for foreign taxes paid or incurred by CFCs for taxable years of such corporations beginning after the date of enactment.

In the case of any chain of foreign corporations the taxes of which would be eligible for the indirect foreign tax credit, under present law or under the House bill, but for the denial of indirect credits below the third or sixth tier, as the case may be, no liquidation, reorganization, or similar transaction in a taxable year beginning after the date of enactment shall have the effect of permitting taxes to be taken into account under the indirect foreign tax credit provisions of the Code which could not have been taken into account under those provisions but for such transaction. As one example, no such transaction shall have the effect of permitting credits for taxes which, but for such transaction, would have been noncreditable (given the effective date provisions of the House bill) because they are taxes of a fourth-, fifth-, or sixth-tier corporation for a year beginning before the date that the House bill is enacted. No inference is intended regarding the creditability or noncreditability of such taxes under present law.

2. REPEAL OF EXCESS PASSIVE ASSETS PROVISION (SEC. 14414 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under the rules of subpart F (secs. 951–964), certain 10-percent U.S. shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation (CFC) are required to include in income currently for U.S. tax purposes certain earnings of the CFC, whether or not such earnings are actually distributed currently to the shareholders. The 10-percent U.S. shareholders of a CFC are subject to current U.S. tax on their shares of certain income earned by the CFC (referred to as "subpart F income"). The 10-percent U.S. shareholders are also subject to current U.S. tax on their shares of the CFC's earnings to the extent such earnings are invested by the CFC in certain U.S. property.

In addition to these current inclusion rules, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 enacted section 956A, which applies another current inclusion rule to U.S. shareholders of a CFC. Section 956A requires the 10-percent U.S. shareholders of a CFC to include in income currently their shares of the CFC's earnings to the extent such earnings are invested by the CFC in excess passive assets. A CFC generally is treated as having excess passive assets if the average of the amounts of its passive assets exceeds 25 percent of the average of the amounts of its total assets; this calculation requires a quarterly determination of the CFC's passive assets and total assets.

The House bill repeals section 956A.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years of U.S. shareholders beginning after September 30, 1995, and taxable years of foreign corporations ending with or within such taxable years of U.S. shareholders.

C. OTHER FOREIGN PROVISIONS

1. EXCHANGE RATE USED IN TRANSLATING FOREIGN TAXES (SEC. 14421 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Translation of certain accrued foreign taxes

Foreign income taxes paid in foreign currencies are required to be translated into U.S. dollar amounts using the exchange rate as of the time such taxes are paid to the foreign country or U.S. possession (sec. 986(a)(1)). This rule applies to foreign taxes paid directly by U.S. taxpayers, which taxes are creditable only in the year paid or accrued (or during a carryover period), and to foreign taxes paid by foreign corporations that are deemed paid by a U.S.

corporation, and hence creditable, in the year that the U.S. corporation receives a dividend or has an income inclusion.

Redetermination of foreign taxes

For taxpayers who utilize the accrual basis of accounting for determining creditable foreign taxes, accrued and unpaid foreign tax liabilities denominated in foreign currencies are translated into U.S. dollar amounts at the exchange rate as of the last day of the taxable year of accrual.[107] In certain cases where a difference exists between the dollar value of accrued foreign taxes and the dollar value of those taxes when paid, a redetermination (or adjustment) of foreign taxes is required.[108] Generally, such an adjustment may be attributable to one of three causes: (1) a refund of foreign taxes, (2) a difference between the amount of foreign currency units actually paid and the amount of foreign currency units accrued, and (3) fluctuations in the value of the foreign currency relative to the dollar between the date of accrual and the date of payment.

A redetermination of foreign tax paid or accrued directly by a U.S. person requires notification of the Internal Revenue Service and a redetermination of U.S. tax liability for the taxable year for which the foreign tax was claimed as a credit. Exceptions to this rule apply for de minimis amounts of foreign tax redetermination.[109] In the case of a redetermination of foreign taxes that qualify for the indirect foreign tax credit under sections 902 and 960, taxpayers generally are required to make appropriate adjustments to the relevant pools of earnings and profits and foreign taxes.[110]

House bill

In general

The House bill sets forth two sets of operating rules for the translation of foreign taxes. The first set establishes new rules for the translation of certain accrued foreign taxes. The other set modifies the rules of present law for translating all other foreign taxes.

Translation of foreign taxes

Translation of certain accrued foreign taxes

The House bill permits taxpayers who utilize the accrual basis of accounting for determining creditable foreign taxes to translate their foreign taxes at the average exchange rate for the taxable year to which such taxes relate, provided such taxes are actually paid no later than the date that is 2 years after the close of the year to which such taxes relate. This rule does not apply (1) with respect to taxes of an accrual-basis taxpayer that are actually paid in a taxable year prior to the year to which they relate, or (2) to tax payments that are denominated in a hyperinflationary currency (as defined in Treas. Reg. Sec. 1.985–1(b)(2)(D)(ii)). In addition, as discussed in detail below, this set of rules does not apply to, and thus a redetermination of foreign tax is required for, any foreign income tax paid after the date two years after the close of the taxable year to which such taxes relate.

For example, assume that in year 1 a taxpayer accrues 1,000 units of foreign tax that relate to year 1. Further assume that as of the end of year 1 the tax is unpaid and the currency involved is not hyperinflationary. In this case, the House bill provides that the taxpayer would translate 1,000 units of accrued foreign tax into U.S. dollars at the average exchange rate for year 1.[111] If the 1,000 units of tax were paid by the taxpayer in either year 2 or year 3, no redetermination of foreign tax would be required. If, any portion of the tax so accrued remained unpaid as of the end of year 3, however, the taxpayer would be required to redetermine its foreign tax accrued in year 1 to account for the accrued but unpaid tax.

As another example, assume a taxpayer accrues 1,000 units of foreign tax in year 2, but pays the tax in year 1. Also assume that the tax relates to year 2. In this case, the taxpayer would translate the tax using the exchange rate as of the time the tax is paid (i.e., using the applicable year 1 exchange rate) since the tax is paid in a year prior to the year to which it relates.

As an illustration of what is meant by the taxable year to which taxes relate, assume that a foreign corporation is charged by a foreign government with an income tax of 100 units for 1996. Assume that the currency involved is not hyperinflationary. Due to a contest between the foreign government and the corporation that ends in 1996, the 100 units of tax are not paid until 1997. Assume that under the U.S. rules governing accrual, the foreign tax accrues for 1996 but does not do so until 1997.[112] Under the House bill, the taxes would be translated at the rate in effect for 1996, because the taxes relate to 1996, even though they did not accrue until 1997. If instead the contest was over in 1999 and the taxes were accrued and paid at that time, the translation rate used would be that of 1999, rather than 1996, because 1999 is more than 2 years after the end of 1996. Now assume that the contest was over in 2001, but the taxes were deposited in 1997 and not accrued until 2001. These taxes are paid before the beginning of the year in which the taxes were accrued (2001), but after the year to which the taxes relate (1996). In this case, under the House bill, the taxes would be translated at the rate for the year (1996) to which the taxes relate. If the taxes are instead paid in 1999, they would be translated at the relevant rate for 1999 because 1999 is more than 2 years after the end of 1996.

As an additional illustration of what is meant under the House bill as the taxable year to which taxes relate, assume that a foreign corporation accrues a foreign income tax of 100 units of non-hyperinflationary currency for 1996. Further assume that the actual amount of foreign tax liability of the foreign corporation for 1996 is 110 units, all of which is paid in 1997. Under the House bill, the 110 units of foreign tax are translated at the rate in effect for 1996 because the taxes relate to 1996, even though the total tax liability for that year was not actually accrued by the taxpayer in 1996.

[111] The same result would occur if the 1,000 units of tax were both accrued and paid in year 1.

Finally, assume that under foreign law, a foreign income tax liability accrues in 2001 under a long-term contract method of accounting, but advance deposits of that liability accruing in 2001 are made in each of the years 1997 through 2000. Under the House bill, it is intended that if the payments in 1997 through 2000 are treated as relating to 2001, these payments are nevertheless to be translated at the relevant rates for 1997 through 2000. Although the House bill provides a rule for translation of the taxes in this case, no change is intended as to the application of present law accounting rules for determining the year for which the taxes are eligible for credit or deduction for U.S. income tax purposes.

Translation of all other foreign taxes

Foreign taxes not eligible for application of the preceding rules generally are translated into U.S. dollars using the exchange rates as of the time such taxes are paid. The House bill grants the Secretary of the Treasury authority to issue regulations that would allow foreign tax payments made by a foreign corporation or by a foreign branch of a U.S. person to be translated into U.S. dollar amounts using an average U.S. dollar exchange rate for a specified period. It is anticipated that the applicable average exchange rate would be the rate as published by a qualified source of exchange rate information for the period during which the tax payments were made.

As revised by the House bill, section 905(c) of the Code defines a foreign tax redetermination to include: (1) a refund of foreign taxes, (2) a difference between accrued taxes when paid and the amounts claimed as credits by the taxpayer, and (3) accrued taxes not paid before the date two years after the close of the taxable year to which such taxes relate. Thus, for example, the House bill provides that if at the close of the second taxable year after the close of the taxable year to which an accrued tax relates, any portion of the tax so accrued has not yet been paid, a foreign tax redetermination under section 905(c) is required for the amount representing the unpaid portion of that accrued tax. That is, the accrual of any tax that is unpaid as of that date would be retroactively denied. In cases where a redetermination is required, as under present law, the House bill specifies that the taxpayer must notify the Secretary, who shall redetermine the amount of the tax for the year or years affected.

The House bill provides that in the case of accrued taxes not paid within the date two years after the close of the taxable year to which such taxes relate, whether or not such taxes were previously accrued, any such taxes if subsequently paid are taken into account for the taxable year in which paid, and no redetermination with respect to the original year of accrual is required on account of such payment. In such a case, those taxes would be translated into U.S. dollar amounts using the exchange rates in effect for the period during which such taxes are paid. Nothing in the House bill is intended to change present law as to the length of time after the year to which the redetermination relates within which redetermination may be made or required.[113]

Effective date

The provision is effective for taxes paid (in the case of taxpayers using the cash basis for determining the foreign tax credit) or accrued (in the case of taxpayers using the accrual basis for determining the foreign tax credit) in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

With respect to taxes of an accrual-basis taxpayer that relate to a taxable year beginning before January 1, 1996, the return for which (if one were due) would not yet be due on date of enactment of the House bill (taking into account extensions of time to file), it is contemplated that the Secretary would, in appropriate circumstances, provide taxpayers with a reasonable average-rate method for translating such taxes that are not paid until after the effective date of the House bill.

The House bill's changes to the foreign tax redetermination rules apply to taxes which relate to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995. Thus, for example, the redetermination rules under the House bill do not apply to a foreign tax that relates to a taxable year beginning in or before 1995, even though the tax does not properly accrue until a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995.

2. ELECTION TO USE SIMPLIFIED FOREIGN TAX CREDIT LIMITATION UNDER THE ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX (SEC. 14422 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Foreign tax credit limitations must be computed both for regular tax purposes and alternative minimum tax (AMT) purposes. Each foreign tax credit limitation computation requires the allocation and apportionment of deductions between foreign source income and U.S. source income.

House bill

The House bill permits taxpayers to elect to use as their AMT foreign tax credit limitation fraction the ratio of foreign source regular taxable income to entire alternative minimum taxable income, rather than the ratio of foreign source alternative minimum taxable income to entire alternative minimum taxable income. Foreign source regular taxable income is used only to the extent it does not exceed entire alternative minimum taxable income.

[113] See section 6501(c)(5). See also, e.g., Pacific Metals Corp. v. Commissioner, 1 T.C. 1028 (1943); Texas Co. (Caribbean) Ltd. v. Commissioner, 12 T.C. 925 (1949).

The election must be made for the first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, for which the taxpayer claims an AMT foreign tax credit. It is intended that a taxpayer be treated, for this purpose, as claiming an AMT foreign tax credit for any taxable year for which the taxpayer chooses to have the benefits of the foreign tax credit and in which the taxpayer is subject to the alternative minimum tax or would be subject to the alternative minimum tax but for the availability of the AMT foreign tax credit. Once made, the election applies to all subsequent taxable years, and may be revoked only with consent.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

3. TREATMENT OF INBOUND AND OUTBOUND TRANSFERS (SECS. 14423–14424 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Outbound transfers

If a U.S. person transfers property to a foreign corporation in connection with certain corporate organizations, reorganizations, or liquidations, the foreign corporation will not, for purposes of determining the extent to which gain is recognized on such transfer, be considered to be a corporation (sec. 367(a)(1)). Various exceptions to the operation of this rule are provided, including a broad grant of authority to provide exceptions by regulation. Because corporate status is essential to qualify for the tax-free organization, reorganization, and liquidation provisions, failure to satisfy the requirements of section 367 could result in the recognition of gain to the participant corporations and shareholders.

An excise tax is imposed on outbound transfers that might not constitute income tax recognition events even after imposition of the anti-avoidance income tax rule adopted for corporate transactions. The excise tax generally applies on transfers of property by a U.S. person to a foreign corporation—as paid-in surplus or as a contribution to capital—or to a foreign estate, trust, or partnership.[114] The tax is 35 percent of the amount of gain inherent in the property transferred, but not recognized for income tax purposes at the time of the transfer (sec. 1491). For income tax purposes, the basis of the appreciated property whose transfer triggers the tax is not increased to account for imposition of the tax.

[114] The Internal Revenue Service has in the past wavered on the question whether this tax applies to a transfer to a foreign trust with respect to which the transferor is treated as the owner under the grantor trust rules. Compare Rev. Rul. 69–450, 1969–2 C.B. 168 (holding that such a transfer is subject to tax under section 1491); with Rev. Rul. 87–61, 1987–2 C.B. 219 (revoking Rev. Rul. 69–450, and holding that such a transfer is not subject to tax under section 1491).

The excise tax does not apply in certain cases where the transferee is exempt from U.S. tax under Code sections 501–505 (sec. 1492(1)). In addition, the excise tax does not apply in some cases where income tax rules governing outbound transfers apply, either by their terms or by the election of the taxpayer. Thus, the excise tax does not apply to a transfer described in section 367, or to a transfer not described in section 367 but with respect to which the taxpayer elects (before the transfer) the application of principles similar to the principles of section 367 (sec. 1492(2)).

In addition, a taxpayer may elect (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) to treat a transfer described in section 1491 as a sale or exchange of the property transferred and to recognize as gain (but not loss) in the year of the transfer the excess of the fair market value of the property transferred over the adjusted basis (for determining gain) of the property in the hands of the transferor (sec. 1057). To the extent that gain is recognized pursuant to the election in the year of the transfer, the transfer is not subject to the excise tax, and the basis of the property in the hands of the transferee will be increased by the amount of gain recognized (sec. 1492(3)). The legislative history of the elective income recognition provision indicates that the making of an election which has as one of its principle purposes the avoidance of Federal income taxes is not permitted.[115]

The excise tax is due at the time of the transfer (sec. 1494(a)). Under regulations, the excise tax may be abated, remitted, or refunded if the taxpayer, after the transfer, elects the application of principles similar to the principles of section 367 (sec. 1494(b)).

Inbound transfers

Section 367(b) provides, in part, that in the case of certain exchanges in connection with which there is no transfer of property described in section 367(a)(1), a foreign corporation will be considered to be a corporation except to the extent provided in regulations which are necessary or appropriate to prevent the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

Although it is clear that absence of a toll charge on accumulated earnings of a foreign corporation upon liquidation or reorganization into a U.S. corporation leads to avoidance of tax, and Congress in 1976 noted without disapproval the adoption of IRS positions that would prevent the avoidance of tax in these cases,[116] neither section 367(b) as revised in 1976, nor its predecessors, were drafted in such a way that directly causes tax to be imposed on foreign earnings.

For example, assume that a U.S. corporation owns 100 percent of the stock of a liquidating foreign corporation, and, pursuant to regulations under section 367(b), the foreign corporation is not treated as a corporation for purposes of section 332. In that case, the U.S. corporation would be required under the Code to recognize the difference between the basis and the value of its stock in the foreign corporation. That gain, however, may be more or less than the accumulated earnings of the foreign corporation attributable to the period when the U.S. corporation owned the stock of the foreign corporation.

Perhaps as a result, neither the present temporary regulations nor the proposed regulations under section 367(b) mandate a tax based on the accumulated earnings of a foreign corporation that liquidates or reorganizes into a U.S. corporation. The temporary regulations allow the taxpayer to elect treatment of the foreign corporation as a corporation if the tax on earnings is paid. If the taxpayer chooses not to make the election, the foreign corporation is not treated as a corporation under the relevant nonrecognition provision (e.g., sec. 332, 354), but is treated as a corporation for other purposes, such as for purposes of the basis rules (secs. 334, 358, 362), and carryover provisions (sec. 381) (Temp. Treas. Reg. secs. 7.367(b)–5(b) and 7.367(b)–7(c)(2)). The proposed regulations generally require that the foreign corporation be treated as a corporation, and permit the taxpayer to elect either to pay the tax on earnings, or to pay tax on the gain; but if the latter option is chosen, adjustments must be made to either net operating loss carryovers, capital loss carryovers, or asset bases (Proposed Treas. Reg. sec. 1.367(b)–3(b)(2)).

House bill

Outbound transfers

The House bill repeals the excise tax on outbound transfers. In its place, the House bill requires the full recognition of gain on a transfer of property by a U.S. person to a foreign corporation as either paid-in surplus or a contribution to capital, or to a foreign estate, trust, or partnership. Under the House bill, the Secretary of the Treasury may, however, provide regulations under which principles similar to the principles of section 367 would apply to any such transfer in lieu of the application of the full recognition rule. Moreover, the Secretary may provide rules under which recognition of gain would not be triggered by section 1491 in cases where the Secretary is satisfied that application of other Code rules (such as those relating to partnerships or trusts) would prevent the avoidance of tax consistent with the purposes of the bill. Full recognition of gain is also avoided in the case of a transfer described in section 367. It is anticipated that, prior to the promulgation of regulations, the Secretary generally will continue to permit taxpayers to elect the application of principles similar to the principles of section 367, provided the election is made by the time for filing the income tax return for the taxable year of the transfer.

Inbound transfers

The House bill provides that in the case of certain corporate organizations, reorganizations, and liquidations described in section 332, 351, 354, 355, 356, or 361 in which the status of a foreign corporation as a corporation is a condition for nonrecognition by a party to the transaction, income is recognized to the extent provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary which are necessary or appropriate to prevent the avoidance of Federal income taxes. This provision is limited in its application, under the House bill, so as not to apply to a transaction in which the foreign corporation is not treated as a corporation under section 367(a)(1). Thus, the House bill permits the Secretary to provide by regulations for recognition of income, without regard to the amount of gain that would be recognized in the absence of the relevant nonrecognition provision listed above. As under current law, such regulations will be subject to normal court review as to whether they are necessary or appropriate for the prevention of avoidance of Federal income taxes.

In addition, the House bill clarifies that rules for income recognition under section 367(b) may also be applied in a case involving a transfer literally described in section 367(a)(1), where necessary or appropriate to prevent the avoidance of Federal income taxes.

Effective date

The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

4. MODIFICATION OF REPORTING THRESHOLD FOR STOCK OWNERSHIP OF A FOREIGN CORPORATION (SEC. 14425 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Section 6046 mandates the filing of information returns on behalf of a foreign corporation by certain U.S. persons upon the occurrence of certain events. U.S. persons required to file these information returns include those who own or acquire 5 percent or more of the value of the stock of a foreign corporation.

House bill

The House bill increases the reporting threshold for stock ownership of a foreign corporation under section 6046 from 5 percent (based on value) to 10 percent (based on vote or value).

Effective date.—The provision is effective for reportable transactions occurring after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

5. APPLICATION OF UNIFORM CAPITALIZATION RULES TO FOREIGN PERSONS (SEC. 14426 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The uniform capitalization rules, which require certain direct and indirect costs allocable to property to be capitalized or included in inventory, generally apply in computing taxable income and earnings and profits of domestic and foreign taxpayers.

House bill

The House bill reduces the number of foreign corporations that are required to apply the uniform capitalization rules under section 263A. Under the House bill, a foreign corporation is subject to the uniform capitalization rules only with respect to the determination of (1) its tax liability with respect to its U.S. trade or business and (2) the tax liability of its U.S. shareholders under the subpart F provisions of the Code. However, it is intended that a foreign corporation that is not required to apply the uniform capitalization rules, under the House bill may nevertheless continue to apply such rules.

Exemption from uniform capitalization rules under the House bill constitutes a change of the accounting method of the foreign corporation adopted with the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury. No section 481(a) adjustment will arise in connection with such change; instead, the "cut-off method" is applicable. Under the cut-off method, the value of the beginning inventory of an affected taxpayer includes amounts properly capitalized in a previous year under the uniform capitalization rules, and the taxpayer would not apply the uniform capitalization rules with respect to inventory acquired or produced during the year for which the election is in effect.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years of the foreign corporation beginning after December 31, 1995.

6. PRIZES AND AWARDS RECEIVED BY A NONRESIDENT ALIEN RELATING TO AMATEUR SPORTS COMPETITIONS HELD IN THE UNITED STATES (SEC. 14427 OF HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Amounts received by a nonresident alien as prizes or awards associated with athletic competitions held in the United States are generally treated as services income subject to U.S. income tax. A limited exception is available for U.S. source compensation income not exceeding $3,000 if certain criteria are satisfied.

House bill

The House bill treats prizes and awards received by a nonresident alien with respect to his or her participation in an amateur sports competition held within the United States as foreign source income if the recipient does not perform any services for the prize or award. Thus, the value of the prize or award would be exempt from U.S. income tax. For this purpose, "amateur sports competition" means any competition in which the only prizes awarded by the sponsors are of nominal value. It is intended that medals that are awarded in athletic competitions and that contain small amounts of precious or semi-precious metals, such as Olympic medals, be considered to be of nominal value for purposes of this provision.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for prizes and awards received on or after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

7. TREATMENT FOR ESTATE TAX PURPOSES OF SHORT-TERM OBLIGATIONS HELD BY NONRESIDENT ALIENS (SEC. 14428 OF HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The United States imposes estate tax on assets of noncitizen nonresidents that are situated in the United States at the time of the individual's death. Special rules apply to treat certain bank deposits and debt instruments the income from which qualifies for the bank deposit interest exemption or the portfolio interest exemption as property from without the United States so that these items are excluded from the U.S. gross estate of a nonresident not a citizen of the United States. However, no equivalent exemption is available from the U.S. estate tax for obligations held by a noncitizen nonresident that generate short-term original issue discount ("OID") despite the fact that such income also is exempt from U.S. income tax in the hands of the nonresident recipient.

House bill

The House bill treats any debt obligation the income from which would be eligible for the exemption for short-term OID obligations under section 871(g)(1)(B)(I) held by a decedent on the date of his or her death as property situated outside of the United States in determining the U.S. estate tax liability of a nonresident not a U.S. citizen. However, a short-term OID obligation the income from which is effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business conducted by the decedent is not subject to this rule.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for estates of decedents dying after the date of enactment.

XV. OTHER INCOME TAX SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS

A. PROVISIONS RELATING TO S CORPORATIONS

1. S CORPORATIONS PERMITTED TO HAVE 75 SHAREHOLDERS (SEC. 14501 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The taxable income or loss of an S corporation is taken into account by the corporation's shareholders, rather than by the entity, whether or not such income is distributed. A small business corporation may elect to be treated as an S corporation. A "small business corporation" is defined as a domestic corporation which is not an ineligible corporation and which does not have (1) more than 35 shareholders, (2) as a shareholder, a person (other than certain trusts or estates) who is not an individual, (3) a nonresident alien as a shareholder, and (4) more than one class of stock. For purposes of the 35-shareholder limitation, a husband and wife are treated as one shareholder.

House bill

The House bill increases maximum number of eligible shareholders from 35 to 75.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. ELECTING SMALL BUSINESS TRUSTS (SEC. 14502 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under present law, trusts other than grantor trusts, voting trusts, certain testamentary trusts and "qualified subchapter S trusts" may not be shareholders in an S corporation. A "qualified subchapter S trust" is a trust which, under its terms, (1) is required to have only one current income beneficiary (for life), (2) any corpus distributed during the life of the beneficiary must be distributed to the beneficiary, (3) the beneficiary's income interest must terminate at the earlier of the beneficiary's death or the termination of the trust, and (4) if the trust terminates during the beneficiary's life, the trust assets must be distributed to the beneficiary. All the income (as defined for local law purposes) must be currently distributed to that beneficiary. The beneficiary is treated as the owner of the portion of the trust consisting of the stock in the S corporation.

House bill

In general

The House bill allows stock in an S corporation to be held by certain trusts ("electing small business trusts"). In order to qualify for this treatment, all beneficiaries of the trust must be individuals or estates eligible to be S corporation shareholders, except that charitable organizations may hold contingent remainder interests. No interest in the trust may be acquired by purchase. For this purpose, "purchase" means any acquisition of property with a cost basis (determined under sec. 1012). Thus, interests in the trust must be acquired by reason of gift, bequest, etc. A trust must elect to be treated as an electing small business trust.

Each potential current beneficiary of the trust is counted as a shareholder for purposes of the proposed 75 shareholder limitation (or if there were no potential current beneficiaries, the trust would be treated as the shareholder). A potential current income beneficiary means any person, with respect to the applicable period, who is entitled to, or at the discretion of any person may receive, a distribution from the principal or income of the trust.

Treatment of items relating to S corporation stock

The portion of the trust which consists of stock in one or more S corporations is treated as a separate trust for purposes of computing the income tax attributable to the S corporation stock held by the trust. The trust is taxed at the highest individual rate (currently, 39.6 percent on ordinary income and 28 percent on net capital gain) on this portion of the trust's income. The taxable income attributable to this portion includes (1) the items of income, loss, or deduction allocated to it as an S corporation shareholder under the rules of subchapter S, (2) gain or loss from the sale of the S corporation stock, and (3) to the extent provided in regulations, any state or local income taxes and administrative expenses of the trust properly allocable to the S corporation stock. Otherwise allowable capital losses are allowed only to the extent of capital gains.

In computing the trust's income tax on this portion of the trust, no deduction is allowed for amounts distributed to beneficiaries, and no deduction or credit is allowed for any item other than the items described above. This income is not included in the distributable net income of the trust, and thus is not included in the beneficiaries' income. No item relating to the S corporation stock could be apportioned to any beneficiary.

On the termination of all or any portion of an electing small business trust the loss carryovers or excess deductions referred to in section 642(h) is taken into account by the entire trust, subject to the usual rules on termination of the entire trust.

Treatment of remainder of items held by trust

In determining the tax liability with regard to the remaining portion of the trust, the items taken into account by the subchapter S portion of the trust are disregarded. Although distributions from the trust are deductible in computing the taxable income on this portion of the trust, under the usual rules of subchapter J, the trust's distributable net income does not include any income attributable to the S corporation stock.

Termination of trust and conforming amendment applicable to all trusts

Where the trust terminates before the end of the S corporation's taxable year, the trust takes into account its pro rata share of S corporation items for its final year. The bill makes a conforming amendment applicable to all trusts and estates clarifying that this is the present-law treatment of trusts and estates that terminate before the end of the S corporation's taxable year.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. EXPANSION OF POST-DEATH QUALIFICATION FOR CERTAIN TRUSTS (SEC. 14503 OF THE HOUSE)

Present law

Under present law, trusts other than grantor trusts, voting trusts, certain testamentary trusts and "qualified subchapter S trusts" may not be shareholders in an S corporation. A grantor trust may remain an S corporation shareholder for 60 days after the death of the grantor. The 60-day period is extended to two years if the entire corpus of the trust is includible in the gross estate of the deemed owner. In addition, a trust may be an S corporation shareholder for 60 days after the transfer of S corporation pursuant to a will.

House bill

The House bill expands the post-death holding period to two years for all testamentary trusts.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

4. FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS PERMITTED TO HOLD SAFE HARBOR DEBT (SEC. 14504 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A small business corporation eligible to be an S corporation may not have more than one class of stock. Certain debt ("straight debt") is not treated as a second class of stock so long as such debt is an unconditional promise to pay on demand or on a specified date a sum certain in money if: (1) the interest rate (and interest payment dates) are not contingent on profits, the borrower's discretion, or similar factors; (2) there is no convertibility (directly or indirectly) into stock, and (3) the creditor is an individual (other than a nonresident alien), an estate, or certain qualified trusts.

House bill

The definition of “straight debt” is expanded to include debt held by creditors, other than individuals, that are actively and regularly engaged in the business of lending money.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. RULES RELATING TO INADVERTENT TERMINATIONS AND INVALID ELECTIONS (SEC. 14505 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under present law, if the Internal Revenue Service (“IRS”) determines that a corporation’s Subchapter S election is inadvertently terminated, the IRS can waive the effect of the terminating event for any period if the corporation timely corrects the event and if the corporation and shareholders agree to be treated as if the election had been in effect for that period. Such waivers generally are obtained through the issuance of a private letter ruling. Present law does not grant the IRS the ability to waive the effect of an inadvertent invalid Subchapter S election.

In addition, under present law, a small business corporation must elect to be an S corporation no later than the 15th day of the third month of the taxable year for which the election is effective. The IRS may not validate a late election.

House bill

Under the House bill, the authority of the IRS to waive the effect of an inadvertent termination is extended to allow the Service to waive the effect of an invalid election caused by an inadvertent failure to qualify as a small business corporation or to obtain the required shareholder consents (including elections regarding qualified subchapter S trusts), or both. The House bill also allows the IRS to treat a late Subchapter S election as timely where the Service determines that there was reasonable cause for the failure to make the election timely. It is intended that the IRS be reasonable in exercising this authority and apply standards that are similar to those applied under present law to inadvertent subchapter S terminations and other late or invalid elections.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1982.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill. The conferees wish to clarify that the IRS may exercise its authority to treat a late election as timely in cases where the taxpayer never filed an election and the Service determines that there was reasonable cause for the failure to make the election.

6. AGREEMENT TO TERMINATE YEAR (SEC. 14506 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In general, each item of S corporation income, deduction and loss is allocated to shareholders on a per-share, per-day basis. However, if any shareholder terminates his or her interest in an S corporation during a taxable year, the S corporation, with the consent of all its shareholders, may elect to allocate S corporation items by closing its books as of the date of such termination rather than apply the per-share, per-day rule.

House bill

The House bill provides that, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the election to close the books of the S corporation upon the termination of a shareholder's interest is made by all affected shareholders and the corporation, rather than by all shareholders. The closing of the books applies only to the affected shareholders. For this purpose, "affected shareholders" means any shareholder whose interest is terminated and all shareholders to whom such shareholder has transferred shares during the year. If a shareholder transferred shares to the corporation, "affected shareholders" includes all persons who were shareholders during the year.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

7. EXPANSION OF POST-TERMINATION TRANSITION PERIOD (SEC. 14507 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Distributions made by a former S corporation during its post-termination period are treated in the same manner as if the distributions were made by an S corporation (e.g., treated by shareholders as nontaxable distributions to the extent of the accumulated adjustment account). Distributions made after the post-termination period are generally treated as made by a C corporation (i.e., treated by shareholders as taxable dividends to the extent of earnings and profits).

The "post-termination period" is the period beginning on the day after the last day of the last taxable year of the S corporation and ending on the later of: (1) a date that is one year later, or (2) the due date for filing the return for the last taxable year and the 120-day period beginning on the date of a determination that the corporation's S corporation election had terminated for a previous taxable year.

In addition, the audit procedures adopted by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 ("TEFRA") with respect to partnerships also apply to S corporations. Thus, the tax treatment of items is determined at the corporate, rather than individual level.

House bill

The present-law definition of post-termination period is expanded to include the 120-day period beginning on the date of any determination pursuant to an audit of the taxpayer that follows the termination of the S corporation's election and that adjusts a subchapter S item of income, loss or deduction of the S corporation during the S period. In addition, the definition of "determination" is expanded to include a final disposition of the Secretary of the Treasury of a claim for refund and, under regulations, certain agreements between the Secretary and any person, relating to the tax liability of the person.

In addition, the House bill repeals the TEFRA audit provisions applicable to S corporations and would provide other rules to require consistency between the returns of the S corporation and its shareholders.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

8. S CORPORATIONS PERMITTED TO HOLD SUBSIDIARIES (SEC. 14508 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A small business corporation may not be a member of an affiliated group of corporations (other than by reason of ownership in certain inactive corporations). Thus, an S corporation may not own 80 percent or more of the stock of another corporation (whether an S corporation or a C corporation).

In addition, a small business corporation may not have as a shareholder another corporation (whether an S corporation or a C corporation).

House bill

An S corporation is allowed to own 80 percent or more of the stock of a C corporation. The C corporation subsidiary could elect to join in the filing of a consolidated return with its affiliated C corporations. An S corporation is not allowed to join in such election. Dividends received by an S corporation from a C corporation in which the S corporation has an 80 percent or greater ownership stake is not treated as passive investment income for purposes of sections 1362 and 1375 to the extent the dividends are attributable to the earnings and profits of the C corporation derived from the active conduct of a trade or business.

In addition, an S corporation is allowed to own a qualified subchapter S subsidiary. The term "qualified subchapter S subsidiary" means a domestic corporation that is not an ineligible corporation (i.e., a corporation that would be eligible to be an S corporation if the stock of the corporation were held directly by the shareholders of its parent S corporation) if (1) 100 percent of the stock of the subsidiary were held by its S corporation parent and (2) for which the parent elects to treat as a qualified subchapter S subsidiary. Under the election, the qualified subchapter S subsidiary is not treated as a separate corporation and all the assets, liabilities, and items of income, deduction, and credit of the subsidiary are treated as the assets, liabilities, and items of income, deduction, and credit of the parent S corporation.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

9. TREATMENT OF DISTRIBUTIONS DURING LOSS YEARS (SEC. 14509 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under present law, the amount of loss an S corporation shareholder may take into account for a taxable year cannot exceed the sum of the shareholder's adjusted basis in his or her stock of the corporation and the adjusted basis in any indebtedness of the corporation to the shareholder. Any excess loss is carried forward.

Any distribution to a shareholder by an S corporation generally is tax-free to the shareholder to the extent of the shareholder's adjusted basis of his or her stock. The shareholder's adjusted basis is reduced by the tax-free amount of the distribution. Any distribution in excess of the shareholder's adjusted basis is treated as gain from the sale or exchange of property.

Under present law, income (whether or not taxable) and expenses (whether or not deductible) serve, respectively, to increase and decrease an S corporation shareholder's basis in the stock of the corporation. These rules require that the adjustments to basis for items of both income and loss for any taxable year apply before the adjustment for distributions applies.

These rules limiting losses and allowing tax-free distributions up to the amount of the shareholder's adjusted basis are similar in certain respects to the rules governing the treatment of losses and cash distributions by partnerships. Under the partnership rules (unlike the S corporation rules), for any taxable year, a partner's basis is first increased by items of income, then decreased by distributions, and finally is decreased by losses for that year.

In addition, if the S corporation has accumulated earnings and profits, any distribution in excess of the amount in an "accumulated adjustments account" will be treated as a dividend (to the extent of the accumulated earnings and profits). A dividend distribution does not reduce the adjusted basis of the shareholder's stock. The "accumulated adjustments account" generally is the amount of the accumulated undistributed post-1982 gross income less deductions.

House bill

The House bill provides that the adjustments for distributions made by an S corporation during a taxable year are taken into account before applying the loss limitation for the year. Thus, distributions during a year reduce the adjusted basis for purposes of determining the allowable loss for the year, but the loss for a year does not reduce the adjusted basis for purposes of determining the tax status of the distributions made during that year.

The House bill also provides that in determining the amount in the accumulated adjustment account for purposes of determining the tax treatment of distributions made during a taxable year by an S corporation having accumulated earnings and profits, net negative adjustments (i.e., the excess of losses and deductions over income) for that taxable year are disregarded.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

10. TREATMENT OF S CORPORATIONS UNDER SUBCHAPTER C (SEC. 14510 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Present law contains several provisions relating to the treatment of S corporations as corporations generally for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code.

First, under present law, the taxable income of an S corporation is computed in the same manner as in the case of an individual (sec. 1363(b)). Under this rule, the provisions of the Code governing the computation of taxable income which are applicable only to corporations, such as the dividends received deduction, do not apply to S corporations.

Second, except as otherwise provided by the Internal Revenue Code and except to the extent inconsistent with subchapter S, subchapter C (i.e., the rules relating to corporate distributions and adjustments) applies to an S corporation and its shareholders (sec. 1371(a)(1)). Under this second rule, provisions such as the corporate reorganization provisions apply to S corporations. Thus, a C corporation may merge into an S corporation tax-free.

Finally, an S corporation in its capacity as a shareholder of another corporation is treated as an individual for purposes of subchapter C (sec. 1371(a)(2)). In 1988, the Internal Revenue Service took the position that this rule prevents the tax-free liquidation of a C corporation into an S corporation because a C corporation cannot liquidate tax-free when owned by an individual shareholder.[117] In 1992, the Internal Revenue Service reversed its position, stating that the prior ruling was incorrect.[118]

House bill

The House bill repeals the rule that treats an S corporation in its capacity as a shareholder of another corporation as an individual. Thus, the provision clarifies that the liquidation of a C corporation into an S corporation will be governed by the generally applicable subchapter C rules, including the provisions of sections 332 and 337 allowing the tax-free liquidation of a corporation into its parent corporation. Following a tax-free liquidation, the built-in gains of the liquidating corporation may later be subject to tax under section 1374 upon a subsequent disposition. An S corporation also will be eligible to make a section 338 election (assuming all the requirements are otherwise met), resulting in immediate recognition of all the acquired C corporation's gains and losses (and the resulting imposition of a tax).

The repeal of this rule does not change the general rule governing the computation of income of an S corporation. For example, it does not allow an S corporation, or its shareholders, to claim a dividends received deduction with respect to dividends received by the S corporation, or to treat any item of income or deduction in a manner inconsistent with the treatment accorded to individual taxpayers.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

11. ELIMINATION OF CERTAIN EARNINGS AND PROFITS (SEC. 14511 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under present law, the accumulated earnings and profits of a corporation are not increased for any year in which an election to be treated as an S corporation is in effect. However, under the subchapter S rules in effect before revision in 1982, a corporation electing subchapter S for a taxable year increased its accumulated earnings and profits if its earnings and profits for the year exceeded both its taxable income for the year and its distributions out of that year's earnings and profits. As a result of this rule, a shareholder may later be required to include in his or her income the accumulated earnings and profits when it is distributed by the corporation. The 1982 revision to subchapter S repealed this rule for earnings attributable to taxable years beginning after 1982 but did not do so for previously accumulated S corporation earnings and profits.

[118] PLR 9245004 (July 28, 1992).

House bill

The House bill provides that if a corporation is an S corporation for its first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995, the accumulated earnings and profits of the corporation as of the beginning of that year is reduced by the accumulated earnings and profits (if any) accumulated in any taxable year beginning before January 1, 1983, for which the corporation was an electing small business corporation under subchapter S. Thus, such a corporation's accumulated earnings and profits are solely attributable to taxable years for which an S election was not in effect. This rule is generally consistent with the change adopted in 1982 limiting the S shareholder's taxable income attributable to S corporation earnings to his or her share of the taxable income of the S corporation.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

12. CARRYOVER OF DISALLOWED LOSSES AND DEDUCTIONS UNDER THE AT-RISK RULES (SEC. 14512 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under section 1366, the amount of loss an S corporation shareholder may take into account cannot exceed the sum of the shareholder's adjusted basis in his or her stock of the corporation and the unadjusted basis in any indebtedness of the corporation to the shareholder. Any disallowed loss is carried forward to the next taxable year. Any loss that is disallowed for the last taxable year of the S corporation may be carried forward to the post-termination period. The "post-termination period" is the period beginning on the day after the last day of the last taxable year of the S corporation and ending on the later of: (1) a date that is one year later, or (2) the due date for filing the return for the last taxable year and the 120-day period beginning on the date of a determination that the corporation's S corporation election had terminated for a previous taxable year.

In addition, under section 465, a shareholder of an S corporation may not deduct losses that are flowed through from the corporation to the extent the shareholder is not "at-risk" with respect to the loss. Any loss not deductible in one taxable year because of the at-risk rules is carried forward to the next taxable year.

House bill

Losses of an S corporation that are suspended under the at-risk rules of section 465 are carried forward to the S corporation's post-termination period.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

13. ADJUSTMENTS TO BASIS OF INHERITED S STOCK TO REFLECT CERTAIN ITEMS OF INCOME (SEC. 14513 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Income in respect to a decedent ("IRD") generally consists of items of gross income that accrued during the decedent's lifetime but were not includible in the decedent's income before his or her death under his or her method of accounting. IRD is includible in the income of the person acquiring the right to receive such item. A deduction for the estate tax attributable to an item of IRD is allowed to such person (sec. 691(c)). The cost or basis of property acquired from a decedent is its fair market value at the date of death (or alternate valuation date if that date is elected for estate tax purposes). This basis is often referred to as a "stepped-up basis." Property that constitutes a right to receive IRD does not receive a stepped-up basis.

The basis of a partnership interest or corporate stock acquired from a decedent generally is stepped-up at death. Under Treasury regulations, the basis of a partnership interest acquired from a decedent is reduced to the extent that its value is attributable to items constituting IRD (Treas. reg. sec. 1.742–1). This rule insures that the items of IRD held by a partnership are not later offset by a loss arising from a stepped-up basis. Although S corporation income is taxed to its shareholders in a manner similar to the taxation of a partnership and its partners, no comparable regulation requires a reduction in the basis of stock in an S corporation acquired from a decedent where the S corporation holds items of IRD.

House bill

The House bill provides that a person acquiring stock in an S corporation from a decedent would treat as IRD his or her pro rata share of any item of income of the corporation that would have been IRD if that item had been acquired directly from the decedent. Where an item is treated as IRD, a deduction for the estate tax attributable to the item generally will be allowed under the provisions of section 691(c). The stepped-up basis in the stock in an S corporation acquired from a decedent is reduced by the extent to which the value of the stock is attributable to items consisting of IRD. This basis rule is comparable to the present-law partnership rule.

Effective date.—The provision applies with respect to decedents dying after the date of enactment.

14. S CORPORATIONS ELIGIBLE FOR RULES APPLICABLE TO REAL PROPERTY SUBDIVIDED FOR SALE BY NONCORPORATE TAXPAYERS (SEC. 14514 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under present-law section 1237, a lot or parcel of land held by a taxpayer other than a corporation generally is not treated as ordinary income property solely by reason of the land being subdivided if: (1) such parcel had not previously been held as ordinary income property and if in the year of sale, the taxpayer did not hold other real property; (2) no substantial improvement has been made on the land by the taxpayer, a related party, a lessee, or a government; and (3) the land has been held by the taxpayer for five years.

House bill

The House bill allows the present-law capital gains presumption in the case of land held by an S corporation. It is expected that rules similar to the attribution rules for partnerships will apply to S corporation (Treas. reg. sec. 1.1237–1(b)(3)).

Effective date.—The provision is effective for sales in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

15. REELECTING SUBCHAPTER S STATUS (SEC. 14515 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A small business corporation that terminates its subchapter S election (whether by revocation or otherwise) may not make another election to be an S corporation for five taxable years unless the Secretary of the Treasury consents to such election.

House bill

For purposes of the five-year rule, any termination of subchapter S status in effect immediately before the date of enactment of the proposal is not be taken into account. Thus, any small business corporation that had terminated its S corporation election within the five-year period before the date of enactment may reelect subchapter S status upon enactment of the bill without the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Effective date.—The provision is effective upon the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

B. PROVISIONS RELATING TO REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES ("RICS") AND REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUSTS ("REITS")

1. REPEAL THE SHORT-SHORT TEST FOR REGULATED INVESTMENT COMPANIES (SEC. 14521 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A regulated investment company ("RIC") generally is treated as a conduit for Federal income tax purposes.

Among other requirements, to be a RIC a corporation must derive less than 30 percent of its gross income from the sale or disposition of certain investments (including stock, securities, options, futures, and forward contracts) held less than three months (the "short-short test").

House bill

The House bill repeals the short-short test.

Effective date.—Taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. MODIFICATIONS OF RULES FOR REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUSTS (SECS. 14531–14543 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In general, a real estate investment trust ("REIT") is an entity that receives most of its income from passive real estate related investments and that receives conduit treatment for income that is distributed to shareholders.

Election to be treated as a REIT

A newly-electing entity generally cannot have earnings and profits accumulated from any year in which the entity was in existence and not treated as a real estate investment trust. To satisfy this requirement, the entity must distribute, during its first REIT taxable year, any earnings and profits that were accumulated in non-REIT years. For this purpose, distributions by the entity generally are treated as being made from the most recently accumulated earnings and profits.

Taxation of REITs

Capital gains.—A REIT that has a net capital gain for a taxable year generally is subject to tax on such capital gain under the capital gains tax regime generally applicable to corporations. However, a REIT may diminish or eliminate its tax liability attributable to such capital gain by paying a "capital gain dividend" to its shareholders. Shareholders who receive capital gain dividends treat the amount of such dividends as long-term capital gain regardless of their holding period of the stock.

Income from foreclosure property.—In addition to tax on its REIT taxable income, a REIT is subject to tax at the highest rate of tax paid by corporations on its net income from foreclosure property. Foreclosure property is any real property or personal property incident to such real property that is acquired by a REIT as a result of default or imminent default on a lease of such property or indebtedness secured by such property, provided that (unless acquired as foreclosure property), such property was not held by the REIT for sale to customers. A property generally may be treated as foreclosure property for a period of two years after the date the property is acquired by the REIT.

Income or loss from prohibited transactions.—A 100-percent tax is imposed on the net income of a REIT from "prohibited transactions." A prohibited transaction is the sale or other disposition of property described in section 1221(1) of the Code (property held for sale in the ordinary course of a trade or business) other than foreclosure property. A safe harbor is provided for certain sales that otherwise might be considered prohibited transactions. The safe harbor is limited to seven or fewer sales a year or, alternatively, any number of sales provided that the aggregate adjusted basis of the property sold does not exceed 10 percent of the aggregate basis of all the REIT's assets at the beginning of the REIT's taxable year.

Organizational structure requirements

To qualify as a REIT, an entity must be for its entire taxable year a corporation or an unincorporated trust or association that would be taxable as a domestic corporation but for the REIT provisions, and must be managed by one or more trustees. Except for the first taxable year for which an entity elects to be a REIT, the beneficial ownership of the entity must be held by 100 or more persons, and the entity may not be so closely held by individuals that it would be treated as a personal holding company. A REIT is disqualified for any year in which it does not comply with regulations to ascertain the actual ownership of the REIT's outstanding shares.

Income requirements

In general.—In order for an entity to qualify as a REIT, at least 95 percent of its gross income generally must be derived from certain passive sources (the "95-percent test"). In addition, at least 75 percent of its income generally must be from certain real estate sources (the "75-percent test"), including rents from real property.

In addition, less than 30 percent of the entity's gross income may be derived from gain from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities held for less than one year, real property held less than four years, and property that is sold or disposed of in a prohibited transaction.

Definition of rents.—For purposes of the income requirements, rents from real property generally include rents from interests in real property, charges for services customarily rendered or furnished in connection with the rental of real property, whether or not such charges are separately stated, and rent attributable to personal property that is leased under or in connection with a lease of real property, but only if the rent attributable to such personal property does not exceed 15 percent of the total rent for the year under the lease.

Hedging instruments.—Interest rate swaps or cap agreements that protect a REIT from interest rate fluctuations on variable rate debt incurred to acquire or carry real property are treated as securities under the 30-percent test and payments under these agreements are treated as qualifying under the 95-percent test.

Asset requirements

REIT subsidiaries.—A subsidiary of a REIT is a qualified REIT subsidiary if and only if 100 percent of the subsidiary's stock is owned by the REIT at all times that the subsidiary is in existence. If at any time the REIT ceases to own 100 percent of the stock of the subsidiary, or if the REIT ceases to qualify for (or revokes an election of) REIT status, such subsidiary is treated as a new corporation that acquired all of its assets in exchange for its stock (and assumption of liabilities) immediately before the time that the REIT ceased to own 100 percent of the subsidiary's stock, or ceased to be a REIT as the case may be.

Distribution requirements

To satisfy the distribution requirement, a REIT must distribute as dividends to its shareholders during the taxable year an amount equal to or exceeding (1) the sum of 95 percent of its REIT other than net capital gain income and 95 percent of the excess of its net income from foreclosure property over the tax imposed on that income minus (2) certain excess noncash income.

Excess noncash items include: (1) the excess of the amounts that the REIT is required to include in income under section 467 with respect to certain rental agreements involving deferred rents, over the amounts that the REIT otherwise would recognize under its regular method of accounting; (2) in the case of a REIT using the cash method of accounting, the excess of the amount of original issue discount and coupon interest that the REIT is required to take into account with respect to a loan to which section 1274 applies, over the amount of money and fair market value of other property received with respect to the loan; and (3) income arising from the disposition of a real estate asset in certain transactions that failed to qualify as like-kind exchanges under section 1031.

House bill

Election to be treated as a REIT

The House bill changes the ordering rule for purposes of the requirement that newly-electing REITs distribute earnings and profits that were accumulated in non-REIT years. Under the House bill, distributions of accumulated earnings and profits generally would be treated as made from the entity's earliest accumulated earnings and profits.

Taxation of REITs

Capital gains.—The House bill permits a REIT to elect to retain and pay income tax on net long-term capital gains it received during the tax year.

Income from foreclosure property.—The House bill lengthens the original grace period for foreclosure property until the last day of the third full taxable year following the election. The grace period also could be extended for an additional three years by filing a request to the IRS. Under the House bill, a REIT could revoke an election to treat property as foreclosure property for any taxable year by filing a revocation on or before its due date for filing its tax return.

The House bill conforms the definition of independent contractor for purposes of the foreclosure property rule to the definition of independent contractor for purposes of the general rules.

Income or loss from prohibited transactions.—The House bill excludes from the prohibited sales rules property that was involuntarily converted.

Organizational structure requirements

The House bill replaces the rule that disqualifies a REIT for any year in which the REIT failed to comply with regulations to ascertain its ownership, with an intermediate penalty for failing to do so. Under the House bill, the penalty is $25,000 ($50,000 for intentional violations) for any year in which the REIT did not comply with the ownership regulations.

In addition, a REIT that complied with the regulations for ascertaining its ownership, and which did not know, or have reason to know, that it was so closely held as to be classified as a personal holding company, is not to be treated as a personal holding company.

Income requirements

In general.—The House bill repeals the rule that requires less than 30 percent of a REIT's gross income be derived from gain from the sale or other disposition of stock or securities held for less than one year, certain real property held less than four years, and property that is sold or disposed of in a prohibited transaction.

Definition of rents.—The House bill permits a REIT to render a de minimis amount of impermissible services to tenants, or in connection with the management of property, and still treat amounts received with respect to that property as rent.

The House bill modifies the attribution to partnerships for purposes of defining rent, so that attribution would occur only when a partner owns a 25 percent or greater interest in the partnership.

Hedging instruments.—Under the House bill, income from all hedges that reduce the interest rate risk of REIT liabilities, not just from interest rate swaps and caps, is treated as qualifying under the 95-percent test.

Asset requirements

REIT subsidiaries.—The House bill permits any wholly-owned corporation of a REIT to be treated as a qualified subsidiary, regardless of whether the corporation had always been owned by the REIT. In addition, any pre-REIT earnings and profits of the subsidiary must be distributed before the end of the REIT's taxable year.

Distribution requirements

The House bill (1) expands the class of excess noncash items to include income from the cancellation of indebtedness and (2) extends the treatment of original issue discount and coupon interest as excess noncash items to REITs that use an accrual method of taxation.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

C. ACCOUNTING PROVISIONS

1. MODIFICATIONS TO THE LOOK-BACK METHOD FOR LONG-TERM CONTRACTS (SEC. 14551 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Taxpayers engaged in the production of property under a long-term contract generally must compute income from the contract under the percentage of completion method. Under the percentage of completion method, a taxpayer must include in gross income for any taxable year an amount that is based on the product of (1) the gross contract price and (2) the percentage of the contract completed as of the end of the year. The percentage of the contract completed as of the end of the year is determined by comparing costs incurred with respect to the contract as of the end of the year with estimated total contract costs.

Because the percentage of completion method relies upon estimated, rather than actual, contract price and costs to determine gross income for any taxable year, a "look-back method" is applied in the year a contract is completed in order to compensate the taxpayer (or the Internal Revenue Service) for the acceleration (or deferral) of taxes paid over the contract term. The first step of the look-back method is to reapply the percentage of completion method using actual contract price and costs rather than estimated contract price and costs. The second step generally requires the taxpayer to recompute its tax liability for each year of the contract using gross income as reallocated under the look-back method. If there is any difference between the recomputed tax liability and the tax liability as previously determined for a year, such difference is treated as a hypothetical underpayment or overpayment of tax to which the taxpayer applies a rate of interest equal to the overpayment rate, compounded daily. The taxpayer receives (or pays) interest if the net amount of interest applicable to hypothetical overpayments exceeds (or is less than) the amount of interest applicable to hypothetical underpayments. The look-back method must be reapplied for any item of income or cost that is properly taken into account after the completion of the contract.

House bill

The House bill provides that a taxpayer may elect not to apply the look-back method with respect to a long-term contract if for each prior contract year, the cumulative taxable income (or loss) under the contract as determined using estimated contract price and costs is within 10 percent of the cumulative taxable income (or loss) as determined using actual contract price and costs. The bill also provides that a taxpayer may elect not to reapply the look-back method with respect to a contract if, as of the close of any taxable year after the year the contract is completed, the cumulative taxable income (or loss) under the contract is within 10 percent of the cumulative look-back income (or loss) as of the close of the most recent year in which the look-back method was applied (or would have applied but for the other de minimis exception described above). Finally, the bill reduces the number of interest rates applicable under the look-back method.

Effective date.—The provision applies to contracts completed in taxable years ending after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

2. APPLICATION OF MARK-TO-MARKET ACCOUNTING METHOD TO TRADERS IN SECURITIES (SEC. 14552 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A dealer in securities must compute its income pursuant to a "mark-to-market" method of accounting prescribed by section 475. Under section 475, any security that is inventory in the hands of a dealer must be included in inventory at its fair market value and any security that is that is not inventory in the hands of a dealer and that is held at year end shall be treated as sold for its fair market value. For this purpose, a "dealer in securities" is any person who (1) regularly purchases securities from or sells securities to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business, or (2) regularly offers to enter into, assume, offset, assign or otherwise terminate positions in securities with customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

Traders in securities generally are taxpayers who derive their income principally from the active sale or exchange of securities on the market (rather than to customers, as in the case of a dealer in securities). Section 475 does not explicitly apply to traders in securities. In general, there are no specific statutory provisions that mandate the use of an overall method of accounting by traders. Thus, traders generally account for gains and losses on trading securities when the securities are sold, rather than marking the securities to market, for Federal income tax purposes.

House bill

The House bill provides that a trader in securities may, with the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury, elect to change its method of accounting to adopt a mark-to-market method for its trading activities. Such method may be based on the provisions of present-law section 475, modified to clearly reflect the income of the taxpayer. The adoption of a mark-to-market method of accounting may not change the character of the gain or loss with respect to the securities.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. MODIFICATION OF RULING AMOUNTS FOR NUCLEAR DECOMMISSIONING COSTS (SEC. 14553 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under the economic performance rules, a deduction for accrual basis taxpayers generally is deferred until there is economic performance for the item for which the deduction is claimed (sec. 461(h)). Present law contains an exception to the economic performance rules under which a taxpayer responsible for nuclear power plant decommissioning may elect to deduct contributions made to a qualified nuclear decommissioning fund (sec. 468A).

A qualified decommissioning fund is a segregated fund established by the taxpayer that is used exclusively for the payment of decommissioning costs, taxes on fund income, payment of management costs of the fund, and investment in certain types of investments. Contributions to the fund are deductible in the year made to the extent that these amounts were collected as part of the cost of service to ratepayers. Withdrawals of funds by the taxpayer to pay for decommissioning expenses are included in income at that time, but the taxpayer also is entitled to a deduction at that time for decommissioning expenses as economic performance for those costs occurs. A 20-percent tax rate applies to the taxable income of the fund.

In order to prevent accumulations of funds over the remaining life of the plant in excess of those required to pay future decommissioning costs and to ensure that contributions to the funds are not deducted more rapidly than level funding, taxpayers are required to obtain a ruling from the IRS to establish the maximum contribution that may be made to the fund. Taxpayers are required to obtain subsequent rulings to reflect changes in the ruling amount in certain instances.

House bill

The House bill repeals the requirement that a taxpayer obtain certain rulings from the IRS in order to deduct contributions to a nuclear decommissioning fund. Under the House bill, a taxpayer is required to obtain an initial ruling to determine its maximum deduction for contributions to a fund, but is not required to obtain subsequent rulings if such amounts are not substantially modified.

The taxpayer is required to notify the Secretary of the Treasury whenever the ruling amount is modified.

Effective date.—The provision applies to modifications after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. ELECTION OF ALTERNATIVE TAXABLE YEARS BY PARTNERSHIPS AND S CORPORATIONS (SEC. 14554 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The taxable income of a partnership or an S corporation (a "flow-thru entity") generally is reported by the partnership's partners or the corporation's shareholders (the "owners") in the taxable year within which the taxable year of the flow-thru entity ends. As a result, if a flow-thru entity uses a taxable year that is the same as the taxable year of its owners, the owners will report income earned by the entity in the year that the income is earned. If a flow-thru entity uses a taxable year that is different than the taxable year of its owners, the owners will defer reporting a portion of the income earned by the entity until the year following the year the income was earned. In order to avoid this deferral, under present law, a flow-through entity generally must use a taxable year that corresponds to the taxable years of its owners (i.e., generally, the calendar year in the case of an entity owned by individuals).

However, under certain circumstances, deferral through use of a fiscal year is permitted (sec. 444). A flow-thru entity may use a fiscal year that it used prior to 1987 or a fiscal year that provides up to a 3-month deferral so long as it makes a payment equal to the income attributable to the deferral period times the highest individual tax rate plus 1 percentage point (currently, 40.6 percent). Such payments remain on deposit and may be refunded if the income of the entity for the deferral period diminishes or the entity abandons its fiscal year (sec. 7519).

House bill

The House bill allows any flow-thru entity to use a fiscal year so long as the entity makes quarterly estimated tax payments at an applicable rate. These estimated tax payments are treated as estimated tax payments of the owners of the flow-thru entity for the owners' taxable year in which the fiscal year ends. Estimated tax payments are not required for a taxable year if the amount of aggregate payments otherwise due is $5,000 or less.

In determining its quarterly estimated tax payments, the entity may use (1) the 100-percent method, (2) the 110-percent method, or (3) the annualization method. Under the 100-percent method, the required quarterly installment is one-quarter of the product of the entity's applicable income for the current year and the applicable rate. Under the 110-percent method, the required quarterly installment is one-quarter of 110 percent of the product of the entity's applicable income for the preceding year and the applicable rate. The 110-percent method is not available if the entity's current year applicable income exceeds its preceding-year applicable income by more than $750,000. Under the annualization method, the required quarterly installment is one-quarter of the product of the entity's annualized applicable income and the applicable rate. "Applicable income" is determined by taking the entity's items into account under subchapter K or S, as the case may be, with certain adjustments. The "applicable rate" is 34 percent, unless the flow-thru entity is a "high income average entity," in which case the applicable rate is 39.6 percent. A "high average income entity" is one where the average applicable income of the 2-percent owners for the preceding year was at least $250,000 or, in the case of a partnership, the applicable income for the preceding year was at least $10,000,000.

A flow-thru entity is not allowed to make a new election under present-law section 444. An entity that currently has a section 444 election in effect may (1) retain the election or (2) revoke the election and receive a refund of its deposit, or (3) make a new section 444 election and treat its deposit as a payment of estimated tax under the provision.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1996.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

D. TAX-EXEMPT BOND PROVISIONS

1. REPEAL OF $100,000 LIMITATION ON UNSPENT PROCEEDS UNDER 1-YEAR EXCEPTION FROM REBATE (SEC. 14561 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Generally, arbitrage profits from investing bond proceeds in investments unrelated to the governmental purpose of the borrowing must be rebated to the Federal Government. No rebate is required six months after issuance by issuers of certain governmental bonds and qualified 501(c)(3) bonds if (1) all proceeds other than an amount not exceeding the lesser of five percent or $100,000 are spent within six months and (2) the remaining proceeds are spent within one year after the bonds are issued.

House bill

The House bill repeals the $100,000 limit on proceeds that may remain unspent after six months for certain governmental and qualified 501(c)(3) bonds.

Effective date.—Bonds issued after the date of enactment.

Senate agreement

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. EXCEPTION FROM REBATE FOR EARNINGS ON BONA FIDE DEBT SERVICE FUND UNDER CONSTRUCTION BOND RULES (SEC. 14562 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In general, arbitrage profits from investing bond proceeds in investments unrelated to the governmental purpose of the borrowing must be rebated to the Federal Government. An exception is provided for certain construction bond issues if the available construction proceeds of the issue are spent at minimum specified rates during the 24-month period after the bonds are issued. The exception does not apply to bond proceeds invested after the 24-month expenditure period as part of a bona fide debt service fund.

House bill

The House bill exempts earnings on bond proceeds invested in bona fide debt service funds from the arbitrage rebate requirement and the penalty requirement of the 24-month exception if the spending requirements of that exception are otherwise satisfied.

Effective date.—Bonds issued after the date of enactment.

Senate agreement

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

3. REPEAL OF DEBT SERVICE-BASED LIMITATION ON INVESTMENT IN CERTAIN NONPURPOSE INVESTMENTS (SEC. 14563 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

With certain exceptions, present law limits the amount of the proceeds of private activity bonds (other than qualified 501(c)(3) bonds) that may be invested at materially higher yields at any time during a bond year to 150 percent of the debt service for that bond year. (Any profits earned from higher yielding investments generally must be rebated to the Federal government.)

House bill

The House bill repeals the 150-percent of debt service yield restriction.

Effective date.—Bonds issued after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. REPEAL OF EXPIRED TAX-EXEMPT BOND PROVISIONS (SEC. 14564 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Present law includes two special exceptions to the arbitrage rebate and pooled financing temporary period rules for certain qualified student loan bonds. These exceptions applied only to bonds issued before January 1, 1989.

House bill

The House bill repeals these special exceptions as "deadwood."

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

E. INSURANCE PROVISIONS

1. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN INSURANCE CONTRACTS ON RETIRED LIVES (SEC. 14571 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12877 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Life insurance companies are allowed a deduction for any net increase in reserves and are required to include in income any net decrease in reserves. The reserve of a life insurance company for any contract is the greater of the net surrender value of the contract or the reserve determined under Federally prescribed rules. In no event, however, may the amount of the reserve for tax purposes for any contract at any time exceed the amount of the reserve for annual statement purposes.

Special rules are provided in the case of a variable contract. Under these rules, the reserve for a variable contract is adjusted by (1) subtracting any amount that has been added to the reserve by reason of appreciation in the value of assets underlying such contract, and (2) adding any amount that has been subtracted from the reserve by reason of depreciation in the value of assets underlying such contract. In addition, the basis of each asset underlying a variable contract is adjusted for appreciation or depreciation to the extent the reserve is adjusted.

A variable contract generally is defined as any annuity or life insurance contract (1) that provides for the allocation of all or part of the amounts received under the contract to an account that is segregated from the general asset accounts of the company, and (2) under which, in the case of an annuity contract, the amounts paid in, or the amounts paid out, reflect the investment return and the market value of the segregated asset account, or, in the case of a life insurance contract, the amount of the death benefit (or the period of coverage) is adjusted on the basis of the investment return and the market value of the segregated asset account. A pension plan contract that is not a life, accident, or health, property, casualty, or liability insurance contract is treated as an annuity contract for purposes of this definition.

The House bill provides that a variable contract is to include a contract that provides for the funding of group term life or group accident and health insurance on retired lives if: (1) the contract provides for the allocation of all or part of the amounts received under the contract to an account that is segregated from the general asset account of the company; and (2) the amounts paid in, or the amounts paid out, under the contract reflect the investment return and the market value of the segregated asset account underlying the contract.

Thus, the reserve for such a contract is to be adjusted by (1) subtracting any amount that has been added to the reserve by reason of appreciation in the value of assets underlying such contract, and (2) adding any amount that has been subtracted from the reserve by reason of depreciation in the value of assets underlying such contract. In addition, the basis of each asset underlying the contract is to be adjusted for appreciation or depreciation to the extent that the reserve is adjusted.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

2. TREATMENT OF MODIFIED GUARANTEED CONTRACTS (SEC. 14572 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 12878 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Life insurance companies are allowed a deduction for any net increase in reserves and are required to include in income any net decrease in reserves. The reserve of a life insurance company for any contract is the greater of the net surrender value of the contract or the reserve determined under Federally prescribed rules. The net surrender value of a contract is the cash surrender value reduced by any surrender penalty, except that any market value adjustment required on surrender is not taken into account. In no event, however, may the amount of the reserve for tax purposes for any contract at any time exceed the amount of the reserve for annual statement purposes.

In general, assets held for investment are treated as capital assets. Any gain or loss from the sale or exchange of a capital asset is treated as a capital gain or loss and is taken into account for the taxable year in which the asset is sold or exchanged.

House bill

The House bill generally applies a mark-to-market regime to assets held as part of a segregated account under a modified guaranteed contract issued by a life insurance company. Gain or loss with respect to such assets held as of the close of any taxable year are taken into account for that year (even though the assets have not been sold or exchanged),[119] and are treated as ordinary. If gain or loss is taken into account by reason of the mark-to-market requirement, then the amount of gain or loss subsequently realized as a result of sale, exchange, or other disposition of the asset, or as a result of the application of the mark-to-market requirement is appropriately adjusted to reflect such gain or loss. In addition, the reserve for a modified guaranteed contract is determined by taking into account the market value adjustment required on surrender of the contract.

A modified guaranteed contract is defined as any life insurance contract, annuity contract or pension plan contract[120] that is not a variable contract (within the meaning of Code section 817), and that satisfies the following requirements. All or a part of the amounts received under the contract must be allocated to an account which, pursuant to State law or regulation, is segregated from the general asset accounts of the company and is valued from time to time by reference to market values.

The Treasury Department is authorized to issue regulations or other guidance under the provision.

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995. A taxpayer that is required to (1) change its calculation of reserves to take into account market value adjustments and (2) mark to market its segregated assets in order to comply with the requirements of the provision is treated as having initiated changes in method of accounting and as having received the consent of the Treasury Department to make such changes.

The section 481(a) adjustments required by reason of the changes in method of accounting are to be combined and taken into account as a single net adjustment for the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, with clarifications.

Under the House bill and the Senate amendment, the reserves for a modified guaranteed contract must be valued at market for annual statement purposes and the Federally prescribed reserve for the contract under section 807(d)(2) must be valued at market. The Senate Finance committee report provides that for this purpose, reserves are valued at market if they are calculated using a current market rate of interest, as of the reserve valuation date, that is appropriate for the obligations under the contract to which the reserve relates.

[119] The wash sale rules of section 1091 of the Code are not to apply to any loss that is required to be taken into account solely by reason of the mark-to-market requirement.

The House bill and the Senate amendment also provide that the Treasury Department is authorized to determine the interest rates applicable under sections 807(c)(3), 807(d)(2)(B) and 812 with respect to modified guaranteed contracts annually, calculating such rates as appropriate for modified guaranteed contracts. For example, it may be appropriate to take into account the yield on the assets underlying the contract in determining such rates.

The conference agreement clarifies that the Treasury Department has discretion to determine an appropriate rate that is a current market rate, which could be determined, for example, either by using a rate that is appropriate for the obligations under the contract to which the reserve relates, or by taking into account the yield on the assets underlying the contract.

The conferees intend that the Treasury Department may exercise this authority by issuing a periodic announcement of the appropriate market interest rates or formula for determining such rates.

3. MINIMUM TAX TREATMENT OF CERTAIN PROPERTY AND CASUALTY INSURANCE COMPANIES (SEC. 14573 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Property and casualty insurance companies whose net written premiums (or if greater, direct written premiums) for the taxable year exceed $350,000 but do not exceed $1,200,000 may elect to be taxed only on taxable investment income for regular tax purposes, without regard to underwriting income or expense (sec. 831(b)).

This election does not apply for alternative minimum tax purposes. All corporations, including insurance companies, are subject to an alternative minimum tax. Alternative minimum taxable income is increased by 75 percent of the excess of adjusted current earnings over alternative minimum taxable income (determined without regard to this adjustment and without regard to net operating losses).

House bill

The House bill provides that a property and casualty insurance company that elects for regular tax purposes to be taxed only on taxable investment income determines its adjusted current earnings under the alternative minimum tax without regard to any amount not taken into account in determining its gross investment income under section 834(b). Thus, adjusted current earnings of an electing company is determined without regard to underwriting income (or underwriting expense, as provided in sec. 56(g)(4)(B)(I)(II)).

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

F. OTHER PROVISIONS

1. CLOSING OF PARTNERSHIP TAXABLE YEAR WITH RESPECT TO DECEASED PARTNER (SEC. 14581 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The partnership taxable year closes with respect to a partner whose entire interest is sold, exchanged or liquidated, but generally not upon the death of a partner. A decedent's entire share of items of income, gain, loss, deduction and credit for the partnership taxable year in which death occurs is taxed to the decedent's estate or successor in interest, rather than to the decedent on his or her final tax return. See Estate of Hesse v. Commissioner, 74 T.C. 1307, 1311 (1980).

House bill

The House bill provides that the taxable year of a partnership closes with respect to a partner whose entire interest in the partnership terminates, whether by death, liquidation or otherwise. The provision is not intended to change present law with respect to the effect upon the partnership taxable year of a transfer of a partnership interest by a debtor to the debtor's estate (under Chapters 7 or 11 of Title 11, relating to bankruptcy).

Effective date.—Partnership taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. TAX CREDIT FOR SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES PAID WITH RESPECT TO EMPLOYEE CASH TIPS (SEC. 14582 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Employee tip income is treated as employer-provided wages for purposes of the Federal Insurance Contributions Act ("FICA"). Employees are required to report to the employer the amount of tips received. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 ("OBRA 1993") provided a business tax credit with respect to certain employer FICA taxes paid with respect to tips treated as paid by the employer. The credit applies to tips received from customers in connection with the provision of food or beverages for consumption on the premises of an establishment with respect to which the tipping of employees is customary. OBRA 1993 provided that the FICA tip credit is effective for taxes paid after December 31, 1993. Temporary Treasury regulations provide that the tax credit is available only with respect to tips reported by the employee. The temporary regulations also provide that the credit is effective for FICA taxes paid by an employer after December 31, 1993, with respect to tips received for services performed after December 31, 1993.

House bill

The House bill clarifies the credit with respect to employer FICA taxes paid on tips by providing that the credit is available whether or not the employee reported the tips and that the credit is effective with respect to taxes paid after December 31, 1993, regardless of when the services with respect to which the tips are received were performed.

Effective date.—The provision is effective as if included in OBRA 1993.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. DUE DATE FOR FIRST QUARTER ESTIMATED TAX PAYMENTS BY PRIVATE FOUNDATIONS (SEC. 14583 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under section 4940, tax-exempt private foundations generally are required to pay an excise tax equal to two percent of their net investment income for the taxable year. Under section 6655(g)(3), private foundations are required to pay estimated tax with respect to their excise tax liability under section 4940 (as well as any unrelated business income tax (UBIT) liability under section 511).[121] Section 6655(c) provides that this estimated tax is payable in quarterly installments and that, for calendar-year foundations, the first quarterly installment is due on April 15th. Under section 6655(I), foundations with taxable years other than the calendar year must make their quarterly estimated tax payments no later than the dates in their fiscal years that correspond to the dates applicable to calendar-year foundations.

House bill

The House bill amends section 6655(g)(3) to provide that a calendar-year foundation's first-quarter estimated tax payment is due on May 15th (which is the same day that its annual return, Form 990-PF, for the preceding year is due). As a result of the operation of present-law section 6655(I), fiscal-year foundations will be required to make their first-quarter estimated tax payment no later than the 15th day of the fifth month of their taxable year.

Effective date.—Taxable years beginning after 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

[121] Generally, the amount of the first quarter payment must be at least 25 percent of the lesser of (1) the preceding year's tax liability, as shown on the foundation's Form 990–PF, or (2) 95 percent of the foundation's current-year tax liability.

XVI. SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS RELATING TO ESTATES, GIFTS, AND TRUSTS

A. ESTATE AND TRUST INCOME TAX PROVISIONS

1. CERTAIN REVOCABLE TRUSTS TREATED AS PART OF ESTATE (SEC. 14601 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

While both estates and revocable inter vivos trusts perform essentially the same function of administering the disposition of the decedent's property after the testator or grantor's death, numerous differences presently exist between the income tax treatment of estates and revocable trusts.

House bill

The House bill provides an irrevocable election to treat a qualified revocable trust as part of the decedent's estate for Federal income tax purposes. This elective treatment is effective from the date of the decedent's death until two years after his or her death (if no estate tax return is required) or six months after the final determination of estate tax liability (if an estate tax return is required).

Effective date.—Effective for decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, with technical modifications that (1) provide an election for a revocable trust to be treated as an estate in cases where there is no taxable estate; and (2) permit the election to be made in cases where only a portion of a revocable trust is treated as owned by the decedent.

2. DISTRIBUTIONS DURING FIRST 65 DAYS OF TAXABLE YEAR OF ESTATE (SEC. 14602 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under the "65-day rule," a trust may elect to treat distributions paid within 65 days after the close of its taxable year as paid on the last day of its taxable year (sec. 663(b)). The 65-day rule is not applicable to estates.

House bill

The House bill extends application of the 65-day rule to distributions by estates. Thus, an executor can elect to treat distributions paid within 65 days after the close of the estate's taxable year as having been paid on the last day of such taxable year.

Effective date.—Effective for taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. SEPARATE SHARE RULES AVAILABLE TO ESTATES (SEC. 14603 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Trusts with more than one beneficiary must use the "separate share" rule under which different tax treatment is accorded to distributions to different beneficiaries to reflect the income earned by different shares of the trust's corpus (sec. 663(c)). The separate share rule does not apply to estates.

House bill

The House bill extends the application of the separate share rule to estates. There are separate shares in an estate when the governing instrument of the estate creates separate economic interests in one beneficiary or class of beneficiaries such that the economic interests of those beneficiaries are not affected by economic interests accruing to another separate beneficiary or class of beneficiaries.

Effective date.—Effective for decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. EXECUTOR OF ESTATE AND BENEFICIARIES TREATED AS RELATED PERSONS FOR DISALLOWANCE OF LOSSES, ETC. (SEC. 14604 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Section 267 disallows a deduction for any loss on the sale of an asset to a person related to the taxpayer. Section 1239 disallows capital gain treatment on the sale of depreciable property to a related person. Neither section 267 or section 1239 presently treat an estate and a beneficiary of the estate as related persons.

House bill

An estate and a beneficiary of that estate are treated as related persons for purposes of sections 267 and 1239, except in the case of a sale or exchange in satisfaction of a pecuniary bequest.

Effective date.—Effective for taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. LIMITATION ON TAXABLE YEAR OF ESTATES (SEC. 14605 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Trusts are required to use a calendar year and, consequently, income of a trust that is distributed to a calendar-year beneficiary in the year earned is taxed to the beneficiary in the year earned. In contrast, estates are allowed to use any fiscal year and, consequently, the taxation of distributions to a calendar-year beneficiary in up to the last 11 months of the calendar year can be deferred until the next taxable year depending upon the fiscal year selected.

House bill

The House bill limits the taxable year of an estate to a year ending on October 31, November 30, or December 31. Thus, the maximum deferral allowable to a calendar-year beneficiary is with respect to distributions made in the last two months of the calendar year.

Effective date.—Effective for decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

6. REPEAL OF CERTAIN THROWBACK RULES APPLICABLE TO DOMESTIC TRUSTS (SEC. 14606 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Nongrantor trusts are subject to a separate graduated tax rate structure which historically has permitted accumulated trust income to be taxed at lower rates than the rates applicable to trust beneficiaries. Under the so-called "throwback" rules, the distribution of previously accumulated trust income to a beneficiary is subject to tax (in addition to any tax paid by the trust on that income) where the beneficiary's average top marginal rate in the previous five years is higher than that of the trust.

Under section 644, if property is sold within two years of its contribution to a trust, the gain that would have been recognized had the contributor sold the property is taxed at the contributor's marginal tax rates. In effect, section 644 treats such gains as if the contributor had realized the gain and then transferred the net after-tax proceeds from the sale to the trust as corpus.

House bill

The House bill exempts from the throwback rules amounts distributed by a domestic trust after December 31, 1995. The provision also provides that precontribution gain on property sold by a domestic trust no longer is subject to section 644 (i.e., taxed at the contributor's marginal tax rates).

Effective date.—The provision with respect to the throwback rules is effective for distributions made in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995. The modification to section 644 applies to sales or exchanges after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

7. TREATMENT OF FUNERAL TRUSTS (SEC. 14607 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A pre-need funeral trust is an arrangement where an individual purchases funeral services or merchandise in advance of the individual's death. The individual enters into a contract with the provider of such services or merchandise whereby the individual selects the services or merchandise to be provided upon his or her death, and agrees to pay for them in advance of his or her death. Such amounts (or a portion thereof) are held in trust during the individual's lifetime and are paid to the seller upon the individual's death.

Under present law, pre-need funeral trusts generally are treated as grantor trusts, and the annual income earned by such trusts is taxed to the purchaser/grantor of the trust. Rev. Rul. 87–127. Any amount received from the trust by the seller (as payment for services or merchandise) is includible in the gross income of the seller.

House bill

The House bill allows the trustee of a pre-need funeral trust to elect special tax treatment for such a trust, to the extent the trust would otherwise be treated as a grantor trust. A qualified funeral trust is defined as one which meets the following requirements: (1) the trust arises as the result of a contract between a person engaged in the trade or business of providing funeral or burial services or merchandise and one or more individuals to have such services or property provided upon such individuals' death; (2) the only beneficiaries of the trust are individuals who have entered into contracts to have such services or merchandise provided upon their death; (3) the only contributions to the trust are contributions by or for the benefit of the trust beneficiaries; (4) the trust's only purpose is to hold and invest funds that will be used to make payments for funeral or burial services or merchandise for the trust beneficiaries; and (5) the trust has not accepted contributions totaling more than $5,000 by or for the benefit of any individual.

The trustee's election to have this provision apply to a qualified funeral trust is to be made separately with respect to each purchaser's trust. The amount of tax paid with respect to each purchaser's trust is determined in accordance with the income tax rate schedule generally applicable to estates and trusts (Code sec. 1(e)), but no deduction is allowed under section 642(b). The tax on the annual earnings of the trust is payable by the trustee.

Effective date.—Effective for taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, with the modification that a qualified funeral trust may accept aggregate contributions of up to $7,000 by or for the benefit of any individual.

B. ESTATE AND GIFT TAX PROVISIONS

1. CLARIFICATION OF WAIVER OF CERTAIN RIGHTS OF RECOVERY (SEC. 14611 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

For estate and gift tax purposes, a marital deduction is allowed for qualified terminable interest property (QTIP). Such property generally is included in the surviving spouse's gross estate upon his or her death. The surviving spouse's estate is entitled to recover the portion of the estate tax attributable to inclusion of QTIP from the person receiving the property, unless the spouse directs otherwise by will (sec. 2207A). For this purpose, a will provision specifying that all taxes shall be paid by the estate is sufficient to waive the right of recovery.

A decedent's gross estate includes the value of previously transferred property in which the decedent retains enjoyment or the right to income (sec. 2036). The estate is entitled to recover from the person receiving the property a portion of the estate tax attributable to the inclusion (sec. 2207B). This right may be waived only by a provision in the will (or revocable trust) specifically referring to section 2207B.

House bill

The House bill provides that the right of recovery with respect to QTIP is waived only to the extent that language in the decedent's will or revocable trust specifically so indicates (e.g., by a specific reference to QTIP, the QTIP trust, section 2044, or section 2207A). Thus, a general provision specifying that all taxes be paid by the estate is no longer sufficient to waive the right of recovery.

The House bill also provides that the right of contribution for property over which the decedent retained enjoyment or the right to income is waived by a specific indication in the decedent's will or revocable trust, but specific reference to section 2207B is no longer required.

Effective date.—Effective for decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. ADJUSTMENTS FOR GIFTS WITHIN 3 YEARS OF DECEDENT'S DEATH (SEC. 14612 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A taxpayer may exclude $10,000 of gifts of present interests in property made to each donee during a calendar year. Certain transfers made from a revocable trust within three years of death may be included in the decedent's gross estate even though such transfers would qualify for the annual $10,000 exclusion if made by the decedent directly.

House bill

The House bill provides that a transfer from a revocable trust is treated as if made directly by the grantor. Thus, an annual exclusion gift from such trust is not included in the gross estate.

Effective date.—Effective for decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. CLARIFICATION OF QUALIFIED TERMINABLE INTEREST RULES (SEC. 14613 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A marital deduction is allowed for qualified terminal interest property ("QTIP"). Property is QTIP only if the surviving spouse is entitled to all income from the property for life, payable at least annually. QTIP generally is includible in the surviving spouse's gross estate.

The United States Tax Court has held that, in order to satisfy the QTIP requirements, the income accumulating between the last distribution date and the date of the surviving spouse's death (the "accumulated income") must be paid to the spouse's estate or be subject to a power of appointment held by the spouse. In contrast, proposed Treasury regulations presently provide that the QTIP requirements may be satisfied even if the accumulated income is not required to be distributed to the surviving spouse or the surviving spouse's estate.

House bill

The House bill provides that property does not fail to be QTIP solely because the accumulated income is not required to be distributed to the surviving spouse. Such income is includible in the surviving spouse's gross estate.

Effective date.—Effective for decedents dying, and gifts made, after the date of enactment. However, the bill does not include in the surviving spouse's gross estate property transferred before the date of enactment for which no marital deduction was claimed.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. TRANSITIONAL RULE UNDER SECTION 2056A (SEC. 14614 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A "marital deduction" generally is allowed for estate and gift tax purposes for the value of property passing to a spouse. The marital deduction is not available for property passing to an alien spouse outside a qualified domestic trust ("QDT"). An estate tax generally is imposed on corpus distributions from a QDT.

A QDT was originally defined as a trust that, among other things, required all trustees be U.S. citizens or domestic corporations. This provision was later modified to require that at least one trustee be a U.S. citizen or domestic corporation and that no corpus distribution be made unless such trustee has the right to withhold any estate tax imposed on the distribution (the "withholding requirement").

House bill

A trust created before the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 is treated as satisfying the withholding requirement if its governing instrument requires that all trustees be U.S. citizens or domestic corporations.

Effective date.—The provision applies as if included in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. OPPORTUNITY TO CORRECT CERTAIN FAILURES UNDER SECTION 2032A (SEC. 14615 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

For estate tax purposes, an executor may elect to value certain real property used in farming or other closely held business operations at its current use value rather than its highest and best use (sec. 2032A). A written agreement signed by each person who has an interest in the property must be filed with the election.

In 1984, section 2032A was amended to provide that if an executor makes a timely election that substantially complies with Treasury regulations, but fails to provide all required information or the signatures of all persons required to enter into the agreement, the executor may supply the missing information within a reasonable period of time (not exceeding 90 days) after notification by the Treasury Department.

House bill

The House bill extends the procedures allowing subsequent submission of information to any executor who makes a timely election and submits the recapture agreement, without regard to substantial compliance with the Treasury regulations. Thus, the bill allows a technically defective current use valuation election to be corrected if the executor supplies the missing information or signatures within a reasonable period of time (not exceeding 90 days) after notification by the Treasury Department.

Effective date.—The provision applies to decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill. The conferees believe that the Treasury Department has taken an unnecessarily restrictive view of the 1984 amendment to section 2032A and intend no inference that the Treasury Department lacks the power, under the law in effect prior to enactment of the conference agreement, to correct the situation addressed by this provision. The conferees intend that, with respect to technically defective 2032A elections made prior to the date of enactment, prior law should be applied in a manner consistent with the provision.

6. UNIFIED CREDIT OF DECEDENT INCREASED BY UNIFIED CREDIT OF SPOUSE USED ON SPLIT GIFT INCLUDED IN DECEDENT'S GROSS ESTATE (SEC. 14616 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The estate tax is imposed on all of the assets held by the decedent at his death, including the value of property previously transferred by the decedent in which the decedent retained certain powers or interests, e.g., sections 2036 (transfers with retained life estate), 2037 (transfers taking effect at death), 2038 (revocable transfers), or 2042 (proceeds of life insurance). Under section 2035, the estate tax also would apply with respect to property in which such a retained power or interest is transferred within three years of death.

Under section 2513, spouses may elect to treat a gift made by one spouse to a third person as made one-half by each spouse (i.e., "gift-splitting").

House bill

With respect to any split-gift property that is subsequently included in the estate of the transferor spouse under sections 2035, 2036, 2037 or 2038, the House bill increases the unified credit allowable to the transferor spouse's estate by the amount of the unified credit previously allowed to the nontransferor spouse with respect to the split gift.

Effective date.—The provision applies to gifts made after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

7. REFORMATION OF DEFECTIVE BEQUESTS, ETC. TO SPOUSE OF DECEDENT (SEC. 14617 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A marital deduction generally is allowed for estate and gift tax purposes for the value of property passing to a spouse. However, "terminable interest" property (i.e., an interest in property that will terminate or fail) transferred to a spouse generally will only qualify for the marital deduction under certain special rules designed to ensure that there will be an estate or gift tax to the transferee spouse on unspent transferred proceeds.

One of the special terminable interest rules allows a marital deduction where the decedent transfers property to a "power of appointment trust," i.e., a trust that is required to pay income to the surviving spouse and over which the surviving spouse has a general power of appointment at that spouse's death (sec. 2056(b)(5)). Another special rule called the "qualified terminable interest property" rule ("QTIP") generally permits a marital deduction for transfers by the decedent to a trust that is required to distribute all income to the surviving spouse for life at least annually and an election is made to subject the transferee spouse to transfer tax on the trust property.

To qualify for the marital deduction, a power of appointment trust or QTIP trust must meet certain specific requirements. If there is a technical defect in meeting those requirements, the marital deduction may be lost.

House bill

The House bill allows the marital deduction with respect to a defective power of appointment or QTIP trust if there is a "qualified reformation" of the trust that changes the governing instrument in a manner that corrects the defect. Where a reformation proceeding is commenced after the due date for the estate tax return (including extensions), the reformation qualifies only if, prior to reformation, the governing instrument provides (1) that the surviving spouse is entitled to all income from the property for life, and (2) no person other than the surviving spouse is entitled to any distributions during the surviving spouse's life. With respect to QTIP, an election to qualify must be made by the executor on the estate tax return as required by section 2056(b)(7)(B)(v).

The determination as to whether the property qualifies for the marital deduction is made either as of the due date for filing the estate or gift tax return (including any extensions) or the time that changes are completed pursuant to a reformation proceeding. The statute of limitations is extended with respect to the estate or gift tax attributable to the trust property until one year after the date the Treasury Department is notified that a qualified reformation has been completed or that the reformation proceeding has otherwise terminated.

Effective date.—The provision applies to decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

8. GIFTS MAY NOT BE REVALUED FOR ESTATE TAX PURPOSES AFTER EXPIRATION OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS (SEC. 14618 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The Federal estate and gift taxes are unified so that a single progressive rate schedule is applied to an individual's cumulative gifts and bequests. The tax on gifts made in a particular year is computed by determining the tax on the sum of the taxable gifts made that year and all prior years and then subtracting the tax on the prior years' taxable gifts and the unified credit. Similarly, the estate tax is computed by determining the tax on the sum of the taxable estate and prior taxable gifts and then subtracting the tax on taxable gifts and the unified credit. Under a special rule applicable to the computation of the gift tax (sec. 2504(c)), the value of gifts made in prior years is the value that was used to determine the prior year's gift tax. There is no comparable rule in the case of the computation of the estate tax.

Generally, any estate or gift tax must be assessed within three years after the filing of the return. No proceeding in a court for the collection of an estate or gift tax can be begun without an assessment within the three-year period. If no return is filed, the tax may be assessed, or a suit commenced to collect the tax without assessment, at any time. If an estate or gift tax return is filed, and the amount of unreported items exceeds 25 percent of the amount of the reported items, the tax may be assessed or a suit commenced to collect the tax without assessment, within six years after the return was filed (sec. 6501).

Commencement of the statute of limitations generally does not require that a particular gift be disclosed. A special rule, however, applies to certain gifts that are valued under the special valuation rules of Chapter 14. The gift tax statute of limitations runs for such a gift only if it is disclosed on a gift tax return in a manner adequate to apprise the Secretary of the Treasury of the nature of the item.

Most courts have permitted the Commissioner to redetermine the value of a gift for which the statute of limitations period for the gift tax has expired in order to determine the appropriate tax rate bracket and unified credit for the estate tax.

House bill

The House bill provides that a gift for which the limitations period has passed cannot be revalued for purposes of determining the applicable estate tax bracket and available unified credit. For gifts made in calendar years after the date of enactment, the House bill also extends the special rule governing gifts valued under Chapter 14 to all gifts. Thus, the statute of limitations will not run on an inadequately disclosed transfer in calendar years after the date of enactment, regardless of whether a gift tax return was filed for other transfers in that same year.

It is intended that, in order to revalue a gift that has been adequately disclosed on a gift tax return, the IRS must issue a final notice of redetermination of value (a "final notice") within the statute of limitations applicable to the gift for gift tax purposes (generally, three years). This rule is applicable even where the value of the gift as shown on the return does not result in any gift tax being owed (e.g., through use of the unified credit). It also is anticipated that the IRS will develop an administrative appeals process whereby a taxpayer can challenge a redetermination of value by the IRS prior to issuance of a final notice.

A taxpayer who is mailed a final notice may challenge the redetermined value of the gift (as contained in the final notice) by filing a motion for a declaratory judgment with the United States Tax Court. The motion must be filed on or before 90 days from the date that the final notice was mailed. The statute of limitations is tolled during the pendency of the Tax Court proceeding.

Effective date.—The provision generally applies to gifts made after the date of enactment. The extension of the special rule under chapter 14 to all gifts applies to gifts made in calendar years after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

9. CLARIFICATIONS RELATING TO DISCLAIMERS (SEC. 14619 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Historically, there must be acceptance of a gift in order for the gift to be completed under State law and there is no taxable gift for Federal gift tax purposes unless there is a completed gift. Most States have rules that provide that, where there is a disclaimer of a gift, the property passes to the person who is entitled to the property had the disclaiming party died before the purported transfer.

Under section 2518, a State law type disclaimer is effective for Federal transfer tax purposes if it is an irrevocable and unqualified refusal to accept an interest in property and certain other requirements are satisfied. One of these other requirements is that the disclaimer generally must be made in writing not later than nine months after the transfer creating the interest occurs. Section 2518 is not presently effective for Federal tax purposes other than transfer taxes.

Certain transfers of property also can be treated as qualified disclaimers under section 2518. In order to qualify, these transfer-type disclaimers must be a written transfer of the disclaimant's "entire interest in the property" to persons who would have received the property had there been a valid disclaimer under State law (sec. 2518(c)(3)). Like other disclaimers, the transfer-type disclaimer generally must be made within nine months of the transfer creating the interest.

House bill

The House bill allows a transfer-type disclaimer of an "undivided portion" of the disclaimant transferor's interest in property to qualify under section 2518. The House bill also allows a spouse to make a qualified transfer-type disclaimer where the disclaimed property is transferred to a trust in which the disclaimant spouse has an interest (e.g., a credit shelter trust). Finally, the House bill provides that a qualified disclaimer for transfer tax purposes under section 2518 also is effective for Federal income tax purposes (e.g., disclaimers of interests in annuities and income in respect of a decedent).

Effective date.—The provision applies to disclaimers made after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

10. CLARIFICATION OF TREATMENT OF SURVIVOR ANNUITIES UNDER QUALIFIED TERMINABLE INTEREST RULES (SEC. 14620 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Under State community property laws, each spouse owns an undivided one-half interest in each community property asset. In community property States, a nonparticipant spouse may be treated as having a vested community property interest in his or her spouse's qualified plan, individual retirement arrangement, or simplified employee pension plan.

A survivorship interest in an annuity interest arising out of the decedent's employment that is includible in his or her estate (under section 2039) that passes to the nonparticipant spouse is treated as a deductible marital transfer under the qualified terminable interest property ("QTIP") rules unless the executor of the decedent's estate elects otherwise (sec. 2056(b)(7)(C)). Thus, in noncommunity property States, no estate tax generally is imposed on such survivor annuity interests in the nonsurviving spouse's estate. In contrast, an interest of the nonparticipant spouse arising under community property laws in an annuity derived from the employment of his or her spouse is includible in his or her estate under section 2033 and, therefore, may not qualify as a deductible transfer to his or her surviving spouse under the QTIP rules.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that the marital deduction is available with respect to a nonparticipant spouse's interest in an annuity attributable to community property laws where he or she predeceases the participant spouse. Under the House bill, the nonparticipant spouse's interest in an annuity arising under the community property laws of a State that passes to the surviving participant spouse may qualify for treatment as QTIP under section 2056(b)(7).

Effective date.—The provision applies to decedents dying, or waivers, transfers and disclaimers made, after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

11. TREATMENT UNDER QUALIFIED DOMESTIC TRUST RULES OF FORMS OF OWNERSHIP WHICH ARE NOT TRUSTS (SEC. 14621 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A marital deduction generally is allowed for estate and gift tax purposes for the value of property passing to a spouse. The marital deduction is not available for property passing to an alien spouse outside a qualified domestic trust ("QDT"). An estate tax generally is imposed on corpus distributions from a QDT.

Trusts are not permitted in some countries (e.g., many civil law countries). As a result, it is not possible to create a QDT in those countries.

House bill

The House bill provides the Treasury Department with regulatory authority to treat as trusts legal arrangements that have substantially the same effect as a trust. It is anticipated that such regulations, if any, would only permit a marital deduction with respect to nontrust arrangements under which the U.S. would retain jurisdiction and adequate security to impose U.S. transfer tax on transfers by the surviving spouse of the property transferred by the decedent.

Effective date.—The provision applies to decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

12. AUTHORITY TO WAIVE REQUIREMENT OF UNITED STATES TRUSTEE FOR QUALIFIED DOMESTIC TRUSTS (SEC. 14622 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In order for a trust to be a QDT, a U.S. trustee must have the power to approve all corpus distributions from the trust. In some countries, trusts may be prohibited from having a U.S. trustee (e.g., some countries do not allow real property to be placed in trust if a U.S. trustee must approve distributions from the trust.) As a result, such trusts cannot qualify as a QDT.

House bill

In order to permit the establishment of a QDT in those situations where a country prohibits a trust from having a U.S. trustee, the House bill provides the Treasury Department with regulatory authority to waive the requirement that a QDT have a U.S. trustee. It is anticipated that such regulations, if any, provide an alternative mechanism under which the U.S. would retain jurisdiction and adequate security to impose U.S. transfer tax on transfers by the surviving spouse of the property transferred by the decedent.

Effective date.—The provision applies to decedents dying after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

C. GENERATION-SKIPPING TAX PROVISIONS

1. SEVERING OF TRUSTS HOLDING PROPERTY HAVING AN INCLUSION RATIO OF GREATER THAN ZERO (SEC. 14631 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A generation-skipping transfer tax (“GST” tax) generally is imposed on transfers to an individual who is in more than one generation below that of the transferor. An exemption of $1 million is provided for each person making generation-skipping transfers. The transferor (or his or her executor) may allocate the exemption to transferred property. If the value of the transferred property exceeds the amount of the GST exemption allocated to that property, an “inclusion ratio” and an “exclusion ratio” are determined with respect to the property. The exclusion ratio is equal to the amount of the GST exemption allocated to the property divided by the value of the property. The inclusion ration is equal to one minus the exclusion ratio. For any taxable event that occurs with respect to the property, the amount of GST tax generally is determined by multiplying highest estate tax rate by the inclusion ratio and the value of the taxable property at the time of the taxable event.

House bill

If a trust with an inclusion ratio of greater than zero is severed into two separate trusts, the bill allows the trustee to elect to treat one of the separate trusts as having an inclusion ratio of zero and the other separate trust as having an inclusion ratio of one. To qualify for this treatment, the separate trust with the inclusion ratio of one must receive an interest in each property held by the single trust (prior to severance) equal to the single trust's inclusion ratio, except to the extent otherwise provided by Treasury regulation. The remaining interests in each property will be transferred to the separate trust with the inclusion ratio of zero.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for severances of trusts occurring after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. CLARIFICATION OF WHO IS TRANSFEROR WHERE SUBSEQUENT GIFT BY REASON OF POWER OF APPOINTMENT (SEC. 14632 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The exercise or release of a general power of appointment (e.g., a power of withdrawal) generally is treated as a transfer of property by the person who possesses such power (sec. 2514(b)). Under section 2514(e), the lapse of a general power of appointment also is treated as a taxable transfer except to the extent that the power does not exceed the greater of $5,000 or five percent of the fair market value of the property with respect to which the power could have been exercised.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that an individual cannot be treated as a "transferor" with respect to any portion of property with respect to which another person is treated as the "transferor" by reason of the exercise, release or lapse of a general power of appointment with respect to such property.

Effective date.—The provision applies to the exercise, release or lapse of a general power of appointment occurring after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision, because the conferees believe that the House provision reflects present law.

3. TAXABLE TERMINATION NOT TO INCLUDE DIRECT SKIPS (SEC. 14633 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A generation-skipping transfer tax ("GST" tax) generally is imposed on transfers to an individual who is in more than one generation below that of the transferor. Transfers subject to the GST tax include direct skips, taxable terminations and taxable distributions. For this purpose, a direct skip is any transfer subject to estate or gift tax of an interest in property to a skip person (sec. 2612(c)(1)). A taxable termination is a termination (by death, lapse of time, release of power, or otherwise) of an interest in property held in trust unless, immediately after such termination, a non-skip person has an interest in the property, or unless at no time after the termination may a distribution (including a distribution upon termination) be made from the trust to a skip person (sec. 2612(a)). A taxable distribution is a distribution from a trust to a skip person (other than a taxable termination or a direct skip) (sec. 2612(b)).

Direct skips are subject to less GST tax than taxable terminations and distributions since the GST tax on direct skips is paid by the transferor (sec. 2603(a)(3)) and, therefore, the tax base for a direct skip is tax exclusive (like the Federal gift tax), while the GST tax on taxable terminations and distributions is paid by the trust or beneficiary (secs. 2603(a) (1) & (2)) and, therefore, the tax base on taxable terminations and distributions is tax inclusive (like the Federal estate tax).

House bill

The House bill provides that, when a transfer is described as both a direct skip and a taxable termination, the transaction will be treated as a direct skip (i.e., treatment as a direct skip takes precedence over treatment as a taxable termination).

Effective date.—Effective for generation skipping transfers occurring after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

XVII. EXCISE TAX SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS

A. PROVISIONS RELATING TO DISTILLED SPIRITS, WINES, AND BEER (SECS. 14701–14711 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Credit or refund for imported distilled spirits returned bonded premises.—When tax-paid distilled spirits which have been withdrawn from bonded premises of a distilled spirits plant are returned for destruction or redistilling, the excise tax is refunded. This provision does not apply to imported bottled distilled spirits because they are withdrawn from customs custody and not from bonded premises of a distilled spirits plant.

Authority to cancel or credit bonds without submission of records.—Bond generally must be furnished to the Treasury Department when distilled spirits are removed from bonded premises of a distilled spirits plant for exportation without payment of tax. These bonds are canceled or credited when evidence is submitted to the Treasury that the distilled spirits have been exported.

Required maintenance of records on premises of distilled spirits plant.—Distilled spirits plant proprietors are required to maintain records of their production, storage, denaturation, and other processing activities on the premises where the operations covered by the records are carried out.

Transfers from breweries to distilled spirits plants.—Under present law, beer may be transferred without payment of tax from a brewery to a distilled spirits plant to be used in the production of distilled spirits, but only if the brewery is contiguous to the distilled spirits plant.

Requirement that wholesale dealers in liquors post sign.—Wholesale liquor dealers (i.e., dealers, other than wholesale dealers in beer alone) are required to post a sign conspicuously on the outside of their place of business indicating that they are wholesale liquor dealers.

Refund of tax on wine returned to bond.—When unmerchantable wine is returned to bonded production premises, tax that has been paid is returned or credited to the proprietor of the bonded wine cellar to which the wine is delivered.

Use of ameliorating material in certain wines.—Tax law rules govern the extent to which ameliorating material (e.g., sugar) may be added to wines made from high acid fruits and the product still be labeled as a standard, natural wine.

Domestically produced beer for use by foreign embassies, etc.—Distilled spirits, wine, and imported beer may be removed from bond, without payment of tax, for transfer to any customs bonded warehouse for storage pending removal for the official or family use of representatives of foreign governments or public international organizations. No such provision exists under present law for domestically produced beer.

Withdrawal of beer for destruction.—Present law does not specifically permit beer to be removed from a brewery for destruction without payment of tax.

Records of exportation of beer.—Present law provides that a brewer is allowed a refund of tax paid on exported beer upon submission to Treasury Department of certain records indicating that the beer has been exported.

Transfer to brewery of beer imported in bulk.—Imported beer brought into the United States in bulk containers may not be transferred from customs custody to brewery premises without payment of tax. Under certain circumstances, distilled spirits imported into the United States in bulk containers may be transferred from customs custody to bonded premises of a distilled spirits plant where bottling will occur without payment of tax.

House bill

Credit or refund for imported bottled distilled spirits returned to bonded premises.—The House bill conforms the procedures for refunds of tax collected on imported bottled distilled spirits returned to bonded premises to the rules for domestically produced and imported bulk distilled spirits.

Authority to cancel or credit bonds without submission of records.—The House bill authorizes the Treasury Department to permit records of exportation to be maintained by the exporter, rather than requiring submission of proof of exportation to Treasury in all cases.

Repeal of required maintenance of records on premises of distilled spirits plant.—The House bill permits distilled spirits plant proprietors to maintain records of their activities at locations other than the premises where the operations covered by the records are carried out (e.g., corporate headquarters) provided that the records are available for inspection by the Treasury Department during business hours.

Fermented material from any brewery may be received at a distilled spirits plant.—The House bill allows beer to be transferred without payment of tax from a brewery to a distilled spirits plant to be used in the production of distilled spirits, regardless of whether the brewery is contiguous to the distilled spirits plant.

Repeal of requirement that wholesale dealers in liquors post sign.—The House bill repeals the requirement that wholesale liquor dealers post a sign outside their place of business indicating that they are wholesale liquor dealers.

Refund of tax on wine returned to bond not limited to unmerchantable wine.—The House bill repeals the requirement that wine returned to bonded premises be "unmerchantable" in order for tax to be refunded to the proprietor of the bonded wine cellar to which the wine is delivered.

Use of additional ameliorating material in certain wines.—The House bill modifies the wine labeling restrictions to allow any wine made exclusively from a fruit or berry with a natural fixed acid of made exclusively from a fruit or berry with a natural fixed acid of 20 parts per thousand or more (before any correction of such fruit or berry) to contain a volume of ameliorating material not in excess of 60 percent.

Domestically produced beer may be withdrawn free of tax for use by foreign embassies, etc.—The House bill extends to domestically produced beer the present-law rule which permits other alcoholic beverages to be withdrawn from the place of production without payment of tax for the official or family use of representatives of foreign governments or public international organizations.

Beer may be withdrawn free of tax for destruction.—The House bill permits beer to be removed from a brewery without payment of tax for destruction, subject to Treasury Department regulations.

Authority to allow drawback on exported beer without submission of records.—The House bill repeals the present-law requirement that proof of exportation be submitted to the Treasury Department in all cases as a condition of receiving a refund of tax.

Transfer to brewery of beer imported in bulk without payment of tax.—The House bill extends the present-law rule applicable to distilled spirits imported into the United States in bulk containers to beer imported into the United States in bulk containers.

Effective date.—Beginning 180 days after date of enactment. (The provision deleting the requirement that wholesale liquor dealers post a sign outside their place of business is effective on the date of the bill's enactment.)

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, with a modification deleting the following provisions:

(1) Authority for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms ("BATF") to cancel or credit bonds without submission of records;

(2) Repeal of required maintenance of records on premises of distilled spirits plant;

(3) Repeal of requirement that wholesale dealers in liquors post sign;

(4) Relaxation of rules on use of ameliorating material in certain wines;

(5) Provision allowing domestically produced beer to be withdrawn free of tax for use by foreign embassies; and

(6) Authority for BATF to allow drawback on exported beer without submission of records.

B. CONSOLIDATION OF TAXES ON AVIATION GASOLINE (SEC. 14721 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Gasoline used in noncommercial (not for hire) aviation is subject to a 19.4-cents-per-gallon excise tax. 18.4 cents per gallon of this tax is collected when the gasoline is removed from a pipeline or barge terminal. The remaining 1 cent per gallon is imposed at the retail level.

House bill

The House bill consolidates imposition of the aviation gasoline excise tax, with the entire 19.4-cents-per-gallon rate being imposed when the gasoline is removed from a terminal facility.

Effective date.—Sales or uses beginning on or after January 1, 1996.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. OTHER EXCISE TAX PROVISIONS

1. AUTHORITY TO GRANT EXEMPTIONS FROM EXCISE TAX REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS (SEC. 14731 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Certain sales for exempt use of articles subject to Federal excise taxes may not be made without payment of tax unless the manufacturer, the first purchaser, and the second purchaser (if any), are all registered under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Treasury.

House bill

The House bill allows the IRS to provide exemptions from generally applicable excise tax registration requirements for certain classes of taxpayers (rather than only all taxpayers or individually identified taxpayers).

Effective date.—Sales occurring after 180 days after date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. CERTAIN COMBINATIONS NOT TREATED AS MANUFACTURE UNDER RETAIL SALES TAX ON HEAVY TRUCKS (SEC. 14732 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A 12-percent excise tax is imposed on the sale of trucks, tractors, and trailers having a gross vehicle weight in excess of specified amounts. The tax is imposed on the first retail sale of a taxable vehicle or addition thereto.

Generally, repairs of used vehicles are treated as remanufacture (giving rise to tax on the entire vehicle) if certain tests are met.

The mere addition of a fifth wheel to a taxable truck is not treated as remanufacture, although the fifth wheel itself would be taxed.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that the following activities do not constitute remanufacture when performed on a used truck or tractor chassis:

(1) removal of a fifth wheel and addition of a power take-off, hoist, and dump body; or

(2) simple addition of a power take-off, hoist, and dump body.

These activities will remain taxable to the extent of the modifications made.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. REPEAL OF EXPIRED EXCISE TAX PROVISIONS (SEC. 14734 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Temporary reduction in tax on piggyback trailers

Piggyback trailers and semitrailers sold within the one-year period beginning on July 18, 1984, were permitted a temporary reduction in the retail excise tax rate on trailers.

Expiration of excise tax on deep seabed minerals

The Deep Seabed Mineral Resources Act (Public Law 96-283) imposed an excise tax on certain hard minerals mined on the deep seabed. The tax revenues were intended to fund obligations of the United States under a contemplated Law of the Sea Convention. Because the United States did not sign the treaty, this excise tax never became effective and the tax expired after June 28, 1990.

House bill

The House bill repeals the expired tax reduction for piggy back trailers and the excise tax on deep seabed hard minerals as "deadwood."

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

XVIII. ADMINISTRATIVE SIMPLIFICATION PROVISIONS

A. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1. REPEAL OF AUTHORITY TO DISCLOSE WHETHER A PROSPECTIVE JUROR HAS BEEN AUDITED (SEC. 14801 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

In connection with a civil or criminal tax proceeding to which the United States is a party, the Secretary must disclose, upon the written request of either party to the lawsuit, whether an individual who is a prospective juror has or has not been the subject of an audit or other tax investigation by the Internal Revenue Service (sec. 6103(h)(5)).

House bill

The House bill repeals the requirement that the Secretary disclose, upon the written request of either party to the lawsuit, whether an individual who is a prospective juror has or has not been the subject of an audit or other tax investigation by the Internal Revenue Service.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for judicial proceedings pending on, or commenced after, the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. CLARIFICATION OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS (SEC. 14802 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Passthrough entities (such as S corporations, partnerships, and certain trusts) generally are not subject to income tax on their taxable income. Instead, these entities file information returns and the entities' shareholders (or beneficial owners) report their pro rata share of the gross income and are liable for any taxes due.

Some believe that, prior to 1993, it may have been unclear as to whether the statute of limitations for adjustments that arise from distributions from passthrough entities should be applied at the entity or individual level (i.e., whether the 3-year statute of limitations for assessments runs from the time that the entity files its information return or from the time that a shareholder timely files his or her income tax return). In 1993, the Supreme Court held that the limitations period for assessing the income tax liability of an S corporation shareholder runs from the date the shareholder's return is filed (Bufferd v. Comm., 113 S. Ct. 927 (1993)).

House bill

The House bill clarifies that the return that starts the running of the statute of limitations for a taxpayer is the return of the taxpayer and not the return of another person from whom the taxpayer has received an item of income, gain, loss, deduction, or credit.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

3. CERTAIN NOTICES DISREGARDED UNDER PROVISION INCREASING INTEREST RATE ON LARGE CORPORATE UNDERPAYMENTS (SEC. 14803 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The interest rate on a large corporate underpayment of tax is the Federal short-term rate plus five percentage points. A large corporate underpayment is any underpayment by a subchapter C corporation of any tax imposed for any taxable period, if the amount of such underpayment for such period exceeds $100,000. The large corporate underpayment rate generally applies to periods beginning 30 days after the earlier of the date on which the first letter of proposed deficiency, a statutory notice of deficiency, or a nondeficiency letter or notice of assessment or proposed assessment is sent. For this purpose, a letter or notice is disregarded if the taxpayer makes a payment equal to the amount shown on the letter or notice within that 30-day period.

House bill

For purposes of determining the period to which the large corporate underpayment rate applies, any letter or notice is disregarded if the amount of the deficiency, proposed deficiency, assessment, or proposed assessment set forth in the letter or notice is not greater than $100,000 (determined by not taking into account any interest, penalties, or additions to tax).

Effective date.—The provision is effective for purposes of determining interest for periods after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. CLARIFICATION OF AUTHORITY TO WITHHOLD PUERTO RICO INCOME TAXES FROM SALARIES OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES (SEC. 14804 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

If State law provides generally for the withholding of State income taxes from the wages of employees in a State, the Secretary of the Treasury shall (upon the request of the State) enter into an agreement with the State providing for the withholding of State income taxes from the wages of Federal employees in the State. For this purpose, a State is a State, territory, or possession of the United States. The Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit recently held in Romero v. United States (38 F. 3d 1204 (1994)) that Puerto Rico was not encompassed within this definition; consequently, the court invalidated an agreement between the Secretary of the Treasury and Puerto Rico that provided for the withholding of Puerto Rico income taxes from the wages of Federal employees.

House bill

The House bill makes any Commonwealth eligible to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of the Treasury that would provide for income tax withholding from the wages of Federal employees.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

B. TAX COURT PROCEDURES

1. OVERPAYMENT DETERMINATIONS OF TAX COURT (SEC. 14811 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The Tax Court may order the refund of an overpayment determined by the Court, plus interest, if the IRS fails to refund such overpayment and interest within 120 days after the Court's decision becomes final. Whether such an order is appealable is uncertain.

In addition, it is unclear whether the Tax Court has jurisdiction over the validity or merits of certain credits or offsets (e.g., providing for collection of student loans, child support, etc.) made by the IRS that reduce or eliminate the refund to which the taxpayer was otherwise entitled.

House bill

The House bill clarifies that an order to refund an overpayment is appealable in the same manner as a decision of the Tax Court. The House bill also clarifies that the Tax Court does not have jurisdiction over the validity or merits of the credits or offsets that reduce or eliminate the refund to which the taxpayer was otherwise entitled.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. AWARDING OF ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS (SEC. 14812 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Any person who substantially prevails in any action brought by or against the United States in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax, interest, or penalty may be awarded reasonable administrative costs incurred before the IRS and reasonable litigation costs incurred in connection with any court proceeding.

No time limit is specified for the taxpayer to apply to the IRS for an award of administrative costs. In addition, no time limit is specified for a taxpayer to appeal to the Tax Court an IRS decision denying an award of administrative costs. Finally, the procedural rules for adjudicating a denial of administrative costs are unclear.

House bill

The House bill provides that a taxpayer who seeks an award of administrative costs must apply for such costs within 90 days of the date on which the taxpayer was determined to be a prevailing party. The House bill also provides that a taxpayer who seeks to appeal an IRS denial of an administrative cost award must petition the Tax Court within 90 days after the date that the IRS mails the denial notice.

The House bill clarifies that dispositions by the Tax Court of petitions relating only to administrative costs are to be reviewed in the same manner as other decisions of the Tax Court.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

3. REDETERMINATION OF INTEREST PURSUANT TO MOTION (SEC. 14813 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

A taxpayer may seek a redetermination of interest after certain decisions of the Tax Court have become final by filing a petition with the Tax Court.

House bill

The House bill provides that a taxpayer must file a "motion" (rather than a "petition") to seek a redetermination of interest in the Tax Court.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

4. APPLICATION OF NET WORTH REQUIREMENT FOR AWARDS OF LITIGATION COSTS (SEC. 14814 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

Any person who substantially prevails in any action brought by or against the United States in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax, interest, or penalty may be awarded reasonable administrative costs incurred before the IRS and reasonable litigation costs incurred in connection with any court proceeding. A person who substantially prevails must meet certain net worth requirements to be eligible for an award of administrative or litigation costs. In general, only an individual whose net worth does not exceed $2,000,000 is eligible for an award, and only a corporation or partnership whose net worth does not exceed $7,000,000 is eligible for an award. (The net worth determination with respect to a partnership or S corporation applies to all actions that are in substance partnership actions or S corporation actions, including unified entity-level proceedings under sections 6226 or 6228, that are nominally brought in the name of a partner or a shareholder.)

House bill

The House bill provides that the net worth limitations currently applicable to individuals also apply to estates and trusts. The House bill also provides that individuals who file a joint tax return shall be treated as one individual for purposes of computing the net worth limitations. Consequently, the net worths of both spouses are aggregated for purposes of this computation. An exception to this rule is provided in the case of a spouse otherwise qualifying for innocent spouse relief.

Effective date.—The provision applies to proceedings commenced after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

C. AUTHORITY FOR COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS WITH STATE TAX AUTHORITIES (SEC. 14821 OF THE HOUSE BILL)

Present law

The IRS is generally not authorized to provide services to non-Federal agencies even if the cost is reimbursed (62 Comp. Gen. 323, 335 (1983)).

House bill

The House bill provides that the Secretary is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with State tax authorities to enhance joint tax administration. These agreements may include (1) joint filing of Federal and State income tax returns, (2) single processing of these returns, and (3) joint collection of taxes (other than Federal income taxes).

The House bill provides that these agreements may require reimbursement for services provided by either party to the agreement. Any funds appropriated for tax administration may be used to carry out the responsibilities of the IRS under these agreements, and any reimbursement received under an agreement would be credited to the amount appropriated.

No agreement may be entered into that does not provide for the protection of confidentiality of taxpayer information that is required by section 6103.

Effective date.—The provision is effective on the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

XIX. PUBLIC DEBT PROVISIONS

1. PUBLIC DEBT REDUCTION TRUST FUND (SECS. 6341 AND 6343 OF H.R. 1215)

Present law

The Presidential Election Campaign Fund (“Campaign Fund”) provides for public financing of a portion of qualified Presidential election campaign expenditures and certain convention costs (sec. 9001 et seq.) The Campaign Fund is financed through the voluntary designation by individual taxpayers on their Federal income tax returns of $3 of tax liability, which is commonly known as the Presidential election campaign checkoff (sec. 6096). This checkoff can be made only by individuals (not corporations) and does not affect the individual’s tax liability. The Treasury Department accumulates revenues in the Campaign Fund over a four-year period and then disburses funds to eligible candidates for President, Vice President, and conventions during the Presidential election year.

Individuals who itemize deductions (as well as corporations) are allowed a deduction, subject to certain limitations, for contributions made to qualified charitable organizations or to Federal, State, and local governments. Instructions to IRS income tax forms inform taxpayers that they may make a gift to the Federal Government to reduce the public debt by enclosing with their return a separate check made payable to the “Bureau of Public Debt.” In addition, various public laws provide that contributions to specific Federal entities or programs are regarded as gifts to the United States. Such contributions to the Bureau of Public Debt and to specific Federal entities or programs are deductible if the donor itemizes deductions for the year in which the contribution is made.

House bill

Under the House bill, individual taxpayers will be allowed to designate an amount up to 10 percent of their Federal income tax liability for a taxable year to be earmarked to reduce the Federal public debt. Such a designation may be made only at the time the taxpayer files his or her income tax return for a particular taxable year. An individual’s decision whether or not to make a designation under the provision will not affect his or her tax liability. If an individual has no Federal income tax liability for a taxable year—i.e., the individual owes no Federal income tax after claiming allowable credits (other than the EITC) and any designation to the Presidential Election Campaign Fund—then such individual will not be allowed to make a designation to reduce the Federal debt on his or her return for that year.

Under the House bill, amounts earmarked by taxpayers to reduce the public debt will be transferred into a Public Debt Reduction Trust Fund, which will be used only to retire or purchase Federal securities (other than obligations held by the Social Security Trust Fund, the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, and the Department of Defense Military Retirement Fund). Related provisions (contained in another section of the House bill) require either specific spending cuts or an across-the-board sequestration in Federal spending (with certain exceptions) to match the amounts designated by taxpayers for debt reduction.

Effective date.—The provision is effective for taxable years ending after the date of enactment, and will remain in effect until the entire outstanding Federal public debt is retired.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

2. INCREASE IN THE PUBLIC DEBT LIMIT (SEC. 13801 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SEC. 7471 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

The statutory limit on the public debt currently is $4.9 trillion.

House bill

The House bill increases the statutory limit on the public debt to $5.5 trillion.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

XX. Adjustment to Contract With America Tax Relief Act (Sec. 19002 of the House Bill)

Present law

No provision.

House bill

In order to bring the budget reconciliation bill into compliance with the budget resolution, the House bill generally provides various adjustments to the provisions of the Contract With America Tax Relief Act of 1995. (Title VI of H.R. 1215, as passed by the House, with certain modifications, and incorporated in the House bill by reference.)

In general, the effects of the changes in income and estate tax liability occurring as a result of the provisions of the Contract With America Tax Relief Act would be changed by 27 percent, with the following exceptions.

In the case of capital gains, the benefit of the corporate rate reduction on, and the individual deduction for, capital gain income would be reduced by 15 percent for 1995 and by 31 percent for 1996 and thereafter. In the case of the indexing of the basis of capital assets, the adjustment to basis would be reduced by 31 percent for 1996 and thereafter.

In the case of American Dream Savings accounts, taxpayers would be entitled to 69 percent of the benefits of the American Dream Savings accounts to which they otherwise are entitled

In the case of the alternative minimum tax, after 1994, depreciation would no longer be treated as a preference item in the case of individuals and the alternative minimum tax rate applicable to corporations would be zero. The effects of this modification would be suspended for taxable years beginning in 1995 and 1996. Thus, for the first three taxable years beginning after 1996, taxpayers would be entitled to a refund equal to ⅓ of the amount of minimum tax paid by corporations and the amount of minimum tax liability attributable to depreciation in the case of individual taxpayers for taxable years beginning in 1995 and 1996.

The provisions relating to neutral cost recovery would be deleted.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement does not include the House bill provision.

Further, the House bill provides that the provision made by section 111(b)(2)(D)(iv) of the Customs and Trade Act of 1990 regarding the application of the MPF to processed agricultural products will also apply to all entries for which liquidation has not been finalized from foreign trade zones.

4. Section 12004 amends subsection (b) of section 484H of the Customs and Trade Act of 1990 to replace the phrase "entered or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption" in the "Effective Date" section with "entered for transportation in bond." 5. Section 12005 amends section 213(h)(1) of the CBERA and 204(c)(1) of the ATPA to clarify that, effective 15 days after the date of enactment, the duty reductions specified in these sections do not apply to such articles made of textiles and subject to textile agreements.

6. Section 12006 amends section 13031(b)(9)(A) of the COBRA to clarify that Customs may provide daytime reimbursable services to centralized hub facilities during daytime hours. These services are reimbursable regardless of whether or not they are performed on site.

7. Section 12007 amends section 313(r) of the Tariff Act of 1930 to permit a one-year extension for filing drawback claims in cases where the President has declared a major disaster on or after January 1, 1994, and the claimant files a request for such extension with the Customs Service within one year from the date the claim is filed.

14. Section 12014 amends section 13031(b) of the COBRA to clarify the application of section 521 of the North American Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act to provide for the collection of fees only one time in the course of a single voyage for a passenger aboard a commercial vessel.

15. Section 12015 amends subheading 2933.90.02 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States to strike Quizalofop-ethyl.

16. Section 12016 amends section 304 of the Tariff Act of 1930 to exempt certain metal forgings for hand tools, coffee products, teas and spices from country of origin marking requirements.

17. Section 12017 instructs the Customs Service to treat the re-entry of a single entry of four warp-knitting machines from Venezuela as a duty-free entry, and to refund any duties, with interest, which the company has paid as a result of the improper classification.

18. Section 12018 extends Super 301 (section 310 of the Trade Act of 1974), in its revised form, through the year 2000.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

B. GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES

1. BASIC AUTHORITY (SEC. 501)

Present law

Title V of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended, (Generalized System of Preferences) grants authority to the President to provide duty-free treatment on imports of eligible articles from designated beneficiary developing countries (BDCs), subject to certain conditions and limitations. Section 505(a) of the Trade Act of 1974 provides that no duty-free treatment under Title V shall remain in effect after July 31, 1995.

House bill

The House bill amends section 505(a) of the Trade Act of 1974 to authorize an extension through December 31, 1997. It also provides that, notwithstanding section 514 of the Tariff Act of 1930 or any other provision of law, the entry a) of any article to which duty-free treatment under title V of the Trade Act of 1974 would have applied if the entry had been made on July 31, 1995, and b) that was made after July 31, 1995, and before the enactment of this Act, shall be liquidated or reliquidated as free of duty and the Secretary of Treasury shall refund any duty paid, upon proper request filed with the appropriate customs officer, within 180 days after the date of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with an amendment to authorize an extension of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) through December 31, 1996.

2. DESIGNATION OF BENEFICIARY DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

Present law

Section 502 sets forth both the procedures for designating countries as Beneficiary Developing Countries (BDCs) and the conditions of such designation. This section establishes conditions for designation which are mandatory and others which are discretionary. With regard to mandatory conditions, the President is prohibited from designating any country for GSP benefits which is a developed country listed in 502(b).

House bill

The House bill amends the definition of country to include "any territory" and deletes the reference in 502(b) to Austria, Finland, and Sweden which are now European Union Member states.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes.

3. MANDATORY CONDITIONS

Present law

Under section 502(c) the President is prohibited from designating as a BDC a country which:

(1) is a Communist country, unless (a) its products receive non-discriminatory most-favored-nation (MFN) treatment, (b) it is a GATT Contracting Party and a member of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), and (c) it is not dominated or controlled by international communism;

(2) is an OPEC member, or a party to another arrangement, and participates in an action the effect of which is to withhold supplies of vital commodity resources from international trade or raise their price to an unreasonable level and to cause disruption of the world economy, subject to trade agreement exemptions consistent with objectives under the Trade Act of 1974;

(3) affords "reverse preferences" having or likely to have a significant adverse effect on U.S. commerce, unless the President receives satisfactory assurances of elimination before January 1, 1976;

(4) has nationalized or expropriated U.S. property, or taken similar actions, unless compensation is made, being negotiated, or in arbitration;

(5) fails to recognize as binding or enforce arbitral awards in favor of U.S. citizens;

(6) aids or abets, by granting sanctuary from prosecution to, any individual or group which has committed an act of international terrorism;

(7) has not taken or is not taking steps to afford internationally recognized worker rights to its workers.

House bill

The House bill retains present law, except, with respect to mandatory conditions: in (1)(b), replace "is a GATT contracting party" with "is a Member of the World Trade Organization."; in (2), delete the reference to OPEC member and the exemption authority; in (3), delete the satisfactory assurances exemption for reverse preferences.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes.

4. DISCRETIONARY CRITERIA

Present law

Under section 502(c) the President must take into account a list of factors in determining whether to designate a country a BDC, including the extent to which the country is providing adequate and effective intellectual property protection.

House bill

The House bill substitutes "whether or not" for "the extent to which" in the intellectual property rights criterion, and clarifies that such protection may not be provided notwithstanding compliance with the Uruguay Round TRIPs Agreement. The bill also adds new discretionary criteria for country designation. In determining whether to designate any country as a beneficiary developing country under this title, the President must take into account the extent to which such country fails to cooperate with the United States in preventing the proliferation of nuclear weapons, nuclear weapons components, and nuclear weapons delivery systems and in preventing illegal drug trafficking.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

5. GRADUATION OF BDCS

Present law

Countries are graduated from GSP eligibility if the per capita GNP of any BDC for any year exceeds a dollar limit ($11,800 in 1994), indexed annually under a formula from $8,500 in 1984. When the income level reaches this amount, such country is subject to a 25, rather than 50, percent competitive need import share limit on all eligible articles for up to the following two years. After that time, the country is no longer treated as a BDC.

House bill

Under the House bill, if the President determines that a beneficiary developing country has become a "high income" country as designated by the World Bank (about $8,600 per capita GNP in 1993), the President would be required to remove the country from eligibility under the program. The bill would eliminate the 25 percent competitive need limit during the two-year phase-out period.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes.

6. DESIGNATION OF ELIGIBLE ARTICLES

Present law

Under Section 503 the President may not designate any article as GSP eligible within the following categories of import-sensitive articles:

1. textile and apparel articles which are subject to textile agreements;
2. watches, except watches entered after June 30, 1989 that the President determines will not cause material injury to watch or watch band, strap, or bracelet manufacturing and assembly operations in the United States or U.S. insular possessions;
3. import-sensitive electronic articles;
4. import-sensitive steel articles;
5. footwear, handbags, luggage, flat goods, work gloves, and leather wearing apparel which were not GSP eligible articles on April 1, 1984;
6. import-sensitive semi-manufactured and manufactured glass products; and
7. any other articles the President determines to be import-sensitive in the context of GSP.

House bill

The House bill retains all provisions of present law, except, with respect to changes in the following statutory exemptions: in (1), it replaces the present provision with exemption of textile and apparel articles which were not GSP eligible on January 1, 1994; in (2), it deletes statutory exemption for watches; in (5), it applies exemption to footwear and related articles which were not GSP eligible on January 1, 1995.

The House bill also prohibits consideration of an article for designation of eligibility for three years following formal consideration and denial of that article. Further, the House bill provides specific authority for the President to designate any article that is the growth, product, or manufacture of a least-developed developing country (LDDC) as an eligible article with respect to imports from LDDCs, if the President determines such an article is not import-sensitive in the context of imports from LDDCs. This authority does not apply to statutorily exempt articles. LDDC designations are to be based upon the overall statutory considerations and discretionary designation criteria.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with an amendment to preserve the statutory exemption for watches in current law.

7. LIMITS ON PREFERENTIAL AUTHORITY

Present law

Under Section 504 of the Trade Act of 1974, the President may withdraw, suspend, or limit GSP duty-free treatment with respect to any article or any country, after considering the overall GSP and discretionary BDC designation factors. The President shall withdraw or suspend the BDC designation of any country if he determines that, as a result of changed circumstances, the country would be barred from designation.

House bill

The House bill adds a requirement that, except in exceptional circumstances, the President may not take action to withdraw, suspend, or terminate or limit GSP treatment with respect to any country without first providing a period for the submission of public comments.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

8. COMPETITIVE NEED LIMITS

Present law

Whenever the President determines that exports by any BDC to the United States of a GSP eligible article during any year—

1. exceed a dollar limit ($114 million in 1994) based on $25 million adjusted annually relative to changes in the U.S. GNP since 1974, or
2. equal or exceed a 50 percent share of the total value of U.S. imports of the article, then, no later than July 1 of the next year, such country is NOT treated as a BDC with respect to such article.

Not later than January 4, 1987, and periodically thereafter, the President must conduct a general review of eligible articles and, if he determines that a BDC has demonstrated a sufficient degree of competitiveness relative to other BDCs on any eligible article, then a lower competitive need dollar limit ($41.9 million in 1993, indexed annually from 1984 base) and 25 percent total import share limit apply.

House bill

The House bill reduces the basic competitive need limit to $75 million for any year beginning January 1, 1996, and substitutes a standard annual increase of $5 million for the indexing formula in current law. The House bill preserves the 50 percent market share competitive need limit. The House bill deletes the general review requirements and lower limits.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes.

9. AUTHORITY TO WAIVE COMPETITIVE NEED LIMITS

Present law

The President may waive the dollar and import share competitive need limits on any eligible article of any BDC if he (1) receives International Trade Commission (ITC) advice on the likely effect of the waiver; (2) determines, based on the overall GSP and discretionary country designation considerations and the ITC advice, that the waiver is in the U.S. national economic interest; and (3) publishes the determination in the Federal Register.

The import share competitive need limit may be disregarded if total U.S. imports of the eligible article during the preceding year do not exceed a de minimis amount of $5 million adjusted annually ($13.4 million in 1994) according to changes in U.S. GNP since 1979. The import share limit does not apply to any eligible article that was not produced in the United States as of January 3, 1985.

House bill

The House bill retains the present waiver authority and updates January 3, 1985 for no U.S. production to January 1, 1995. The House bill also retains the de minimis import provision, but substitutes $13 million in 1995 and a standard annual increase of $500,000 beginning January 1, 1996 for the indexing formula in current law. Further, the House bill provides for the refund of duties paid on buffalo leather from Thailand during the month of July 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with an amendment to strike the refund of duties paid on buffalo leather from Thailand.

10. OTHER PROVISIONS OF CURRENT LAW

Present law

Under section 504(c)(3)(D) of the Trade Act of 1974, the President may not exercise the competitive need waiver authority in any year on imports of eligible articles exceeding:

1. 30 percent of total GSP duty-free imports during the preceding year, or
2. 15 percent of total GSP duty-free imports during the preceding year from BDCs which had (a) a per capita GNP of $5,000 or more, or (b) exported to the United States more than 10 percent of total GSP duty-free imports during that year.

The President may waive competitive need limits in certain cases where there has been a historical preferential trade relationship between the United States and that country.

Appropriate U.S. agencies must assist BDCs to develop policies to assure that their agriculture sectors are not directed to export markets to the detriment of foodstuff production for their citizens.

House bill

The House bill deletes provisions in current law regarding waiver trade limits, historical preferences, and agriculture production.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

C. TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

MODIFICATION OF TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE

Present Law

Title II of the Trade Act of 1974 authorizes Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) programs for workers and firms adversely affected by increased imports. Eligibility of workers and firms is certified by the Employment and Training Administration (ETA) of the Department of Labor, and the Economic Development Administration (EDA) of the Department of Commerce, respectively.

Subchapter D of chapter 2 of Title II of the Trade Act of 1974 establishes TAA programs for workers adversely affected by increased imports or production relocation associated with the implementation of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

Workers certified by the Secretary of Labor for approved training qualify for Trade Adjustment Allowance (TRA) payments, following their exhaustion of unemployment insurance (UI) benefits, equal to their weekly UI amount for up to 52 weeks of UI and TRA combined. Workers may receive an additional 26 weeks of TRA benefits to complete approved training. Workers must enter training unless a waiver is granted by the Secretary of Labor where it is not feasible or appropriate to approve a training program.

Certified workers under NAFTA-related TAA receive training allowances in the same manner and to the same extent as workers under general TAA. However, certified workers must enroll in a training program within six weeks of certification, and the Secretary of Labor may not waive training requirements. Under both general TAA and NAFTA-related TAA, certified workers may receive job search and relocation allowances.

The "cap" on payments for training under general worker TAA for any fiscal year is $80 million, except for fiscal year 1997, during which the "cap" is $70 million. Under the NAFTA-related programs, the "cap" on payments for training for any fiscal year is $30 million.

Under TAA for firms, the Commerce Department provides eligible firms with technical assistance to prepare and implement economic adjustment plans, or for industry-wide assistance through twelve regional Trade Adjustment Assistance Centers (TAACs).

Appropriations for TAA for workers and TAA for firms are authorized through fiscal year 1998. These programs and NAFTA-related TAA programs terminate after fiscal year 1998.

House bill

Section 12201 of the House bill amends general TAA so that waivers of the training requirement may be granted only where a training program is not available. The effective date for this provision is October 1, 1996. The House bill also eliminates relocation allowances for both general TAA and NAFTA-related TAA eligible workers. The effective date for this provision is October 1, 1996. Lastly, the House bill would extend authorization of appropriations for general TAA for workers and TAA for firms through fiscal year 2000, after which the programs terminate. NAFTA-related TAA is authorized through fiscal year 1998 as under present law. No benefits may be granted under either the general worker TAA programs or TAA for firms after September 30, 2000.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

TITLE XII—TEACHING HOSPITALS AND GRADUATE MEDICAL EDUCATION; ASSET SALES; WELFARE; AND OTHER PROVISIONS

SUBTITLE A—BLOCK GRANTS TO STATES FOR TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE FOR NEEDY FAMILIES

1. OBJECTIVES

Present law

To provide for the general welfare by . . . enabling the several States to make more adequate provision for . . . dependent children . . . (Social Security Act, 1935).

House bill

To restore the American family, reduce illegitimacy, control welfare spending and reduce welfare dependence.

Senate amendment

To enhance support and work opportunities for families with children, reduce welfare dependence, and control welfare spending.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment as follows: To restore the American family, enhance support and work opportunities for families with children, reduce out-of-wedlock pregnancies, reduce welfare dependence, and control welfare spending.

2. SHORT TITLE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

The Personal Responsibility Act of 1995.

Senate amendment

The Work Opportunity Act of 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment as follows: The Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1995.

3. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS ON FAMILIES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

It is the sense of the Congress that marriage is the foundation of a successful society, and an essential social institution which promotes the interests of children and society at large. The negative consequences of an out-of-wedlock birth on the child, the mother, and society are well documented. Yet the nation suffers unprecedented and growing levels of illegitimacy. In light of this crisis, the reduction of out-of-wedlock births is an important government interest and the policy contained in provisions of this title address the crisis.

Senate amendment

Congress finds that marriage is the foundation of a successful society and an essential institution that promotes the interests of children. Promotion of responsible fatherhood and motherhood is integral to successful child-rearing and well-being of children. It is the sense of Congress that prevention of out-of-wedlock pregnancy and reduction in out-of-wedlock birth are very important government interests and that the policy contained in provisions of this title is intended to address the crisis.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

4. GRANTS TO STATES FOR NEEDY FAMILIES

A. PURPOSE

Present law

Title IV–A, which provides grants to States for aid and services to needy families with children (AFDC), is designed to encourage care of dependent children in their own homes by enabling States to provide cash aid and services, maintain and strengthen family life, and help parents attain maximum self-support consistent with maintaining parental care and protection.

House bill

Block grants for temporary assistance for needy families (Title IV–A) are established to increase the flexibility of States in operating a program designed to:

(1) provide assistance to needy families so that children may be cared for in their homes or in the homes of relatives;

(2) end the dependence of needy parents on government benefits by promoting work and marriage; and

(3) discourage out-of-wedlock births.

Senate amendment

Block grants for temporary assistance for needy families (Title IV–A) are established to increase the flexibility of States in operating a program designed to:

(1) provide assistance to needy families with minor children;

(2) provide job preparation and opportunities for such families; and

(3) prevent and reduce the incidence of out-of-wedlock pregnancies, with a special emphasis on teen pregnancies, and establish annual goals for preventing and reducing these pregnancies for fiscal years 1996 through 2000.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. ELIGIBLE STATES; STATE PLAN

Present law

A State must have an approved State plan for aid and services to needy families containing 43 provisions, ranging from single-agency administration to overpayment recovery rules. State plans explain the aid and services that are offered by the State. Aid is defined as money payments. For most parents without a child under age 3, States must provide education, work, or training under the JOBS program to help needy families with children avoid long-term welfare dependence. To receive Federal funds, States must share in program costs. The Federal share of costs (matching rate) varies among States and is inversely related to the square of State per capita income. For AFDC benefits and child care, the Medicaid matching rate is used. This rate now ranges from 50 percent to 79 percent among States and averages about 55%. For JOBS activities, the rate averages 60%; for administrative costs, 50%. In fiscal year 1995, 20 percent of employable (nonexempt) adult recipients must participate in education, work, or training under JOBS, and at least one parent in 50 percent of unemployed-parent families must participate at least 16 hours weekly in an unpaid work experience or other work program. States must restrict disclosure of information to purposes directly connected to administration of the program and to any connected investigation, prosecution, legal proceeding or audit. Each State must offer family planning services to all "appropriate" cases, including minors considered sexually active. States may not require acceptance of these services. States must have in effect an approved child support program. States must also have an approved plan for foster care and adoption assistance. States must have an income and verification system (covering AFDC, Medicaid, unemployment compensation, food stamps, and—in outlying areas—adult cash aid) in accordance with Sec. 1137 of the Social Security Act.

House bill

An "eligible State" is a State that, during the 3-year period immediately preceding the fiscal year, had submitted a plan to the Secretary of HHS for approval. The plan must include:

(1) A written document describing how the State will:

a. conduct a program that provides cash benefits to needy families with children, and provides parents with help in preparing for and obtaining employment and becoming self-sufficient;

b. require at least one parent in a family that has received benefits for 24 months to engage in work activities defined by the State;

c. ensure that parents engage in work activities in accord with section 404;

d. treat interstate immigrants, if their benefits differ from State residents;

e. take such reasonable steps as State deems necessary to restrict use and disclosure of information about recipients;

f. take actions to reduce out-of-wedlock pregnancies, including helping unmarried mothers and fathers avoid subsequent pregnancies and provide care for their children; and

g. reduce teen pregnancy, including through the provision of education and counseling to male and female teens.

(2) Certification by the Governor that the State will operate a child support enforcement program.

(3) Certification by the Governor that the State will operate a child protection program, including a foster care and adoption program.

(4) The Secretary shall determine whether the State plan contains the material required.

Senate amendment

An "eligible State" is a State that annually submits to the Secretary: an outline of its program; a 3-year strategic plan; various certifications on programs offered by the State; and an estimate of State and local expenditures. The detailed requirements of State plan submissions to the Secretary are:

(1) A written document outlining how the State intends to:

a. provide aid to needy families with at least one minor child (or any expectant family); and provide a parent or (other) caretaker in these families with work activities and support services to enable them to leave the program and become self-sufficient;

b. conduct a program designed to serve all political subdivisions;

c. provide a parent or caretaker in such families with work experience, assistance in finding employment, and other work preparation activities and support services that the State considers appropriate to enable such families to leave the program and become self-sufficient;

d. require a parent or caretaker to engage in work, as defined by the State, after 24 months of benefits, or, if earlier, when the State finds the person ready for work (see i. below for community service rule after 3 months of benefits);

e. satisfy the minimum participation rate specified in section 404;

f. treat families with minor children moving into the State; and noncitizens of the U.S.;

g. safeguard and restrict use and disclosure of information about recipients;

h. establish goals and take action to prevent and reduce out-of-wedlock pregnancies, with emphasis on teenage pregnancies; and

i. unless the State opts out by notice to the Secretary, require participation in community service (with hours and tasks set by the State), after 3 months of benefits, by a parent or caretaker not exempt from work requirements (effective 2 years after enactment).

(2) A strategic plan that shall include:

a. a description of the goals of the 3-year strategic plan, including outcome-related goals of, and benchmarks for, program activities;

b. a description of how the above goals and benchmarks will be achieved, or progress made toward them, in the current year;

c. a description of performance indicators to be used in measuring/assessing output service levels and outcomes of activities;

d. information on external factors that could significantly affect attainment of goals and benchmarks;

e. information on a mechanism for conducting program evaluation, for use in comparing results with goals and benchmarks;

f. information on how minimum participation rates specified in section 404 will be satisfied; and

g. an estimate of the total amount of State and local expenditures under the program for the current fiscal year.

(3) Certification that the State will operate a child support enforcement program.

(4) Certification that the State will operate child protection programs, including foster care and adoption programs, under parts B and E.

(5) Certification by the Chief Executive Officer that State will participate during the fiscal year in the income and eligibility verification system (IEVS) required by Section 1137 of Social Security Act.

(6) Certification by the Chief Executive Officer specifying which State agency or agencies will administer and supervise the program and ensuring that local governments and private sector organizations have been consulted about the plan and design of welfare services in the State.

(7) Certification by the Chief Executive Officer that the State shall provide the Secretary with required reports.

(8) Estimate of the total amount of State and local expenditures under the State program for the fiscal year.

(9) The Chief Executive Officer must certify that the State will provide Indians in each tribe that does not have a tribal family assistance plan with equitable access to assistance under the State block grant program.

(10) The State shall make available to the public a summary of the State plan and shall provide a copy to the "approved entity" conducting the audit of State expenditures from the block grant.

Conference agreement

An "eligible State" is a State that once every two years submits to the Secretary an outline of its program and various certifications on programs offered by the State. The detailed requirements of State plan submissions to the Secretary are:

(1) A written document describing how the State will:

a. conduct a program that provides assistance to needy families with children (or families that include a pregnant mother) and provides parents with job preparation, work and support services to enable them to leave the program and become self-sufficient;

b. conduct a program designed to serve all political subdivisions;

c. require a parent or caretaker to engage in work, as defined by the State, after 24 months of benefits, or, if earlier, when the State finds the person ready for work;

d. ensure that families engage in work activities in accord with section 404;

e. treat families moving into the State from another State, if such families are to be treated differently than other families;

f. take such reasonable steps as State deems necessary to safeguard and restrict the use and disclosure of information about recipients;

g. establish goals and take action to prevent and reduce out-of-wedlock pregnancies, with emphasis on teenage pregnancies; and

h. treat noncitizens, if the State and local benefits for which they may be eligible will be different than those available to citizens.

(2) Certification by the chief executive officer that the State operate a child support enforcement program;

(3) Certification by the chief executive officer that the State will operate a child protection program and a foster care and adoption program under part B;

(4) Certification by the chief executive officer specifying which State agency or agencies will administer and supervise the program and ensuring that local governments and private sector organizations have had 60 days to submit comments about the plan and the design of welfare services in the State;

(5) Certification by the chief executive officer that the State will provide Indians in each tribe that does not have a tribal family assistance plan with equitable access to assistance under the program; and

(6) The State shall make available to the public a summary of the State plan.

For purposes of this section, the term "Eligibile State" means, with respect to fiscal year 1996, a State that has submitted to the Secretary the plan described above within 3 months after the date of enactment.

C. PAYMENTS TO STATES

ENTITLEMENTS

Present law

AFDC entitles States to Federal matching funds. Current law provides permanent authority for appropriations without limit for grants to States for AFDC benefits, administration, and AFDC-related child care. Over the years, because of court rulings, AFDC has evolved into an entitlement for individuals to receive cash benefits. In general, States must give AFDC to all persons whose income and resources are below State-set limits if they are in a class or category eligible under Federal rules.

There is no grant increase to reward States that reduce out-of-wedlock births (illegitimacy ratio).

There is no adjustment for population growth. Instead, current law provides unlimited matching funds. When AFDC enrollment climbs, Federal funding automatically rises.

There is no adjustment for emergency assistance (EA) plan amendments. Current law provides unlimited matching funds for EA expenditures.

There is no job placement performance bonus, performance bonus, or high performance bonus.

The law imposes an aggregate ceiling on matching funds for AFDC, adult cash welfare (aged, blind, disabled), and foster care and adoption assistance in Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa (AFDC, foster care, and adoption assistance only). (Sec. 1108 (a) and (d) of the Social Security Act.) The Federal matching rate is 75%, except for adoption assistance and foster care maintenance payments, whose matching rate is 50%. (Note: American Samoa has not implemented AFDC). Separate funding ceilings apply to matching funds for AFDC family planning services (75% Federal) and for Medicaid (50% Federal) in each territory (sec. 1108(b) and (c) of the Social Security Act). The outlying areas listed above are entitled to JOBS matching funds (75% Federal), allocated on the same basis as States (by share of AFDC adult recipients). (Sec. 403(l)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act.)

Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations receive no special treatment regarding AFDC, and tribes and native organizations do not administer AFDC funds. Indian and Alaska families with children receive AFDC benefits on the same terms as other families in their States or from State or local AFDC agencies. More than 80 tribes and native organizations in 24 States are JOBS grantees, having applied to conduct JOBS within 6 months of enactment of the law establishing it. Their allocation of JOBS funds is based on the percentage of AFDC adult recipients within the State who are in the tribal service area. Their JOBS allocation is subtracted from that of their State. JOBS funds granted to Indians and Alaska natives are 100% Federal, requiring no matching. Further, their JOBS programs need not meet participation rules of the regular JOBS program. In fiscal year 1995 the estimated allocation of JOBS funds for these groups totaled $8.9 million.

House bill

Each eligible State is entitled to receive a grant from the Secretary for each of 5 fiscal years (1996–2000) in the amount equal to the State family assistance grant for the fiscal year. There is no individual entitlement (implicit in bill). For each fiscal year beginning with 1998, a State's grant amount is increased by 5 percent if the State illegitimacy ratio is 1 percentage point lower in that year than its 1995 illegitimacy ratio; the State grant is increased 10 percent if the illegitimacy ratio is 2 or more percentage points lower than its 1995 illegitimacy ratio. In 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000, a State's grant amount is increased by the State's percentage share of national population growth among growing States multiplied by $100 million. States that have negative population growth are omitted from the calculation. The House bill entitles territories to a cash block grant for temporary assistance to needy families (on same basis as States). It repeals AFDC and foster care/adoption assistance (and, accordingly, territorial ceilings for them and for AFDC family planning). (Sec. 104(e)(1) of H.R. 4.) It establishes new separate territorial ceilings for adult cash welfare. The bill retains territorial ceilings for Medicaid, but repeals ceilings for AFDC family planning (along with AFDC itself). As noted, the bill repeals JOBS. The basic cash block grant for outlying areas includes base-year level JOBS funds. Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations receive no special treatment regarding the cash block grant that will replace AFDC. Tribes and native organizations would not administer the new grants. The bill repeals JOBS (sec. 104(c)), and the basic cash block grant includes base-year level JOBS funds of each State (those funds include ones earmarked previously for administration by Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations). Tribes and native organizations would not administer the new grants.

Senate amendment

The Secretary is required to pay each eligible State for each of 5 fiscal years (1996–2000) a grant equal to the State family assistance grant for the fiscal year. The amendment states that no person is entitled to any assistance under Title IV–A. For fiscal years 1998, 1999 and 2000, a State's grant amount is increased if the State illegitimacy ratio is at least 1 percentage point lower than its 1995 illegitimacy ratio and the State rate of "induced pregnancy terminations" is no higher than in 1995. The bonus equals $25 times the number of children in the State in families with income below the poverty line, according to the most recently available Census data. The bonus is $50 per poor child if the illegitimacy ratio is at least 2 percentage points lower and the abortion rate no higher than in 1995. The bonus shall not be paid if the Secretary finds that the illegitimacy ratio declined, or the abortion rate held steady, because of a change in State reporting methods. The amendment authorizes to be appropriated, and appropriates, sums necessary for these grants. For each of fiscal years 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000, qualifying States shall receive a supplemental grant amount equal to 2.5 percent of the block grant received in the preceding fiscal year. For this purpose, a qualifying State is one with an average level of State welfare spending per poor person in the preceding fiscal year below the national average and with an estimated rate of State population growth above the average growth rate for all States for the most recent fiscal year for which information is available. Additionally, States whose population rose more than 10% from April 1, 1990, to July 1, 1994, are deemed eligible, as are States with a fiscal year 1996 level of State welfare spending per poor person that is less than 35 percent of the national average level. State welfare spending per poor person is defined as the State cash block grant divided by the number of persons in the State who had an income below the poverty line, according to the 1990 decennial census. For these grants, a total of $878 million is authorized to be appropriated, and is appropriated to be spent in 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000. The Senate amendment makes available up to a total of $800 million for grants for years fiscal year 1996 through fiscal year 2000 equal to increased EA expenditures in fiscal year 1995 attributable to State EA plan amendments made during fiscal year 1994. If this amount is insufficient, State EA adjustment grants are to be reduced proportionately. For each of 2 years (fiscal years 1998 and 1999) the Secretary shall pay a job placement performance bonus to eligible States. This bonus fund shall equal 3% of the national cash block grant for fiscal year 1998 and 4% for fiscal year 1999. The DHHS Secretary shall develop a formula for allocating funds to States on the basis of the number of families who, during the previous year, lost eligibility for continued aid from the cash block grant program because of obtaining unsubsidized employment. The formula must provide a larger bonus for families who remain employed for longer periods or who are at greater risk of long-term welfare enrollment and take into account each State or geographic area's unemployment condition. For fiscal year 2000, the Secretary shall pay a performance bonus to each qualified State. To qualify for a performance bonus, a State must exceed overall average performance of all States in a measurement category (in the time period starting 6 months after enactment and ending on September 30, 1999) or improve its own performance in a category by at least 15% over that of fiscal year 1994. The 5 measurement categories are: reduction in average length of time families receive cash aid, increase in the percentage of recipient families that receive child support payments, increase in the number of families who lose eligibility for continued cash aid as a result of unsubsidized work, increase in earnings of recipient families, and reduction in percentage of families that become re-eligible for cash aid within 18 months after leaving the program. The bonus fund shall equal 5% of the national cash block grant and is to be deducted from that grant (by reducing each State's fiscal year 2000 grant by 5%). For fiscal year 2000, in addition, "high performance" States shall be entitled to a share of a high performance bonus fund. Appropriated for the high performance bonus fund is an amount equal to penalties imposed on States (and "collected" by reductions in State grants) for fiscal years 1996–1999. High performance bonuses will be awarded for each of the 5 measurement categories to the 5 States with the highest percentage of improvement over their fiscal year 94 baseline in the category and to the 5 States with the highest overall average performance in the category. Retains but increases aggregate ceilings in each of the territories for cash aid to needy families, cash aid to needy aged, blind or disabled adults, and foster care/adoption assistance. Ends requirement that territories share cost of cash aid for needy families. Ceilings for Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands would rise by $19.521 million (representing a 12.5 percent increase in the old ceilings, plus $8.446 million for their fiscal year 1994 JOBS funds). Retains territorial ceilings for Medicaid, but repeals ceilings for AFDC family planning (along with AFDC itself). The Senate amendment repeals JOBS, but increases ceilings for the outlying areas to include their base-year level JOBS funds. The Senate amendment allows block grant funds to be directly administered by Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations. The amount is the total of Federal AFDC payments to the State for fiscal year 1994 attributable to Indian families. The Senate amendment requires the DHHS Secretary to continue to pay Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations that have been JOBS grantees an annual grant equal to the amount they received in fiscal year 95 for JOBS for each of fiscal years 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999 and 2000. For this purpose it appropriates $7,638,474 for each year. These funds are separate from, and in addition to, the national cash block grant.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment on grants for family assistance, so that each eligible State is entitled to receive a grant equal to the State family assistance grant from the Secretary for each of 5 fiscal years (1996–2000). With respect to the Senate amendment's explicit statement that no person is entitled to any assistance under Title IV–A of the Social Security Act, this provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

The conference agreement follows the House bill with respect to the amount of grant increases to reward states that reduce out-of-wedlock births (namely grant increases of 5% and 10%, based on reductions in illegitimacy). The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with respect to the determination of how States may qualify for grant increases for this purpose, including the prohibition on a State's receiving a grant increase for this purpose if the State rate of induced pregnancy terminations is higher than in 1995.

For purposes of this part, the Secretary is to disregard changes in rates of illegitimacy due to a change in State methods of reporting such data.

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment with regard to the Adjustment for Population Growth, with the modification that $800 million is authorized and appropriated for this purpose.

The conference agreement follows the House bill regarding the adjustment for Emergency Assistance Plan Amendments.

The conference agreement follows the House bill regarding the Job Placement Performance Bonus.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the Performance Bonus, except that States that are most successful or most improved in moving families off welfare into work may reduce their 75 percent State maintenance of effort requirement by up to 8 percentage points.

The conference agreement follows the House bill regarding the High Performance Bonus.

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment regarding the treatment of outlying areas, with certain modifications to the aggregate ceilings on cash benefits for the specified territories.

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment regarding the treatment of Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations, except that these groups will receive benefits through their State's block grant in fiscal year 1996 and will be eligible to receive separate payments in fiscal year 1997 and thereafter. With regard to the specific provision outlining the purpose of the section providing for direct funding and administration by Indian tribes, this provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

DEFINITIONS

Present law

AFDC law defines "State" to include the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa. However, special funding ceilings apply to them.

House bill

The "State family assistance grant" is determined by the greater of (1) the average of Federal obligations to the State for selected programs (AFDC benefits and administration, Emergency Assistance, and JOBS) authorized by Title IV–A for fiscal years 1992–1994; or (2) the amount of Federal obligations for fiscal year 1994, multiplied by the total amount of State outlays for these programs for fiscal year 1994, divided by the amount of Federal obligations for fiscal year 1994. The selected programs are all those authorized under Title IV–A of current law except the day care programs (the at-risk program, AFDC/JOBS day care, and transitional day care). If the sum of all the State shares, as calculated here, exceeds (or falls short of) the national block grant amount below ((2)(b)), each State's share will be reduced (or increased) proportionately.

In each fiscal year between 1996 and 2000, the "National Block Grant Amount" available to all eligible States will be equal to $15,390,296,000.

The State's "Illegitimacy Ratio" for a fiscal year is the sum of the number of out-of-wedlock births that occurred in the State during the most recent fiscal year for which the data are available and the amount, if any, by which the number of abortions performed in the State during the most recent year for which information is available exceeds the number of abortions performed in the State during the fiscal year that immediately precedes such most recent fiscal year, divided by the number of births that occurred in the State for the most recent fiscal year.

The term "State" includes the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Senate amendment

The State share of the block grant for each year equals the total Federal payments to the State under Title IV–A in Fiscal Year 1994 (for AFDC benefits and administration, Emergency Assistance, JOBS, and three child care programs— AFDC/JOBS child care, "transitional" child care, and "at-risk child care"); reduced by any amount set aside for tribal family assistance programs in the State and (fiscal year 2000 only) by 5% (for the performance bonus fund) and increased by the amount, if any, of increased fiscal year 95 Emergency Assistance spending attributable to fiscal year 94 amendments.

The block grant amount is $16,803,769,000.

(Note: A major reason for the difference between the House and Senate block grant amount is that the House removed mandatory child care funds currently authorized under Title IV–A and placed most of the money in a separate discretionary child care block grant, while the Senate kept IV–A child care funds in the cash block grant but earmarked them for child care.)

The term "illegitimacy ratio" means the number of out-of-wedlock births that occurred in the State during the most recent fiscal year for which the data are available, divided by the number of births that occurred in the State during the most recent fiscal year for which the data are available.

The term "State" is identical to the House bill. However, for supplemental grants for population increases, the term "State" applies only to the 50 States.

In general, the terms "Indian," "Indian tribe," and "tribal organization" have the meaning given by section 4 of the Indian Self–Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b). The Senate amendment provides that only 12 specified regional nonprofit corporations of Alaska natives can administer tribal family assistance grants.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with regard to the State family assistance grant, except that the State share of the block grant is determined by the greater of (1) the average of Federal payments for fiscal years 1992–94; (2) Federal payments in fiscal year 1994; or (3) Federal payments in fiscal year 1995. House conferees recede with regard to the proportionate reduction in State shares included in the House bill. For all programs except JOBS, Federal payments represent the Federal share of a State's total expenditures on these programs, as reported by the States. For JOBS, the payment represents the grant amount.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the definition of a State's Illegitimacy Ratio

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment regarding the definition of "State", but the House recedes to the Senate so that, for purposes of the supplemental grants for population increases only, the term "State" applies only to the 50 States and the District of Columbia.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the definition of "Indian."

USE OF GRANT

Present law

AFDC and JOBS funds are to be used in conformity with State plans. A State may replace a caretaker relative with a protective payee or a guardian or legal representative.

Current law sets aside some JOBS funds (deducting them from State allocations) for Indian tribes and Native Alaska organizations. See (4)(C)(1)(f).

Regulations permit States to receive Federal reimbursement funds (50% administrative cost-sharing rate) for operation of electronic benefit systems. To do so, States must receive advance approval from DHHS and must comply with automatic data processing rules.

House bill

States may use funds in any manner reasonably calculated to accomplish the purpose of this part (except for prohibitions listed below under (4)(F)). No part of the grant may be used to provide medical services. Explicitly allowed are noncash aid to mothers under the age of 18 and assistance to low-income households for heating and cooling costs.

The House bill has no set-aside provision.

In the case of families that have lived in a State for less than 12 months, States are authorized to provide them with the benefit level of the State from which they moved.

States may transfer up to 30 percent of the funds paid to the State under this section to any or all of the following: (1) child protection block grant; (2) social services block grant under title XX of the Social Security Act; (3) any food and nutrition block grant passed during the 104th Congress; and (4) the child care and development block grant program. Rules of the recipient program will apply to the transferred funds.

States are allowed to reserve some block grant funds received for any fiscal year for the purpose of providing emergency assistance under the block grant program.

States are encouraged to implement an electronic benefit transfer system for providing assistance under the State program funded under this part, and may use the grant for such purpose. In general, exempts State and local government electronic transfers of need-based benefits from certain rules issued by the Federal Reserve Board regarding electronic fund transfers, (i.e., Regulation E, which limits liability of cardholders).

Senate amendment

States may use funds in any manner reasonably calculated to accomplish the purpose of this part, provided that administrative costs not exceed 15% of the State's grant (except for prohibitions listed below, under section F).

The following rules apply to set-asides under the Senate amendment: (1) maintains current law set-asides for JOBS funding for Indian tribes and Alaska native organizations; (2) from the national cash block grant, the Senate amendment earmarks for child care annually the amount paid with Federal funds in fiscal year 1994 for AFDC-related child care (about $980 million); and (3) for the Performance fund (fiscal year 2000 only), each State's share of the family assistance block grant shall be reduced by 5%. These set-aside funds are to finance fiscal year 2000 performance bonuses.

With regard to the treatment of "interstate immigrants", the Senate amendment includes a similar provision, with slight differences in wording, in relation to the House bill.

States may transfer up to 30 percent of block grant funds to the child care and development block grant program.

A State may reserve amounts paid to the State for any fiscal year for the purpose of providing assistance under this part. Reserve funds can be used in any fiscal year. Any funds set aside for child care, if reserved, must be used only for child care.

States may use a portion of the temporary assistance block grant to make payments (or provide job placement vouchers) to State-approved agencies that provide employment services to recipients of cash aid.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment with respect to the general uses of the grant, clarifying that the grant may be used in any manner reasonably calculated to increase the flexibility of States in operating a program designed to: (1) provide assistance to needy families so that children may be cared for in their own homes or in the homes of relatives; (2) end the dependence of needy parents on government benefits by promoting job preparation, work, and marriage; (3) prevent and reduce the incidence of out-of-wedlock pregnancies and establish annual numerical goals for preventing and reducing the incidence of these pregnancies; and (4) encourage the formation and maintenance of two-parent families.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment's 15% cap on administrative spending. However, spending for information technology and computerization needed to implement the tracking and monitoring required by this title are excluded from this limitation.

The conference agreement follows the House bill with regard to set-asides for child care and the performance fund, and follows the Senate amendment with regard to the set-aside for Indians.

It is the intent of the conferees that States be permitted to determine the treatment of interstate immigrants, including whether to provide such persons with benefits equaling those they would have received in their former State, for a period of up to 12 months. A provision specifically authorizing such treatment was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

The conference agreement follows the House bill with regard to transfer of funds.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment on reservation of funds. The conference agreement follows the House bill with regard to the Electronic Benefit Transfer System.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment on the authority of States to use funds to operate an employment placement program.

COST-SHARING

Present law

Current law requires States to share program costs. For administrative costs the rate is 50%. For other costs it varies among States (and, within limits, is inversely related to the square of State per capita income, compared to the square of national per capita income). For AFDC benefits and AFDC-related child care, the Medicaid Federal matching rate is used; it now ranges among States from a floor of 50% to 79%. For JOBS activities, the law provides an "enhanced" rate, ranging from 60% to 79%.

House bill

No cost-sharing required.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment requires State cost-sharing (maintenance of effort) for the temporary assistance block grant for 4 years, starting in fiscal year 1997. To receive the full grant for one of these years, States must spend in the preceding year from their own funds under their temporary assistance program at least 80% of the amount they spent in fiscal year 1994 on the replaced programs—AFDC benefits, AFDC-related child care, Emergency Assistance, and JOBS. Grants are to be reduced one dollar for each dollar by which a State falls short of this requirement. Cost-sharing also is required for "contingency" funds and additional child care funds. For contingency funds States must spend at least 100% of fiscal year 1994 expenditures on programs replaced by the cash block grant. For additional child care funds they must spend at least 100% of fiscal year 1994 expenditures on AFDC-related child care.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification that States must spend at least 75 percent of the amount they spent in fiscal year 1995.

TIMING OF PAYMENTS

Present law

The Secretary pays AFDC funds to the State on a quarterly basis.

House bill

The Secretary shall make each grant payable to a State in quarterly installments.

Senate amendment

Similar to the House provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

PENALTIES

Present law

If the Secretary finds that a State has failed to comply with the State plan, she is to withhold all payments from the State (or limit payments to categories not affected by noncompliance).

There is no specific penalty for failure to submit a report, although the general noncompliance penalty could apply.

The Secretary is to reduce payments by 1% for failure to offer and provide family planning services to all appropriate AFDC recipients who request them.

Except as expressly provided, the Secretary may not regulate the conduct of the States or enforce any provisions of this paragraph.

The penalty against a State for noncompliance with child support enforcement rules—loss of AFDC matching funds—shall be suspended if a State submits and implements a corrective action plan.

House bill

The Secretary shall reduce the funds paid to a State by any amount found by audit to be in violation of this part, but the Secretary cannot reduce any quarterly payment by more than 25 percent. If necessary, funds will be withheld from the State's payments during the following year.

The Secretary must reduce by 3 percent the amount otherwise payable to a State for a fiscal year if the State has not submitted the annual report regarding the use of block grant funds within 6 months after the end of the immediately preceding fiscal year. The penalty is rescinded if the report has been submitted within 12 months.

The Secretary must reduce by 1 percent the amount of a State's annual grant if the State fails to participate in the IEVS designed to reduce welfare fraud.

With regard to failure to offer and provide family planning services, there is no penalty specified, but States are allowed to use block grant funds to pay for family planning services.

Except as expressly provided, the Secretary may not regulate the conduct of States under Part A of Title IV or enforce any provision of it.

There is no provision in the House bill regarding overdue repayments to the Federal rainy day loan fund, which is described below.

Senate amendment

For all penalties, the Secretary may not impose any of the penalties if she finds the State had reasonable cause for its failure to comply with the relevant provision. The State must spend on the block grant program a sum of its own funds to equal the amount of withheld Federal dollars. No quarterly payment may be reduced more than 25%. If necessary, penalty funds will be withheld from the State's payment for the next year. Except for the first item, all penalties take effect October 1, 1996.

The Secretary shall reduce funds paid to a State by any amount found by audit to be in violation of this part. If the State does not prove to the Secretary that the unlawful expenditure was not made intentionally, the Secretary shall impose an additional penalty of 5 percent of the basic block grant.

If a State fails to submit the annual report required by sec. 409 within 6 months after the end of a fiscal year, the Secretary shall reduce by 5 percent the amount otherwise payable to the State for the next year. However, the penalty shall be rescinded if the State submits the report before the end of the year in which the report was due.

The Secretary shall reduce by not more than 5 percent the annual grant of a State, if the State fails to participate in the IEVS designed to reduce welfare fraud.

If the Secretary determines that a State does not enforce penalties requested by the Title IV–D child support enforcement agency against recipients of cash aid who fail to cooperate in establishing paternity in accordance with Part D, the Secretary shall reduce the cash assistance block grant by not more than 5 percent.

Except as expressly provided, neither the DHHS Secretary nor the Treasury Secretary may regulate the conduct of States under Part A of Title IV nor enforce any provision of it.

If a State fails to pay any amount borrowed from the Federal Loan Fund for State Welfare Programs within the maturity period, plus any interest owed, the Secretary shall reduce the State's cash assistance block grant for the immediately succeeding fiscal year quarter by the outstanding loan amount, plus the interest owed on it. The Secretary may not forgive these overdue debts.

The Senate amendment requires the Federal government, before assessing a penalty against a State under any program established or modified by the act, to notify the State about the violation and allow it to enter into a corrective compliance plan within 60 days after notification. The Federal government shall have 60 days to accept or reject the plan; if it accepts the plan, and if the State corrects the violation, no penalty shall be assessed. If the State fails to make a timely correction, some or all of the penalty shall be assessed. An alternate corrective action section requires a State to correct the violation pursuant to its plan within 90 days after the Federal government accepts the plan.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment on the general conditions for setting penalties (i.e. penalties may not be imposed if the Secretary finds the State had reasonable cause for its failure to comply; the State must spend on the block grant program a sum of its own funds to equal the amount of withheld Federal dollars; no quarterly payment may be reduced more than 25%; if necessary, penalty funds will be withheld from the State's payment for the next year; and that, except for the first item, all penalties take effect October 1, 1996).

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment on penalties for use of the grant for unauthorized purposes. The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment regarding penalties for State failure to submit the required report, except that the penalty is to be 4 percent. The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment regarding penalties for State failure to participate in IEVS, except that the penalty is to be 2 percent.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment on penalties for State failure to cooperate on child support enforcement. The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment regarding penalties for failure to offer and provide family planning services. The conference agreement includes penalties for failure to satisfy minimum work participation rates. The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the limitation of Federal authority.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the penalty for failure to timely repay the Federal loan fund for State welfare programs. The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the Corrective Action Plan.

FEDERAL RAINY DAY LOAN FUND

Present law

No provision. Instead, current law provides unlimited matching funds.

House bill

The Federal government will establish a fund of $1 billion modeled on the Federal Unemployment Account, which is part of the Unemployment Compensation system. The fund is to be administered by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, who must deposit into the fund any principal or interest payments received with respect to a loan made under this provision. Funds are to remain available without fiscal year limitation for the purpose of making loans and receiving payments of principal and interest.

States must repay their loans, with interest, within 3 years. The rate of interest will equal the current average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with remaining periods to maturity comparable to the period to maturity of the loan. At any given time, no State can borrow more from the fund than half its annual share of block grant funds or $100 million, whichever is less. States may borrow from the fund if their total unemployment rate for any given 3 month period is more than 6.5 percent and is at least 110 percent of the same measure in the corresponding quarter of the previous 2 years.

Senate amendment

Establishes a $1.7 billion revolving loan fund called the "Federal Loan Fund for State Welfare Programs." The Secretary shall make loans, and the rate of interest will equal the current average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with remaining periods to maturity comparable to the period to maturity of the loan. Ineligible are States that have been penalized for misspending block grant funds as determined by an audit. Loans are to mature in 3 years, at the latest, and the maximum amount loaned to a State cannot exceed 10 percent of its basic block grant, and States face penalties for failing to make timely payments on their loan.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

CONTINGENCY FUND (FOR STATES WITH HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT)

Present law

No provision. Current law provides unlimited matching funds.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Establishes a "Contingency Fund for State Welfare Programs" and appropriates funds of up to $1 billion for a total period of 7 years (fiscal year 1996–2002). The fund would provide matching grants (at the Medicaid matching rate) to States that have unemployment rates above specified levels, provided they first spent from their own funds a yearly sum at least equal to their fiscal year 1994 expenditures on AFDC, AFDC-related child care, Emergency Assistance, and JOBS. The maximum contingency grant could not exceed 20 percent of a State's temporary assistance block grant. Eligible would be States that met the maintenance of effort requirement and had an average rate of total unemployment, seasonally adjusted, of at least 6.5 percent during the most recent 3 months with published data and a rate at least 10 percent above that of either or both of the corresponding 3-month periods in the 2 preceding calendar years.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification that $800 million is appropriated for this purpose. The provision requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to annually report to Congress on the status of the fund was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

ADDITIONAL DAY CARE FUNDS

Present law

No provision. Current law provides unlimited matching funds for AFDC/JOBS child care and transitional child care (but a capped amount for "at-risk" care).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment authorizes to be appropriated, and appropriates, $3 billion in matching grants to States for the 5-year period beginning in fiscal year 1996 for child care assistance (in addition to Federal funds set aside for child care in the family assistance block grant). The funds, which are allocated among the States on the basis of their share of the nation's child population, are to be used to reimburse a State, at the Medicaid matching rate, for child care spending in a fiscal year that exceeds its share of child care set-aside funds (100 percent Federal) plus the amount it spent from its own funds in fiscal year 1994 for AFDC/JOBS child care, transitional child care, and at-risk child care. Funds are to be used only for child care assistance under Part IV–A. In the last quarter of the fiscal year, fiscal year 2000, if any portion of a State allotment is not used, the Secretary shall make it available to applicant States. Notwithstanding section 658T of the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act, the State agency administering the family assistance block grant shall determine eligibility for all child care assistance provided under Title IV–A. (For budget scoring, the Amendment states that the baseline shall assume that no grant will be made after fiscal year 2000.)

Conference agreement

See discussion in Subtitle I of the conference agreement under Child Care and Development Block Grant.

D. CONTRACTS/CLIENT AGREEMENTS

TERMS

Present law

After assessing the needs and skills of recipients and developing an employability plan, States may require JOBS participants to negotiate and enter into an agreement that specifies their obligations.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

States must assess, through a case manager, the skills of each parent for use in developing and negotiating a personal responsibility contract (PRC). Each recipient family must enter into a contract developed by the State or into a limited benefit plan. The PRC means a binding contract outlining steps to be taken by the family and State to get the family "off of welfare" and specifying a negotiated time-limited period of eligibility for cash aid. An alternate provision requires the case manager to consult with the parent applicant (client) in developing a PRC, lists client activities that the PRC might require, specifies that clients must agree to accept a bona fide offer of an unsubsidized full-time job unless they have good cause not to, but does not require a time limit in the PRC nor make provision for a limited benefit plan. A State may exempt a battered person from entering into a PRC if its terms would endanger his/her well-being.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

PENALTIES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The PRC is to provide that if a family fails to comply with its terms, the family automatically will enter into a limited benefit plan (with a reduced benefit and later termination of aid, in accordance with a schedule determined by the State). If the State agency violates the PRC, the contract shall be invalid. The State is to establish a procedure, including the opportunity for hearing, to resolve disputes concerning participation in the PRC. The alternate PRC language provides these penalties: for the first act of noncompliance with the PRC, 33 percent reduction in the family's benefit for one month; for the second act, 66 percent reduction for 3 months; for third and subsequent acts of noncompliance, loss of eligibility for 6 months. Job refusal without good cause is treated as a third violation. However, in no case shall the penalty period extend beyond the duration of noncompliance.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

E. MANDATORY WORK REQUIREMENTS

WORK ACTIVITIES

Present law

JOBS programs must include specified educational activities (high school or equivalent education, basic and remedial education, and education for those with limited English proficiency); job skills training, job readiness activities, and job development and placement. In addition, States must offer at least two of these four items: group and individual job search; on-the-job training; work supplementation or community work experience program (CWEP) (or another work experience program approved by the DHHS Secretary). The State also may offer postsecondary education in "appropriate" cases.

House bill

"Work activities" are defined as unsubsidized employment, subsidized employment, subsidized public sector employment or work experience, on-the-job training, job search, education and training directly related to employment, and jobs skills training directly related to employment. Satisfactory attendance at secondary school, at State option, may be included as a work activity for a parent under 20 who has not completed high school.

Senate amendment

Establishes this list of work activities: unsubsidized employment, subsidized employment, on-the-job training, community service programs, job search (first 4 weeks only) and vocational educational training (12 months maximum). For work participation requirements, the proportion of persons counted as engaged in "work" through participation in vocational educational training cannot exceed 25 percent. For each tribe receiving a family assistance block grant, the Secretary, with participation of Indian tribes, shall establish minimum work participation rules, appropriate time limits for benefits, and penalties, similar to the general family assistance rules but consistent with the economic conditions and resources of the tribe.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, with the modification that, for the work participation requirements, the proportion of persons counted as engaged in work through participation in vocational education cannot exceed 20 percent.

PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS: ALL FAMILIES

Present law

The following minimum percentage of non-exempt AFDC families must participate in JOBS:

Fiscal year:	Minimum percentage
1995 (last year)	20
1996 and thereafter	[1] 0

[1] No requirement.

Exempt from JOBS are parents whose youngest child is under 3 (1, at State option). Other exemptions include persons who are ill, incapacitated or needed at home because of illness or incapacity of another person. Also exempt are parents of a child under 6, unless the State guarantees child care and requires no more than 20 hours weekly of JOBS activity.

Participation rates are calculated for each month. A State's rate, expressed as a percentage, equals the number of actual JOBS participants divided by the number of AFDC recipients required to participate (non-exempt from JOBS).

In calculating a State's overall JOBS participation rate, a standard of 20 hours per week is used. The welfare agency is to count as participants the largest number of persons whose combined and averaged hours in JOBS activities during the month equal 20 per week.

The law requires States to guarantee child care when needed for JOBS participants and for other AFDC parents in approved education and training activities. Regulations require States to guarantee care for children under age 13 (older if incapable of self-care) to the extent that it is needed to permit the parent to work, train, or attend school. States must continue child care benefits for 1 year to ex-AFDC working families, but must charge them an income-related fee.

House bill

The following minimum percentages of all families receiving cash assistance must engage in work activities:

Fiscal year:	Minimum percentage
1996	10
1997	15
1998	20
1999	25
2000	27
2001	29
2002	40
2003 or thereafter	50

If States achieve net caseload reductions, they receive credit for the number of families by which the caseload is reduced for purposes of meeting the overall family participation requirements. The minimum participation rate shall be reduced by the percentage by which the number of recipient families during the fiscal year falls below the number of AFDC families in fiscal year 1995, except to the extent that the Secretary determines that the caseload reduction was required by terms of Federal law.

The fiscal year participation rates are the average of the rates for each month during the year. The monthly participation rates are measured by the number of recipient families in which an individual is engaged in work activities for the month, divided by the total number of recipient families that include a person who is 18 or older.

To be counted as engaged in work activities for a month, the recipient must be making progress in qualified activities for at least the minimum average number of hours per week shown in the table below. Of these hours, at least 20 hours must be spent in unsubsidized employment, subsidized private sector employment, subsidized public sector employment, work experience, or on-the-job training. During the first 4 weeks of required work activity, hourly credit also is given for job search and job readiness assistance.

1996	20
1997	20
1998	20
1999	25
2000	30
2001	30
2002	35
2003 or thereafter	35

Although a person must work at least 20 hours weekly in order for any hours of their training or education to count toward required participation, the bill does not prohibit a State from offering cash recipients an opportunity to participate in education or training before requiring them to work. In this case, however, participation does not count toward fulfillment of the State mandatory participation rate. Note: although the above table is in a paragraph entitled "requirements applicable to all families receiving assistance," another paragraph establishes a higher hourly requirement (35 hours weekly) in all years for 2-parent families. See below.

Senate amendment

The following minimum percentages of all families receiving cash assistance (except those with a child under 1, if exempted by the State) must participate in work activities:

Fiscal year	Minimum percentage
1996	25
1997	30
1998	35
1999	40
2000 or thereafter	50

The Secretary is directed to prescribe regulations for reducing the minimum participation rate required for a State if its caseload under the new program is smaller than in the final year of AFDC, but not if the decrease was required by Federal law or results from changes in eligibility criteria adopted by the State. With these qualifications, the regulations are to reduce the participation rate by the number of percentage points, if any, by which the caseload in a fiscal year is smaller than in fiscal year 1995.

States may exempt a parent or caretaker relative of a child under one year old and may exclude them from the participation rate calculation. States may exempt a battered person if their well-being would be endangered by a work requirement.

As in the House bill, the fiscal year participation rate is the average of the rates for each month of the year. However, overall monthly rates are measured by adding (1) the number of recipient families with an adult engaged in work for the month, (2) the number subject to a work refusal penalty in the month (if not subject to the penalty for more than 3 months out of the preceding 12), and (3) the number who worked their way off the program in the previous 6 months and that include an adult who is working for the month, and then dividing this total by the number of families enrolled in the program during the month that include an adult recipient. States have the option to include in the calculation of monthly participation rates families who receive assistance under a tribal family assistance plan if the Indian or Alaska Native is participating in work under standards comparable to those of the State for being engaged in work.

To be counted as engaged in work for a month, an adult must be participating in work for at least the minimum average number of hours per week shown in the table below (of which not fewer than 20 hours per week are attributable to a work activity). See list of work activities above.

Exception to the table: In fiscal year 1999 and thereafter, when required weekly hours rise above 20, a State may count a single parent with a child under age 6 as engaged in work for a month if the parent works an average of 20 hours weekly. Also, community service participants may be treated as engaged in work if they provide child care services for another participant for the number of hours deemed appropriate by the State.

Fiscal year	Minimum average hours weekly
1996	20
1997	20
1998	20
1999	25
2000	30
2001	30
2002	35
2003 or thereafter	35

Note: Although the above table is in a paragraph entitled "all families," another paragraph establishes a higher hourly requirement (35 hours weekly) in all years for 2-parent families. See below.

The Senate amendment states that nothing in sec. 421 (amounts for child care) shall be construed to provide an entitlement to child care services to any child.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment as follows:

The following minimum percentages of all families receiving cash assistance must participate in work activities:

Fiscal year	Minimum percentage
1996	15
1997	20
1998	25
1999	30
2000	35
2001	40
2002 or thereafter	50

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment regarding reduction in the participation rate, with the modification that regulations shall not take into account families diverted from the State program as a result of differences in eligibility criteria under the State program (in comparison with the AFDC program that operated prior to the date of enactment). The regulations shall place the burden on the Secretary to prove that families were diverted as a direct result of differences in eligibility criteria.

The conference agreement follows the House bill regarding exemptions from the work requirement for battered individuals. The provision regarding the state option to exempt families with a child under 1 was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment regarding the calculation of the fiscal year rate. The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment regarding the calculation of monthly rates, except that the Senate recedes on counting people who have worked their way off the rolls in the previous 6 months and including sanctioned individuals in the numerator; conferees agree that sanctioned persons are to be subtracted from the denominator in determining monthly rates.

The conference agreement follows the House bill with regard to the number counted as engaged in work, except that the phrase "making progress in qualified activities" is replaced with "participating in qualified activities".

PARTICIPATION REQUIREMENTS: TWO-PARENT FAMILIES

Present law

The following minimum percentages of two-parent families receiving cash assistance must participate in specified work activities:

Fiscal year	Minimum percentage
1995	50
1996	60
1997	75
1998 (last year)	75
1999 and thereafter (no requirement)	0

Participation rates for a month equal the number of parents who participate divided by the number of principal earners in AFDC–UP families (but excluding families who received aid for 2 months or less, if one parent engaged in intensive job search).

One parent in the 2-parent family must participate at least 16 hours weekly in on-the-job training, work supplementation, community work experience program, or a State-designed work program.

House bill

The following minimum percentages of two-parent families receiving cash assistance must engage in work activities:

Fiscal year	Minimum percentage
1996	50
1997	50
1998	90
1999 and thereafter	90

Participation rates for a month are measured by the number of two-parent recipient families in which at least one adult is engaged in work activities for the month, divided by the total number of two-parent families that received cash aid during the month.

An adult in a 2-parent family is engaged in work activities when making progress in them for 35 hours per week, at least 30 of which are in unsubsidized employment, subsidized private sector employment, subsidized public sector employment, work experience, or on-the-job training (or job search and job readiness assistance for the first 4 weeks only).

Senate amendment

The following minimum percentages of two-parent families receiving cash assistance must participate in work:

Fiscal year	Minimum percentage
1996	60
1997	75
1998	75

Participation rates for 2-parent families are measured (like those for all families) by adding (1) the number of 2-parent recipient families with an adult engaged in work for the month; (2) the number of 2-parent families subject to a work refusal penalty in the month (if not subject to the penalty for more than 3 months out of the preceding 12); and (3) the number of 2-parent families who worked their way off the program in the previous 6 months and that include an adult who is working for the month, and then dividing this total by the number of 2-parent families enrolled in the program during the month that include an adult recipient.

An adult in a 2-parent family must participate in work for at least 35 hours per week during the month, and at least 30 hours weekly must be attributable to one or more of the 6 work activities listed above in "4.E. Mandatory Work Requirements," above.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment so that the following minimum percentages of two-parent families receiving cash assistance must participate in specified work activities:

Fiscal year	Minimum percentage
1996	50
1997	75
1998	75
1999 and thereafter	90

With regard to participation rates for a month, the conference agreement for 2-parent families matches the agreement for all families described above, so that the rates equal the number of two-parent recipient families in which at least one adult is engaged in work activities for the month, divided by the total number of two-parent families that received cash assistance minus sanctioned persons.

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment regarding creditable activities, except the Senate recedes so that the percentage of the caseload able to be counted as engaged in a work activity through vocational education training cannot exceed 20 percent.

PENALTIES

Present law

For failure to meet JOBS requirements without good cause, AFDC benefits are denied to the offending parent and payments for the children are made to a third party.

In a 2-parent family, failure of 1 parent to meet JOBS requirements without good cause results in denial of benefits for both parents (unless the other parent participates) and third-party payment on behalf of the children. Repeated failures to comply bring potentially longer penalty periods.

If a State fails to achieve the two required participation rates (overall and for 2-parent families), the Federal reimbursement rate for its JOBS spending (which ranges among States from 60% to 79% for most JOBS costs) is to be reduced to 50%.

House bill

If recipients refuse to participate in required work activities, their cash assistance is reduced by an amount to be determined by individual States, subject to good cause and other exceptions that the State may establish.

Recipients in two-parent families who fail to work the required number of hours receive the proportion of their monthly cash grant that equals the proportion of required work hours they actually worked during the month, or less at State option.

No officer or employee of the Federal government may regulate the conduct of States under this paragraph (about penalties against individuals) or enforce this paragraph against any State.

States not meeting the required participation rates have their overall grant (calculated without the bonus for reducing out-of-wedlock births and before other penalties listed in C(5) above) reduced by up to 5 percent the following fiscal year; penalties shall be based on the degree of noncompliance as determined by the Secretary.

Senate amendment

If an adult recipient refuses to engage in required work, the State shall reduce the amount of assistance to the family pro rata (or more, at State option) with respect to the period of work refusal, or shall discontinue aid, subject to good cause and other exceptions that the State may establish. A State may not penalize a single parent caring for a child under age 6 for refusal to work if the parent has a demonstrated inability to obtain needed child care. Penalties against individuals in 2-parent families follow those against individuals, except that the penalties may apply against parents of children under 6 who refuse to work due to an inability to obtain child care.

No specific provision about regulation of penalties against individuals. However, the amendment provides that neither the DHHS Secretary nor the Treasury Secretary may regulate the conduct of States under Title IV–A or enforce any of its provisions, except to the extent expressly provided in the Act.

If a State fails to meet minimum work participation rates, the Secretary is to reduce the family assistance block grant as follows: For the first year of failure, by 5% (applied in the next year); for subsequent years of failure, by an additional 5% (thus, by 5.25%). The Secretary shall impose reductions on the basis of the degree of noncompliance.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding penalties against individuals, except with the modification that the burden of proof to demonstrate an inability to find needed child care rests on the parent of a child under age 6. The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding penalties against individuals in two-parent families.

The conference agreement follows the House bill on penalties against States not meeting work requirements, except the House recedes to the Senate on corrective action provisions.

RULE OF INTERPRETATION (CONCERNING EDUCATION AND TRAINING)

Present law

JOBS programs must include specified educational activities and job skills training.

House bill

This part does not prohibit a State from establishing a program for recipients that involves education and training.

Senate amendment

No explicit statement. However, the amendment qualifies vocational educational training as a "work activity," with a 12-month maximum and a limit on the proportion of vocational educational trainees who can be counted in calculating work participation rates.

Conference agreement

The House recedes, so no specific provision.

RESEARCH (ABOUT WORK PROGRAMS)

Present law

Authorizes States to make "initial" evaluations (in fiscal year 1991) of demographic characteristics of JOBS participants and requires the DHHS Secretary, in consultation with the Labor Secretary, to assist the States as needed.

House bill

The Secretary is to conduct research on the costs and benefits of mandatory work requirements in the Act, and to evaluate promising State approaches in employing welfare recipients. See also "Research, Evaluations, and National Studies" below.

Senate amendment

The Secretary is to conduct research on the costs, benefits, and effects of operating different State programs of temporary assistance to needy families, including their time limits. Research shall include studies of effects on employment rates. See also "Research, Evaluations, and National Studies" below.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

EVALUATION OF INNOVATIVE APPROACHES TO EMPLOYING RECIPIENTS OF ASSISTANCE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary shall evaluate innovative approaches by the States to employ recipients of assistance.

Senate amendment

The Secretary may assist States in developing, and shall evaluate innovative approaches for reducing welfare dependency and increasing the well-being of minor children, using random assignments in these evaluations "to the maximum extent feasible."

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

ANNUAL RANKING OF STATES AND REVIEW OF WORK PROGRAMS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary must annually rank the States in the order of their success in moving recipients into long-term private sector jobs, and review the 3 most and 3 least successful programs. HHS will develop these rankings based on data collected under the bill.

Senate amendment

Taking account of the number of poor children in the State and funds provided for them, the Secretary of HHS shall rank the States annually in the order of their success in placing recipients into long-term private sector jobs, reducing the overall caseload, and, when a practicable method for calculation becomes available, diverting persons from application and entry into the program. The Secretary shall review the 3 most and 3 least successful programs that provide work experience, help in finding jobs, and provide other support services to enable families to become independent of the program.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

ANNUAL RANKING OF STATES AND REVIEW OF OUT-OF-WEDLOCK BIRTHS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Secretary also is to annually rank States in the order of their success in reducing out-of-wedlock births and to review the programs of the 5 ranked highest and 5 ranked lowest in decreasing their absolute out-of-wedlock birth ratios (defined as the total number of out-of-wedlock births in families receiving cash assistance, divided by the total number of births in recipient families).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

SENSE OF CONGRESS ON WORK PRIORITY FOR MOTHERS WITHOUT YOUNG CHILDREN

Present law

No provision.

House bill

It is the sense of Congress that States should give highest priority to requiring families with older preschool children or school-aged children to engage in work activities.

Senate amendment

Adds to highest priority group "adults in 2-parent families and adults in single-parent families with children that are older than preschool age."

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

WORK/SCHOOL REQUIREMENTS FOR NONCUSTODIAL PARENTS

Present law

The Secretary shall permit up to 5 States, on a voluntary or mandatory basis, to provide JOBS services to unemployed noncustodial parents unable to pay child support.

House bill

States must adopt procedures to ensure that persons owing past-due support to a child (or to a child and parent) receiving Title IV–A either work or have a plan for payment of that support. They must seek a court order requiring the parent to make payment, in accordance with a court-approved plan to work (unless incapacitated). It is the sense of Congress that States should require noncustodial, non-supporting parents under age 18 to fulfill community work obligations and attend appropriate parenting or money management classes after school.

Senate amendment

States must seek a court order or administrative order requiring a person who owes support to a child receiving Title IV–D services to pay the support in accordance with a court-approved plan or to work (unless incapacitated).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except that the sense of Congress that States should require non-custodial, non-supporting parents under age 18 to fulfill community work obligations and attend appropriate parenting or money management classes after school was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

DELIVERY OF WORK ACTIVITIES

Present law

Current law permits States to carry out JOBS programs directly or through arrangement or under contracts with administrative entities under the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), with State and local educational agencies or with private organizations, including community-based organizations as defined in JTPA (Section 485(A) of Social Security Act).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires that work activities for recipients of the temporary family assistance program be delivered through the statewide workforce development system that was earlier included in the Work Opportunity Act, unless a required activity is not available locally through the statewide workforce development system. However, as passed, the amendment does not include the workforce development title.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

DISPLACEMENT OF WORKERS

Present law

Under JOBS law, no work assignment may displace any currently employed worker or position (including partial displacement such as a reduction in hours of non-overtime work, wages, or employment benefits). Nor may a JOBS participant fill a position vacant because of layoff or because the employer has reduced the workforce with the effect of creating a position to be subsidized.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Provides that no adult in a Title IV–A work activity shall be employed or assigned when another person is on layoff from the same or a substantially equivalent job, or when the employer has terminated the employment of a regular worker or otherwise caused an involuntary reduction of its workforce in order to fill the vacancy thus created with a subsidized worker. This provision does not preempt or supersede any State or local law providing greater protection from displacement.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

F. PROHIBITIONS

FAMILIES WITHOUT A MINOR CHILD

Present law

Only families with dependent children (under age 18, or 19 at State option if the child is still in secondary school or in the equivalent level of vocational or technical training) can participate in the program.

House bill

Only families with minor children (under 18 years of age or under 19 years of age for full-time students in a secondary school or the equivalent) can participate in the program.

Senate amendment

Similar to House bill, but specifies that the minor children must live with their parent or other caretaker relative.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, with the modification that a pregnant individual may receive assistance under the block grant.

ASSISTANCE FOR ALIENS

Present law

Illegal aliens are ineligible, but legal aliens and others permanently residing under color of law are eligible for Federal means-tested benefit programs. States must operate a System for Verification of Eligibility (SAVE) for determination of immigration or citizenship status of applicants and must verify the immigration status of aliens with the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

House bill

Block grant funds may not be used to provide cash benefits to a non-citizen unless the individual is a refugee under section 207 of the Immigration and Nationality Act who has been in the U.S. for under 5 years, a legal permanent resident over age 75 who has lived in the U.S. at least 5 years, a veteran (or the spouse or unmarried dependent child of a veteran) honorably discharged from the U.S. Armed Forces, or a legal permanent resident unable because of disability or mental impairment to comply with certain naturalization requirements. In addition, legal permanent residents who are current beneficiaries retain eligibility for the first year after enactment.

Senate amendment

Aliens entering after enactment are barred from receiving benefits for 5 years, with exceptions similar to House bill. Separately, States have the option to deny non-citizens benefits using block grant funds. Eligibility may be affected by changes in the sponsor-to-alien deeming provisions. These changes may affect their eligibility even after aliens have attained citizenship.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment so that noncitizens arriving after the date of enactment may not receive benefits from the block grant during their first 5 years in the U.S.; the conference agreement modifies the Senate amendment so that there is a State option to provide block grant assistance to noncitizens currently residing in the U.S., except that noncitizens receiving AFDC benefits on the date of enactment would continue to be eligible to receive block grant benefits until January 1, 1997. The conference agreement makes specific exceptions to these restrictions for refugees, asylees, veterans and active duty military, and aliens who have worked at least 40 calendar quarters as defined under title II of the Social Security Act. For further details see Subtitle D: Noncitizens.

No Cash Assistance for Out-of-Wedlock Births

Present law

No provision forbidding eligibility. Current law permits a State to provide AFDC to an unwed mother under 18 and her child only if they live with their parent or another adult relative or in another adult-supervised supportive arrangement; exceptions are allowed (Sec. 402(A)).

AFDC law has no provision directly comparable for funding second-chance homes.

AFDC law requires States, to the extent resources permit, to require mothers under age 20 who failed to complete high school to participate in an educational activity, even if they otherwise would be exempt because of having a child under age 3 (or, at State option, under age 1). However, States may exempt some school dropout mothers under 18 years old from this requirement.

House bill

Temporary Assistance to Needy Families Block Grant funds may not be used to provide cash benefits to a child born out-of-wedlock to a mother under age 18 or to the mother until the mother reaches age 18. States must exempt mothers to whom children are born as a result of rape or incest. Block grant funds can be used to provide non-cash (e.g. voucher) assistance to young mothers and their children.

Senate amendment

Explicitly permits States to decide whether or not to give assistance to a child born out-of-wedlock to a mother under 18 years old, and to the mother until she reaches 18. However, if a State elects to extend assistance to these families, the minor mother must live with a parent, legal guardian or other adult relative unless they have no such appropriate relative or the State agency determines (1) that they had suffered, or might suffer, harm in the relative's home or (2) that the requirement should be waived for the sake of the child.

The State shall provide or assist a minor mother in finding a suitable home, a second chance home, maternity home, or other appropriate adult-supervised supportive living arrangement. The amendment authorizes to be appropriated, and appropriates funding for second-chance homes for unmarried teenage parents ($25 million yearly for FYs 1996 and 1997 and $20 million yearly for FYs 1998–2000).

Further, if a State aids these unwed minor mothers, it must require those who have not completed high school, or its equivalent, to attend school unless their child is under 12 weeks old. If the mother fails to attend high school or an approved alternative training program, the State must reduce her benefit or end it.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment, except that the provision extending a state option to deny cash assistance for out-of-wedlock births was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974). With regard to second chance homes, the conference agreement follows the Senate amendment except that funding is authorized but not appropriated for this purpose. The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the school requirement for unwed minor mothers.

NO ADDITIONAL ASSISTANCE FOR ADDITIONAL CHILDREN

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Block grant funds may not be used to provide additional cash benefits for a child born to a recipient of cash welfare benefits, or an individual who received cash benefits at any time during the 10-month period ending with the birth of the child. Mothers to whom children are born as a result of rape or incest are exempted. Block grant funds can be used to provide non-cash (voucher) assistance to young mothers and their children.

Senate amendment

Explicitly permits States to deny aid to child born to a mother already receiving aid under the program or to one who received benefits from the program at any time during the 10 months ending with the baby's birth.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, with the modification that the States may exempt up to 50% of their caseload from the 60-month limit.

NO ASSISTANCE FOR MORE THAN 5 YEARS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Block grant funds may not be used to provide cash benefits for the family of an individual who, after attaining 18 years of age, has received block grant funds for 60 months, whether or not successive; States are permitted to provide hardship exemptions from the 60-month time limit for up to 10 percent of their caseload.

Senate amendment

Block grant funds may not be used to provide cash benefits for the family of a person who has received block grant aid for 60 months (or less at State option), whether or not consecutive. States may give hardship exemptions to up to 20 percent of their caseload. (Exempted from the 60-month time limit is a person who received aid as a minor child and who later applied as the head of her own household with a minor child.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification that no assistance may be provided beyond 5 years and that States may exempt up to 15 percent of their caseload from this limit. Battered individuals may qualify for this exemption, but States are not required to exempt such individuals.

NO ASSISTANCE FOR FAMILIES NOT COOPERATING WITH PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT

Present law

As a condition of eligibility, applicants or recipients must cooperate in establishing paternity of a child born out-of-wedlock, in obtaining support payments, and in identifying any third party who may be liable to pay for medical care and services for the child.

House bill

Block grant funds may not be used to provide cash benefits to persons who fail to cooperate with the State child support enforcement agency in establishing the paternity of any child of the individual; the child support agency defines cooperation.

Senate amendment

Maintains current law. In addition, see "Payments To States" for penalty against a State that fails to enforce penalty requested by the IV–D agency against a person who does not cooperate in establishing paternity.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with the modification that States must deny a parent's share of the family welfare benefit if the parent fails to cooperate; the State may deny benefits to the entire family for failure to cooperate.

NO ASSISTANCE FOR FAMILIES NOT ASSIGNING SUPPORT RIGHTS TO THE STATE

Present law

As a condition of AFDC eligibility, applicants must assign child support and spousal support rights to the State.

House bill

Block grant funds may not be used to provide cash benefits to a family with an adult who has not assigned to the State rights to child support or spousal support.

Senate amendment

Gives States the option to require applicants for temporary family assistance (and recipients) to assign child support and spousal support rights to the State.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

WITHHOLDING PORTION OF AID FOR CHILD WHOSE PATERNITY IS NOT ESTABLISHED

Present law

No provision.

House bill

If, at the time a family applies for assistance, the paternity of a child in the family has not been established, the State must impose a financial penalty ($50 or 15 percent of the monthly benefits of a family of that size, whichever the State chooses) until the paternity of the child is established. Once paternity is established, all the money withheld as a penalty must be remitted to the family if it is still eligible for aid. Mothers to whom children are born as a result of rape or incest are exempted from this penalty. Provision effective 1 year after enactment (2 years at State option).

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with the modification that States may impose a financial penalty if paternity is not established.

DENIAL OF BENEFITS TO PERSONS WHO FRAUDULENTLY RECEIVED AID IN TWO STATES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Ineligible for block grant assistance for 10 years is any individual convicted of having fraudulently misrepresented residence (or found by a State to have made a fraudulent statement) in order to obtain benefits or services from two or more States from the block grant, Medicaid, Food Stamps, or Supplemental Security Income.

Senate amendment

Ineligible for block grant assistance for 10 years is any person convicted in Federal court or State court of having fraudulently misrepresented residence in order to obtain benefits or services from two or more States from the cash block grant, Medicaid, Food Stamps, or Supplemental Security Income.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

DENIAL OF AID FOR FUGITIVE FELONS, PROBATION AND PAROLE VIOLATORS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No assistance may be provided to an individual who is fleeing to avoid prosecution, custody or confinement after conviction for a crime (or an attempt to commit a crime) that is a felony (or, in New Jersey, a high misdemeanor), or who violates probation or parole imposed under Federal or State law.

Any safeguards established by the State against use or disclosure of information about individual recipients shall not prevent the agency, under certain conditions, from providing the address of a recipient to a law enforcement officer who is pursuing a fugitive felon or parole or probation violator. This provision applies also to a recipient sought by an officer not because he is a fugitive but because he has information that the officer says is necessary for his official duties. In both cases the officer must notify the State that location or apprehension of the recipient is within his official duties.

Senate amendment

A State shall furnish law enforcement officers, upon their request, the address, social security number, and photograph (if available) of any recipient if the officers notify the agency that the recipient is a fugitive felon, or a violator of probation or parole, or that he has information needed by the officers to perform their duties, and that the location or apprehension of the recipient is within the officers' official duties.

NO ASSISTANCE FOR MINOR CHILDREN WHO ARE ABSENT, OR RELATIVES WHO FAIL TO NOTIFY AGENCY OF CHILD'S ABSENCE

Present law

Regulations allow benefits to continue for children who are "temporarily absent" from home.

House bill

No assistance may be provided for a minor child who has been absent from the home for 45 consecutive days or, at State option, between 30 and 90 consecutive days. States may establish a good cause exemption as long as it is detailed in the State report to the Secretary. No assistance can be given to a parent or caretaker who fails to report a missing minor child within 5 days of the time it is clear that the child is absent.

Senate amendment

Similar provision to House bill, with different wording.

APPEAL PROCEDURE (FOR STATES)

Present law

Current law (sec. 1116 of the Social Security Act) entitles a State to a reconsideration, which DHHS must grant upon request, of any disallowed reimbursement claim for an item or class of items. The section also provides for administrative and judicial review, upon petition of a State, of DHHS decisions about approval of State plans. At the option of a State, any plan amendment may be treated as the submission of a new plan.

House bill

Repeals reference to Title IV–A in section 1116.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary to notify the Governor of a State of any adverse decision or action under Title IV–A, including any decision about the State's plan or imposition of a penalty. Provides for administrative review by a Departmental Appeals Board within DHHS and requires a Board decision within 60 days after an appeal is filed. Provides for judicial review (by a United States district court) within 90 days after a final decision by the Board. The Amendment also repeals the reference to Title IV–A in section 1116.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

I. QUALITY CONTROL/AUDITS

Present law

The Secretary must operate a quality control system to determine the amount of Federal matching funds to be disallowed, if any, because of erroneous payments. The law also prescribes penalties for payment error rates above the national average. AFDC payments to States are subject to audits conducted under the Single Audit Act [Ch. 75, Title 31, U.S.C.]

House bill

Family assistance block grants are subject to the Single Audit Act. If an audit conducted under this Act finds that a State has used block grant funds in violation of the law, its grant for the next year is to be reduced by that amount (but no quarterly payment is to be reduced by more than one-fourth).

Senate amendment

Requires a State to offset loss of Federal funds with its own, maintaining the full block grant level. Also, the penalty shall not be imposed if the State proves to the Secretary that the violation was not intentional, and if the State implements an approved corrective action plan. Each State must audit its cash block grant expenditures annually and submit a copy to the State legislature, Treasury Secretary and DHHS Secretary. The audit must be conducted by an entity that is independent from any agency administering activities under title IV–A. Further, the DHHS Secretary is to develop a quality assurance system of data collection and reporting. Also subject to the Single Audit Act.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill regarding audits to review States' use of funds. See also Penalties, e.g. against States misusing funds and against States failing to meet work requirements.

J. DATA COLLECTION AND REPORTING

REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

Present law

States are required to report the average monthly number of families in each JOBS activity, their types, amounts spent per family, length of JOBS participation and the number of families aided with AFDC/JOBS child care services, the kinds of child care services provided, and sliding fee schedules. States that disallow AFDC for minor mothers in their own living quarters are required to report the number living in their parent's home or in another supervised arrangement. States also must report data (including numbers aided, types of families, how long aided, payments made) for families who receive transitional Medicaid benefits. DHHS collects data about demographic characteristics and financial circumstances of AFDC families from its National Integrated Quality Control System (NIQCS) and publishes State and national information that represents average monthly amounts for a fiscal year. The NIQCS uses monthly samples of AFDC cases.

House bill

States are required, not later than 6 months after the end of each fiscal year, to transmit to the Secretary the following aggregate information on families receiving block grant benefits during the fiscal year:

(a) the number of adults receiving assistance;

(b) the number of children receiving assistance and the average age of children;

(c) the employment status and average earnings of employed adults;

(d) the number of one-parent families in which the sole parent is a widow or widower, is divorced, is separated, or is never married;

(e) the age, race, educational attainment, and employment status of parents;

(f) the average assistance provided to families;

(g) whether, at the time of application, the families or anyone in the families receive benefits from the following public programs: (1) Housing, (2) Food Stamps, (3) Head Start, (4) Job Training;

(h) the number of months the families have been on welfare during their current spell;

(i) the total number of months for which benefits have been provided to the families;

(j) data necessary to indicate whether the State is in compliance with the State's plan;

(k) the components of any employment and training activities, and the average monthly number of adults in each component; and

(l) the number of part-time and full-time job placements made by the program, the number of cases with reduced assistance, and the number of cases closed due to employment.

Senate amendment

States are required to make quarterly reports based on sample case records providing disaggregated data for the quality assurance system, including:

(a) age of adults and children (including pregnant women) in each family;

(b) marital and familial status of each family member (including whether family includes 2 parents and whether child is living with an adult relative other than a parent);

(c) gender, educational level, work experience, and race of each family head;

(d) health status of each family member (including whether any is seriously ill, disabled, or incapacitated and is being cared for by another family member);

(e) type and amount of any benefit or assistance received, including amount of and reason for any benefit reduction, and if help is ended, whether this is because of employment, sanction, or time limit;

(f) any benefit or assistance received by a family member with respect to housing, food stamps, job training, or Head Start;

(g) number of months since the family's most recent application for aid, and if application was denied, the reason;

(h) number of times a family applied for and received aid from the cash block grant program and the number of months were received in each "spell" of assistance;

(i) employment status of adults in family (including hours worked and amount earned);

(j) date on which an adult family member began to engage in work, hours worked, work activity performed, amount of child care assistance, if any;

(k) number of persons in each family receiving, and the number not receiving, assistance, and the relationship of each person to the youngest child in the family;

(l) citizenship status of each family member;

(m) housing arrangement of each family member;

(n) amount of unearned income, child support; assets and other financial factors relevant to eligibility;

(o) location in the State of each recipient family; and

(p) any other data determined by Secretary to be necessary for efficient and effective administration.

States are required to report the following aggregated monthly data about families who received temporary family assistance for each month in the calendar quarter preceding the one in which the data are submitted, families applying for assistance in the preceding quarter, and families that became ineligible for aid during that quarter: (1) number of families, (2) number of adults in each family, (3) number of children in each family, and (4) number of families whose assistance ended because of employment, sanctions, or time limits.

The Secretary shall determine appropriate subsets of the data listed above that a State is required to submit regarding applicant and no-longer eligible families.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, except that provisions that make reference to "race" are dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

AUTHORITY OF STATES TO USE ESTIMATES

Present law

The National Integrated Quality Control System (above) uses monthly samples of AFDC cases. JOBS regulations require States to submit a sample of monthly unaggregated case record data.

House bill

States may use scientifically acceptable sampling methods to estimate the data elements required for annual reports.

Senate amendment

The Secretary shall provide States with case sampling plans and data collection procedures deemed necessary for statistically valid estimates.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, and clarifies that the Secretary may, in the case of States that use sampling methods, challenge the sampling plan as scientifically invalid.

OTHER STATE REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

Present law

Regulations require each State to submit quarterly estimates of the total amount (and the Federal share) of expenditures for AFDC benefits and administration.

Required quarterly reports include estimates of the Federal share of child support collections made by the State; see above for transitional child care and Medicaid reporting requirements.

House bill

The report submitted by the State each fiscal year must also include:

(1) a statement of the percentage of the funds paid to the State that are used to cover administrative costs or overhead;

(2) a statement of the total amount expended by the State during the fiscal year on programs for needy families; and

(3) the number of noncustodial parents in the State who participated in work activities as defined in the bill during the fiscal year.

Senate amendment

The report required by a State for a fiscal year must include:

(1) a statement of the total amount and percentage of Federal funds paid to the State under Title IV–A that are used for administrative costs or overhead;

(2) a statement of the total amount of State funds expended on programs for the needy;

(3) the number of noncustodial parents who participated in work activities during the fiscal year;

(4) the total amount of child support collected by the State IV–D agency on behalf of a family in the cash assistance program;

(5) the total amount spent by the State for child care under Title IV–A, with a description of the types of care, including transitional care for families who no longer receive assistance because of work and "at-risk" care for persons who otherwise might become eligible for assistance; and

(6) the total amount spent by the State for providing transitional services to a family that no longer receive assistance because of employment, along with a description of those services.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment as follows:

(1) administrative funds—follow House bill;
(2) State spending—follow House bill;
(3) noncustodial parent—follow House bill;
(4) child support—follow House bill;

(5) child care—follow House bill; and
(6) transition services—follow Senate amendment.

K. REPORTS REQUIRED BY DHHS SECRETARY

Present law

The law requires the DHHS Secretary to report promptly to Congress the results of State reevaluations of AFDC need standards and payment standards required at least every 3 years. The Secretary is to annually compile and submit to Congress annual State reports on at-risk child care. The Family Support Act required the Secretary to submit recommendations regarding JOBS performance standards by a deadline that was extended.

House bill

The DHHS Secretary must report to Congress within 6 months on the status of automatic data processing systems in the States and on what would be required to produce a system capable of tracking participants in public programs over time and checking case records across States to determine whether some individuals are participating in public programs in more than one State. The report should include a plan for building on the current automatic data processing system to produce a system capable of performing these funcitions as well as an estimate of the time required to put the system in place and the cost of the system.

The DHHS Secretary must, to the extent feasible, produce and publish for each State, county, and local unit of government for which data have been compiled in the most recent census of population, and for each school district, data about the incidence of poverty. Data shall include, for each school district, the number of children age 5 to 17 inclusive, in families below the poverty level, and, for each State and county for which data have been compiled by the Census Bureau, the number of persons aged 65 or older. Data shall be published for each State, county and local unit of government in 1996 and at least every second year thereafter; and for each school district, in 1998 and at least every second year thereafter. Data may be produced by means of sampling, estimation, or any other method that the Secretary determines will produce current, comprehensive, and reliable information. If reliable data could not be otherwise produced, the Secretary is given authority to aggregate school districts. The DHHS Secretary is to consult with the Secretary of Education in producing data about school districts. If unable to produce and publish the required data, the Secretary must submit a report to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House not later than 90 days before the start of the following year, enumerating each government or school district excluded and giving the reason for the exclusion.

Senate amendment

The Secretary must, in cooperation with the States, study and analyze measures of program outcomes (as an alternative to minimum participation rates) for evaluating the success of State block grant programs in helping recipients leave welfare. The study must include a determination of whether outcomes measures should be applied on a State or national basis and a preliminary assessment of the job placement performance bonus established in the Act. The Secretary must report findings to the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Ways and Means not later than September 30, 1998.

The Secretary is to report by Dec. 31, 1997, to the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities of the House and the Committee on Finance, the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, and the Special Committee on Aging of the Senate setting forth findings of a study on the effects of welfare changes made by the Act on grandparents who are primary caregivers for their grandchildren. The study is to identify barriers to participation in public programs by grandparent caregivers, including inconsistent policies, standards, and definitions of programs providing medical aid, cash, child support enforcement, and foster care.

Not later than March 31, 1998, and each fiscal year thereafter, the Secretary shall send Congress a report describing:

(1) whether States are meeting minimum participation rates and whether they are meeting objectives of increasing employment and earnings of needy families, increasing child support collections, and decreasing out-of-wedlock pregnancies and child poverty;

(2) demographic and financial characteristics of applicant families, recipient families, and those no longer ineligible for temporary family assistance;

(3) characteristics of each State program of temporary family assistance; and

(4) trends in employment and earnings of needy families with minor children.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment as follows:

(1) data processing—follow House bill;

(2) poverty—follow Senate amendment;

(3) alternatives—the provision in the Senate amendment was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974);

(4) grandparents—follow House bill; and

(5) State progress—follows Senate amendment with the modification that in evaluating innovative approaches to reducing welfare dependency, attention should be paid to welfare recipients who suffer from substance abuse or addiction..

L. RESEARCH, EVALUATIONS, AND NATIONAL STUDIES

Present law

The law authorizes $5 million annually for cooperative research or demonstration projects, such as those relating to the prevention and reduction of dependency.

House bill

The Secretary may conduct research on the effects, costs, benefits, and caseloads of State programs funded under this part. The Secretary may assist the States in developing, and shall evaluate (using random assignment to experimental and control groups to the maximum extent feasible), innovative approaches to employing recipients of cash aid under this part. The Secretary may conduct studies of the welfare caseloads of States operating welfare reform programs. The Secretary shall develop innovative methods of disseminating information on research, evaluations, and studies.

Senate amendment

The Secretary may conduct research on the effects, benefits, and costs of operating different State programs of Temporary Assistance to Needy Families, including time limits for eligibility. The research shall include studies on the effects of different programs and the operation of the programs on welfare dependency, illegitimacy, teen pregnancy, employment rates, child well-being, and any other appropriate area. The Secretary may assist States in developing, and shall evaluate innovative approaches for reducing welfare dependency and increasing the well-being of minor children, using random assignments in these evaluations "to the maximum extent feasible."

The Secretary shall develop innovative methods of disseminating information on research, evaluations, and studies, including ways to facilitate sharing of information via computers and other technologies. The Senate amendment makes a State eligible to receive funding to evaluate its family assistance program if it submits an evaluation design determined by the Secretary to be rigorous and likely to yield credible and useful information. The State must pay 10 percent of the study's cost, unless the Secretary waives this rule. For these State-initiated evaluation studies of the family assistance program (and for costs of operating and evaluating demonstration projects begun under the AFDC waiver process) the amendment authorizes to be appropriated, and appropriates, a total of $20 million annually for 5 years (FYs 1996–2000).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment except that $15 million is appropriated annually for this purpose.

M. WAIVERS

Present law

The law authorizes DHHS Secretary to waive specified requirements of State AFDC plans in order to enable a State to carry out any experimental, pilot, or demonstration project that the Secretary judges likely to assist in promoting the program's objective. (Sec. 1115 of Social Security Act) Some 34 States have received waivers from the Clinton Administration for welfare reforms of their own.

House bill

Repeals AFDC. Also, expressly repeals authority for waiver of specified provisions of AFDC law (Sec. 402, State plan requirements, and Sec. 403, terms of payment to States) for demonstration projects.

Senate amendment

Provides that terms of AFDC waivers in effect, or approved, as of October 1, 1995, will continue until their expiration, except that beginning with fiscal year 1996 a State operating under a waiver shall receive the block grant described under section 403 in lieu of any other payment provided for in the waiver. The amendment gives States the option to terminate waivers before their expiration, but requires that early-ended projects be summarized. The amendment provides that a State that submits a request to end a waiver by January 1, 1996, or 90 days after adjournment of the first regular session of the State legislature that begins after the date of enactment, shall be held harmless for accrued cost neutrality liabilities incurred under the waiver.

The Secretary is directed to encourage any State now operating a waiver to continue the project and to evaluate its result or effect. The amendment allows a State to elect to continue one or more individual waivers.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

N. STUDIES BY THE CENSUS BUREAU

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Census Bureau must expand the Survey of Income and Program Participation to evaluate the impact of welfare reforms made by this title on a random national sample of recipients and, as appropriate, other low-income families. The study should focus on the impact of welfare reform on children and families, and should pay particular attention to the issues of out-of-wedlock birth, welfare dependency, the beginning and end of welfare spells, and the causes of repeat welfare spells. Ten million dollars per year for 4 years in entitlement funds are authorized for this study.

Senate amendment

Expansion of SIPP is identical to House provision.

In addition, the Secretary of Commerce shall expand the Census Bureau's question (for the decennial census and mid-decade census) concerning households with both grandparents and their grandchildren so as to distinguish between households in which a grandparent temporarily provides a home and those where the grandparent serves as primary caregiver.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill regarding the expansion of SIPP to evaluate welfare programs. The provision in the Senate amendment regarding census data on grandparents as caregivers was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

O. SERVICES FROM CHARITABLE, RELIGIOUS, OR PRIVATE ORGANIZATIONS

Present law

The Child Care and Development Block Grant Act prohibits use of any financial assistance provided through any grant or contract for any sectarian purpose or activity. In general, it requires religious nondiscrimination, but it does allow a sectarian organization to require employees to adhere to its religious tenets and teachings.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Authorizes States to administer and provide family assistance services (and services under Supplemental Security Income and Public Housing) through contracts with charitable, religious, or private organizations. Authorizes States to pay recipients by means of certificates, vouchers, or other forms of disbursement that are redeemable with these private organizations. States that religious organizations are eligible, on the same basis as any other private organization, to provide assistance as contractors or to accept certificates and vouchers so long as their programs "are implemented consistent with" the Establishment Clause of the Constitution. Stipulates that any religious organization with a contract to provide welfare services shall retain independence from all units of government and that such a religious organization (or one that redeems welfare certificates) may require employees who render service related to the contract or certificates to adhere to the religious tenets and teaching of the organization and to its rules, if any, regarding use of drugs or alcohol. Provides that, except as otherwise allowed by law, a religious organization administering the program may not discriminate against beneficiaries on the basis of religious belief, or refusal to participate in a religious practice. Requires States to provide an alternative provider for a beneficiary who objects to the religious character of the designated organization. Provides that no funds provided directly to institutions or organizations to provide services and administer programs shall be spent for sectarian worship or instruction, but does not apply this limitation to financial assistance in the form of certificates or vouchers, if the beneficiary may choose where the aid is redeemed.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

5. TRANSFERS

A. CHILD SUPPORT PENALTIES

Present law

If a State's child support plan fails to comply substantially with Federal requirements, the Secretary is to reduce its AFDC matching funds by percentages that rise for successive violations (sec. 403(h) of the Social Security Act).

House bill

The provision for child support review penalties—loss of Federal payments for cash assistance—now found in 403(h) of part A of the Social Security Act is retained in the block grant.

Senate amendment

No provision. However, there is a penalty assessed against States for failure to enforce penalties requested by child support agency against recipients who do not cooperate in establishing paternity.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR FAMILY SUPPORT

Present law

An Assistant Secretary for Family Support, appointed by the President by and with consent of the Senate, is to administer AFDC, child support enforcement, and the Jobs Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) program.

House bill

The provision for an Assistant Secretary for Family Support now found in section 417 of Part A of the Social Security Act is retained in the block grant (as sec. 409), but modified to remove the reference to JOBS (which the House bill repeals).

Senate amendment

Identical provision placed in sec. 415.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

6. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

This section makes a series of technical amendments that conform the provisions of the House bill with various titles of the Social Security Act and provide for the repeal of Part F of Title IV (the JOBS program).

Senate amendment

This section makes a series of amendments that conform provisions of the Senate amendment with various titles of the Social Security Act.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, with changes made as appropriate.

7. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO OTHER LAWS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

This section makes a series of technical amendments to conform provisions of the House bill to the Internal Revenue Code, the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1987, the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, and the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Amendments Act of 1988.

Senate amendment

Section 107 makes a series of amendments that conform provisions of the Senate amendment to the Food Stamp Act, the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act, the National School Lunch Act, and the Child Nutrition Act.

Section 108 makes a series of amendments that conform provisions of the Senate amendment to the Unemployment Compensation Amendments of 1976, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, the House and Urban–Rural Recovery Act of 1983, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, the Social Security Amendments of 1967, the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Amendments Act of 1988, the Higher Education Act of 1965, the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, Public Law 99–88, the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, the Wagner-Peyser Act, the Job Training Partnership Act, the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981, the Family Support Act of 1988, the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, the Immigration and Nationality Act, the Head Start Act, and the School-to-Work Opportunities Act of 1994.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, with changes made as appropriate.

8. CONTINUED APPLICATION OF CURRENT STANDARDS UNDER MEDICAID PROGRAM

Present law

States must continue Medicaid (or pay premiums for employer-provided health insurance) for 6 months to a family that loses AFDC eligibility because of hours of, or income from, work of the caretaker relative, or because of loss of the earned income disregard after 4 months of work. States must offer an additional 6 months of medical assistance, for which it may require a premium payment if the family's income after child care expenses is not above the poverty guideline. For extended medical aid, families must submit specified reports. States must continue Medicaid for 4 months to those who lose AFDC because of increased child or spousal support.

House bill

Although AFDC would be repealed, its standards would continue to be used by the Medicaid program. States would have to give Medicaid to families who would have received AFDC if it still existed as in effect on March 7, 1995. The frozen AFDC rules would govern Medicaid eligibility for both recipients and non-recipients of the new block grant funds, including those categorically ineligible for cash benefits.

Senate amendment

Same as House provision except for date at which AFDC rules would be "frozen" (June 1, 1995, rather than March 7, 1995). If an AFDC waiver (as of June 1, 1995) affects Medicaid eligibility, the State has the option to continue to apply the waiver in regard to Medicaid after the date when the waiver otherwise would end.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment with the clarification that States will determine Medicaid eligibility for recipients of block grant assistance (in conformity with other pending Medicaid changes).

9. EFFECTIVE DATES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The amendments and repeals made by this title take effect on October 1, 1995. The authority to reduce assistance for certain families that include a child whose paternity is not established will begin 1 year after the effective date or, at the option of the State, 2 years after the effective date.

Amendments made by Title I (Block Grants for Temporary Assistance for Needy Families) shall not apply to powers, duties, functions, rights, claims, penalties, or obligations applicable to aid, or services provided (under AFDC) before the effective date of the Act. Nor shall amendments of the bill apply to administrative actions and proceedings commenced or authorized before the effective date of the bill.

Senate amendment

AFDC is repealed effective October 1, 1995. Family assistance block grant provisions also take effect October 1, 1995 (except for penalties, most of which are effective October 1, 1996), but expire on September 30, 2000. A State may continue to operate its AFDC program for 9 months, until June 30, 1996. If it does so, its fiscal year 1996 cash block grant under the new program shall be reduced by the amount of Federal matching funds received for that year for AFDC expenditures.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

10. MISCELLANEOUS

A. COUNTY AUTHORITY FOR DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the DHHS Secretary and the Agriculture Secretary jointly to enter into negotiations with all counties having a population greater than 500,000 that desire to conduct a demonstration project in which: (1) the county shall have the authority and duty to administer the operation of the family assistance program as if the county were considered a State; (2) the State shall pass through directly to the county the portion of the block grant that the State determines is attributable to the residents of the county; and (3) the project shall last 5 years.

To be eligible: (1) a county already must be administering the Title IV–A program; (2) must represent less than 25 percent of the State's total welfare caseload; and (3) the State must have more than one county with a population of greater than 500,000.

Not later than 6 months after the end of a county demonstration project, the two Secretaries shall send a report to Congress that includes a description of the project, its rules, and innovations (if any).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. COLLECTION OF OVERPAYMENTS FROM FEDERAL TAX REFUNDS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the Treasury Secretary, upon notification from a State that it has overpaid a former recipient of temporary cash assistance and has attempted unsuccessfully to collect the overpayment, to collect the sum from Federal tax refunds.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

C. TAMPER-PROOF SOCIAL SECURITY CARD

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the Commissioner of Social Security to develop a prototype of a counterfeit-resistant social security card. The card must be made of a durable, tamper-resistant material such as plastic or polyester, employ technologies that provide security features, and be developed so as to provide individuals with reliable proof of citizenship or legal resident alien status. The Commissioner is to report to Congress on the cost of issuing a tamper-proof card for all persons over a 3-, 5-, and 10-year period. Copies of the report, along with a facsimile of the prototype card, shall be submitted to the Committees on Ways and Means and Judiciary of the House and the Committees on Finance and Judiciary of the Senate within one year of enactment.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

D. DISCLOSURE OF RECEIPT OF FEDERAL FUNDS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires disclosure of specified public funds received by 501(c) organizations, which are non-profit and tax-exempt. When a 501(c) organization that accepts Federal funds under the Work Opportunity Act makes any communication that intends to promote public support or opposition to any governmental policy (Federal, State or local) through any broadcasting station, newspaper, magazine, outdoor advertising facility, direct mailing, or any other type of general public advertising, the communication must state: "This was prepared and paid for by an organization that accepts taxpayer dollars".

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

E. PROJECTS TO EXPAND JOB OPPORTUNITIES FOR CERTAIN LOW-INCOME INDIVIDUALS (JOLI)

Present law

The Family Support Act of 1988 (Sec. 505) directed the Secretary to enter into agreement with between 5 and 10 nonprofit organizations to conduct demonstrations to create job opportunities for AFDC recipients and other low-income persons. For these projects, $6.5 million was authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, 1990–1992.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Strikes the word "demonstration" from the description of these projects and converts them to grant status. It requires the Secretary to enter into agreements with nonprofit organizations to conduct projects to create job opportunities for recipients of family assistance and other persons with income below the poverty guideline. It authorizes appropriations of $25 million annually for these projects.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

F. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS TO EXPAND USE OF SCHOOLS

Present law

The 21st Century Community Learning Centers Act (established by P.L. 103–382) makes available funds directly to rural or inner-city schools, or consortia of them, to act as centers for providing education and human resources services. Services allowed include: literacy education, parenting skills education, employment counseling, training and placement. The Elementary and Secondary Education Act includes a program called "Extended Time for Learning and Longer School Year," which supports local educational agencies' efforts to lengthen learning time. Grantees may engage other community members in these efforts.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Secretary of Education is required to make grants to not more than 5 States for demonstration grants to increase the number of hours when public school facilities are available for use. Schools selected must have a significant percentage of students receiving family assistance benefits. The longer hours are intended to enable volunteers and parents or professionals paid from other sources to teach, tutor, coach, organize, advise, or monitor students. Grants are intended also to make school facilities available for clubs, civic associations, Boy and Girl Scouts and other groups. The amendment authorizes $10 million annually (FYs 1996–2000) for grants plus $1 million annually for administration by the Secretary.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

G. SECRETARIAL SUBMISSION OF LEGISLATIVE PROPOSAL FOR TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Not later than 90 days after enactment of this Act, the Secretary must submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a legislative proposal providing for technical and conforming amendments.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

SUBTITLE B—SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME

CHAPTER 1—ELIGIBILITY RESTRICTIONS

1. DENIAL OF SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME BENEFITS BY REASON OF DISABILITY TO DRUG ADDICTS AND ALCOHOLICS

A. IN GENERAL

Present law

Individuals whose drug addiction or alcoholism is a contributing factor material to their disability are eligible to receive SSI cash benefits for up to three years if they meet SSI income and resource requirements. These recipients must have a representative payee, must participate in an approved treatment program when available and appropriate, and must allow their participation in a treatment program to be monitored. Medicaid benefits continue beyond the 3-year limit, as long as the individual remains disabled, unless the individual was expelled from SSI for failure to participate in a treatment program.

House bill

Under the House provision, an individual is not considered disabled if drug addiction or alcoholism is a contributing factor material to his or her disability. Individuals with drug addiction and/or alcoholism who cannot qualify based on another disabling condition will not be eligible for SSI benefits.

Senate amendment

Identical to House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

B. REPRESENTATIVE PAYEE REQUIREMENTS

Present law

SSI law requires that the SSI payments of individuals whose drug addiction or alcoholism is a contributing factor material to their disability must be made to another individual, or an appropriate public or private organization (i.e., the individual's "representative payee") for the use and benefit of the individual or eligible spouse.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, if a disabled person also has an alcoholism or drug addiction condition (as determined by the Commissioner of Social Security), their SSI checks must be sent to a representative payee.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment with modification to require that a representative payee be appointed only in those cases in which the Commissioner determines that payment to a representative payee would serve the interest of the beneficiary because such individual also has an alcoholism or drug addiction condition that prevents such individual from managing his or her own benefits.

C. TREATMENT REFERRALS FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH AN ALCOHOLISM OR DRUG ADDICTION CONDITION

Present law

Federal law requires SSI recipients whose drug addiction or alcoholism is a contributing factor material to their disability to undergo appropriate treatment, if it is available.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment requires the Commissioner of Social Security to refer to the appropriate State agency administering the State plan for substance abuse services any disabled SSI recipient who is identified as having an alcoholism or drug addiction condition. Any individual who refuses to accept the referred services without good cause is no longer eligible for SSI benefits.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with modification to require that only those SSI disability recipients who are unable to manage their own benefits as a result of an alcoholism or drug addiction condition be referred to the State agencies administering such treatment. While additional treatment funds are being provided to States in a separate provision, it is not the intent of the conferees that States are required to provide treatment.

Although this legislation eliminates drug addiction and alcoholism as the basis for awarding disability benefits to an SSI claimant, the conferees believe it is important that SSI recipients with severe drug or alcohol abuse continue to be referred to treatment sources. While the conferees do not expect that the Commissioner will routinely inquire in all representative payee cases whether drug addiction or alcoholism causes an individual's inability to manage his or her own affairs, it is expected that whenever there is any indication that this may be the case, the Commissioner will investigate to determine whether referral is appropriate.

D. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

E. FUNDING OF CERTAIN PROGRAMS FOR DRUG ADDICTS AND ALCOHOLICS

Present law

SSI cash benefits are limited to 3 years for recipients whose drug addiction or alcoholism is a contributing factor material to their disability. These individuals must undergo "appropriate substance abuse treatment." While the Social Security Administration currently contracts with agencies for referral, monitoring and reporting of compliance with treatment, it does not pay for treatment. Medicaid benefits are to continue beyond the 3-year limit, as long as the individual remains disabled, unless the individual was expelled from SSI for noncompliance with treatment.

House bill

For four years beginning with fiscal year 1997, $100 million of the savings realized from denying cash SSI payments and Medicaid coverage to individuals whose drug addiction or alcoholism is a contributing factor material to their disability will be targeted to drug treatment and drug abuse research. Each year, $95 million will be expended through the Federal Capacity Expansion Program (CEP) to expand drug treatment availability and $5 million will be allocated to the National Institute on Drug Abuse to be expended solely on the medication development project to improve drug abuse and drug treatment research.

Senate amendment

For two years beginning with fiscal year 1997, $50 million will be spent to fund additional drug (including alcohol) treatment programs and services through Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Block Grant. The conferees expect that States will use funds made available under this provision to provide treatment to current and former SSI recipients as their first priority.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

F. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

This section of the bill becomes effective on October 1, 1995, and applies with respect to months beginning on or after that date.

Senate amendment

Generally, changes apply to applicants for benefits for months beginning on or after the date of enactment. An individual receiving benefits on the date of enactment whose eligibility would end would continue to be eligible for benefits until January 1, 1997. The Commissioner of Social Security shall notify individuals losing eligibility within three months of the date of enactment.

In addition, in the case of an individual with an alcoholism or drug addiction condition who is receiving SSI benefits on the date of enactment, the representative payee requirement will apply on or after the first continuing disability review occurring after enactment. For recipients with an addiction who are over the age of 65, the Commissioner will determine appropriate representative payee requirements.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with modification that the referral to treatment requirement for an individual with an alcoholism or drug addiction condition receiving benefits on the date of enactment will apply on or after the first continuing disability review occurring after enactment.

REAPPLICATION

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Individuals receiving SSI benefits on the date of enactment who are notified of their termination of eligibility and who desire to reapply for benefits must do so within four months after the date of enactment. The Commissioner of Social Security will determine within one year after the date of enactment the eligibility of individuals who reapply.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment with technical modification.

2. DENIAL OF SSI BENEFITS FOR 10 YEARS TO INDIVIDUALS FOUND TO HAVE FRAUDULENTLY MISREPRESENTED RESIDENCE IN ORDER TO OBTAIN BENEFITS SIMULTANEOUSLY IN 2 OR MORE STATES

Refer to Title I.

3. DENIAL OF SSI BENEFITS FOR FUGITIVE FELONS AND PROBATION AND PAROLE VIOLATIONS

Refer to Title I.

CHAPTER 2—BENEFITS FOR DISABLED CHILDREN

1. DEFINITION AND ELIGIBILITY RULES

A. DEFINITION OF CHILDHOOD DISABILITY

COMPARABLE SEVERITY REPEALED

Present law

A needy individual under age 18 is determined eligible for SSI "if he suffers from any medically determinable physical or mental impairment of comparable severity" with that of an adult considered work disabled and otherwise eligible for SSI benefits.

House bill

The "comparable severity" test in statute for determining disability of children (defined as individuals under 18) is repealed.

Senate amendment

Similar to the House bill.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

DISABILITY DEFINITION

Present law

There is no definition of childhood disability in the statute. Under current disability evaluation procedures, to be found disabled, a child must have a medically determinable physical or mental impairment that substantially reduces his or her ability to independently and effectively engage in age-appropriate activities. This impairment must be expected to result in death or to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 months.

House bill

Eligibility, as determined by the Commissioner of Social Security, for cash benefits or new medical or non-medical services described below will be based solely on: (1) meeting the non-disability-related requirement for eligibility; (2) meeting or equalling the current Listing of Impairments set forth in the Code of Federal Regulations (i.e., the Listing which is currently in regulations is to be codified in statute); and (3) being a disabled SSI recipient in the month prior to this provision's effective date or being in a hospital, skilled nursing facility, residential treatment facility, intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded, or otherwise would be placed in such a facility if the child were not receiving personal assistance necessitated by the impairment. Personal assistance refers to assistance with activities of daily living such as eating and toileting.

Senate amendment

Adds a new statutory definition of childhood disability. An individual under the age of 18 is considered disabled for the purposes of this section if the individual has a medically determinable physical or mental impairment, which results in marked and severe functional limitations, and which can be expected to result in death or which has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 months.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with technical modification and provides that the Commissioner of Social Security shall submit for review to the committees of jurisdiction in the Congress any final regulation with supporting documentation pertaining to the eligibility of individuals under age 18 for SSI benefits at least 45 days before the effective date of such regulation.

By this definition, the conferees intend that only needy children with severe disabilities be eligible for children's SSI and that the Listing and other disability determination regulations as modified by the conference agreement properly reflect the severity of disability contemplated by the statutory definition. In those areas of the Listing that involve domains of functioning, the conferees expect no less than two marked limitations in no fewer than two domains or extreme limitations in at least one domain as the standard for qualification. The conferees are also aware that the Social Security Administration uses the term "severe" to often mean "other than minor" in an initial screening procedure for disability determination and in other places. The conferees, however, use the term "severe" in its common sense meaning.

The conferees do not intend to suggest by this definition of childhood disability that every child need be especially evaluated for functional limitations, or that this definition creates a supposition for any such examination. Under current procedures for writing individual listings, level of functioning is an explicit consideration in deciding which impairment, with what medical or other findings, are of sufficient severity to be included in the Listing. Nonetheless, the conferees do not intend to limit the use of functional assessments and functional information, if reflecting sufficient severity and are otherwise appropriate.

B. CHANGES TO CHILDHOOD SSI REGULATIONS

RELIANCE ON "LISTING OF IMPAIRMENTS"

Present law

Under the disability determination process for children, individuals whose impairments do not meet or equal the "Listing of Impairments" in Federal regulations are subject to an "Individualized Functional Assessment (IFA)". This assessment examines whether the child can engage in age-appropriate activities effectively. If the child cannot, he or she is determined disabled.

House bill

The Commissioner of Social Security must annually report to Congress on the Listings and recommend any needed revisions. Individualized functional assessments are no longer grounds for determination of disability.

Senate amendment

The Commissioner of Social Security shall discontinue the individualized functional assessment for children set forth in the Code of Federal Regulations.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The conferees agree that a significant amount of the growth of the children's SSI program resulted from regulations issued in 1991 by the Social Security Administration establishing the individualized functional assessment which liberalized program eligibility criteria beyond Congressional intent. Children with modest conditions or impairments were made eligible for SSI due to the individualized functional assessment, and therefore should not be eligible for SSI benefits.

MULTIPLE REFERENCES TO "MALADAPTIVE BEHAVIOR" ELIMINATED

Present law

Under the disability determination process for children, the Social Security Administration first determines if a child meets or equals the Listings of Impairments. Under the Listings that relate to mental disorders, maladaptive behavior may be scored twice, in domains of social functioning and of personal/behavior functioning.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the Commissioner of Social Security to eliminate references in the Listing to maladaptive behavior among medical criteria for evaluation of mental and emotional disorders in the domain of personal/behavioral function.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

C. AMOUNT OF BENEFITS

Present law

A child who is determined to be disabled and who is eligible on the basis of his income and resources shall be paid benefits. If the child lives at home, the parents' financial resources are deemed available to the child. If the same child is institutionalized, after the first month away from home only the child's own financial resources are deemed to be available for the child's care. The child may then qualify for a reduced ("personal needs allowance") SSI benefit and for Medicaid coverage. Because of these "deeming" rules, some children who could have been cared for at home might remain in institutions because, if they were to return home, they would lose Medicaid benefits. Medicaid "waivers" allow States to disregard the deeming rule, provide Medicaid coverage, and pay for support services to help families keep children at home.

House bill

Children may be eligible for cash SSI payments in one of three circumstances:

(1) if a child who is currently (defined as during the month prior to the first month for which this provision takes effect) receiving cash SSI payments by reason of disability will continue to be eligible for cash SSI benefits if the child has an impairment that meets or equals an impairment specified in the Listing of Impairments. Children receiving cash benefits under the grandfather provision whose financial eligibility is suspended would continue to receive cash benefits if financial eligibility is restored;

(2) for all other children, a child may only receive cash SSI payments if the child has an impairment which meets or equals an impairment specified in the Listings of Impairments cited above, and is either in a hospital, skilled nursing facility, residential treatment facility, intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded, or otherwise would be placed in such a facility if the child were not receiving personal assistance necessitated by the impairment. Personal assistance refers to assistance with activities of daily living such as eating and toileting; and

(3) if a child who is overseas as a dependent of a member of the U.S. Armed Forces and who is eligible for block grant services but not eligible for cash benefits under the new criteria shall be eligible for cash benefits. Cash benefits cease when the child returns to the United States.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows a modified version of the House bill. Once an eligible child is determined to meet the definition of disability, the amount of the individual's cash benefit will be based on whether the child meets the newly developed criteria for needing personal assistance enabling the child to remain with their family at home. This criteria is as follows:

For a child under age 6—such individual has a medical impairment that severely limits the individual's ability to function in a manner appropriate to individuals of the same age and who without special personal assistance would require specialized care outside the individual's home; or

For a child age 6 or over—such individual requires personal care assistance with: (a) at least two activities of daily living, (b) continual 24-hour supervision or monitoring to avoid causing injury or harm to self or others, or (c) the administration of medical treatment; and who without such assistance would require full-time or part-time specialized care outside the individual's home.

The conferees have provided a different definition of the eligibility for children under age 6 and over age 6 because of the differing expectations of age appropriate behavior for children above and below this age. As described below, the conferees have requested the Commissioner of Social Security to undertake a study on ways to improve these definitions and the disability determination process.

Children with disabilities meeting this criteria will receive 100 percent of the benefit amount provided by current law. Disabled children who do not meet this criteria will receive seventy-five percent of the benefit amount provided by current law. The conferees note that the SSI benefit under either tier is very generous. In 1995, the average SSI benefit for a child recipient is $5,040. Seventy-five percent of that benefit would be $3,780. Both the maximum children's SSI benefit or seventy-five percent of the maximum benefit is greater than the maximum 1995 AFDC benefit for a family of three in many States.

The conferees acknowledge that many families of disabled children incur expenses beyond those by families of nondisabled children. However, the conferees agree that the extra expenses related to a child's disability vary widely depending on the nature and degree of disability and the availability of Federal, State, and local health care and/or disability programs. In order to reduce the inequity of the current system which provides one benefit level to all families without regard to additional disability-related financial needs, the conferees agree to establish a two-tiered benefit system. The higher tier is intended for families of children with the most severe disabilities who require full or part-time personal assistance which would prevent a parent from working full-time or which would require the presence of a personal assistance provider.

The conferees also believe that Congress should investigate whether the unmet needs of families of disabled children could be better and more efficiently met through services, such as mental health treatment or purchase of items of assistive technology, rather than cash payments. In the twenty three years since the SSI program was created, substantial new Federal programs have been authorized to assist children with disabilities, including Federal, State and local funding of special education and expansion of Medicaid. The impact of these programs on cash needs of children with disabilities merits further investigation by Congress. In order to have better data on the cost incurred by a family with a disabled child, the conferees request that the General Accounting Office undertake a study of the extra expenses incurred by such families with a child receiving SSI benefits, including what expenses are covered by other benefits such children receive through Federal, State, and local programs, and the lost income to families because of care they provide their child.

Lastly, the conferees remain concerned about the adequacy of the Listing of Impairments. The conferees strongly urge the Social Security Administration to contract with the National Academy of Sciences, or another independent entity, to conduct a study aimed at improving both the process of disability determination and the validity of the Listing of Impairments in light of current scientific knowledge.

D. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Changes apply to benefits for months beginning ninety or more days after enactment, without regard to whether regulations have been issued. Recipients of SSI cash benefits during the month of enactment who would lose eligibility under the House bill may continue to receive SSI benefits for up to 6 months.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment changes apply to applicants for months beginning on or after the date of enactment, without regard to whether regulations have been issued. However, the Commissioner must issue necessary regulations within two months of enactment. For child SSI recipients who were eligible for SSI on the date of enactment but who would lose eligibility under the Senate amendment, the changes would not take effect until January 1, 1997. The Commissioner is to redetermine the eligibility of these persons within one year of enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with modification that the effective date for the two-tiered benefit system is January 1, 1997, for current recipients and new applications. The conferees agreed to require the Commissioner to report to Congress within 180 days regarding the progress made in implementing the SSI children's provisions, however this provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

NOTICE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Not later than one month after the date of enactment, the Commissioner must notify individuals whose eligibility for SSI benefits will terminate.

Senate amendment

Within three months of enactment, the Commissioner must notify individuals whose eligibility for SSI benefits will terminate.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

NEW PROVISION FOR ADMINISTRATIVE FUNDS FOR THE SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conferees recognize that implementation of the SSI provisions by the Social Security Administration is a big job and have provided $300 million to assist the agency meeting their obligations. The conferees are very mindful of the problems encountered by the Social Security Administration in the early 1980s in conducting a large number of redeterminations and continuing disability reviews, and strongly urge the Commissioner to conduct the redeterminations and continuing disability reviews required in this bill in an orderly and careful manner.

BLOCK GRANTS TO STATES FOR CHILDREN WITH DISABILITIES

ENTITLEMENT TO GRANTS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Each State that meets the requirements listed below for fiscal year 1997 or later years shall be entitled to receive a grant equal to the State's allotment for that fiscal year. The Commissioner of Social Security will make block grants to States for the purpose of providing specified medical and non-medical benefits for children who have an impairment which meets or equals an impairment specified in the Listing of Impairments. Grants are an entitlement to eligible States on behalf of qualifying children, not an entitlement to any such child.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

REQUIREMENTS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Each State must establish a program to provide block grant services. The State will submit to the Commissioner an application for the grant. In the application, the State agrees it must spend grant funds to provide authorized services designed to meet the unique needs of qualifying children. The application must also contain information, agreements, and assurances required by the Commissioner. In providing authorized services, States will make every reasonable effort to obtain payment for the services from other Federal or State programs that provide such services. States will expend the grant only to the extent that payments from other programs are not available.

In order to receive a block grant under this section, the State must agree to maintain non-Federal spending for any purposes designed to meet the needs of qualifying children with physical or mental impairments. States have discretion to select the purposes for which the State expends non-Federal amounts, within the purposes of providing for the needs of qualifying children. The Consumer Price Index will be used to adjust for inflation in judging whether the State meets the maintenance of effort requirements in future years.

No child who has an impairment which meets or equals an impairment specified in the Listing of Impairments will be denied the opportunity to apply for services and to have his or her case assessed to determine the child's service needs.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

AUTHORITY OF STATE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

The following decisions are in the discretion of a State:

(1) which authorized services to provide;

(2) who among qualifying children receives services; and

(3) the number of services provided a qualifying child and their duration.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

AUTHORIZED SERVICES

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

The Commissioner shall issue regulations designating the purposes for which grants may be spent by States. The Commissioner must ensure that services on the list are designed to meet the unique needs of qualifying children that arise from their physical and mental impairments, that both medical and non-medical services are included, and that cash assistance is not available through the block grant.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Necessary regulations are to be issued, but payments under the block grant must begin not later than January 1, 1997, regardless of whether final rules have been issued.

The value of the authorized services provided through the block grant cannot be taken into account in determining eligibility for, or the amount of, benefits or services under any Federal or Federally-assisted program. For the purposes of Medicaid, each qualifying child shall be considered to be a recipient of Supplemental Security Income benefits under this title.

States are encouraged to use an existing delivery system to administer block grant services.

States that do not participate in offering block grant services are not permitted to use social security numbers in the administration of any tax, public assistance, driver's license or motor vehicle registration law. (Because of the extreme duress this would impose on States, this is regarded as effectively a "requirement.")

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

DEFINITIONS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

A State's "Allotment" of block grant funds equals the product of 75 percent of the average cash SSI benefit in the State and the number of children in the State receiving non-cash SSI benefits under this section.

"Authorized Service" means each service authorized by the Commissioner.

A "Qualifying Child" means an individual under 18 years of age who is eligible for cash benefits under this title by reason of disability; or an individual under 18 years of age who is eligible for SSI non-cash benefits as described above. The Commissioner will determine whether individuals meet the criteria to be eligible for block grant services.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Block grants are available to eligible States beginning in fiscal year 1997.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

2. ELIGIBILITY REDETERMINATIONS AND CONTINUING DISABILITY REVIEWS

A. CONTINUING DISABILITY REVIEWS FOR CERTAIN CHILDREN

Present law

Federal law requires that SSI recipients be subject to a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at least once every 3 years, except for recipients whose impairments are judged to be permanent. The Commissioner is required to conduct periodic CDRs of at least 100,000 disabled SSI recipients per year for a period of 3 years (i.e., fiscal year 1996–1998) and report to Congress on CDRs for disabled SSI recipients no later than October 1, 1998.

House bill

In addition to the provisions of current law, at least once every 3 years the Commissioner must conduct CDRs for SSI benefits of children receiving benefits. For children who are eligible for benefits and whose medical condition is not expected to improve, the requirement to perform such reviews does not apply.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, with minor differences in wording. At the time of review the parent or guardian must present evidence demonstrating that the recipient is and has been receiving appropriate treatment for his or her disability.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment with modification requiring evidence of needed treatment for continued representative payee status.

B. DISABILITY REVIEW REQUIRED FOR SSI RECIPIENTS WHO ATTAIN 18 YEARS OF AGE

Present law

Current law also specifies that the Commissioner must reevaluate under adult disability criteria the eligibility of at least one-third of SSI children who turn age 18 in each of the fiscal years 1996, 1997, and 1998 (the CDR must be completed before these children reach age 19) and report to Congress no later than October 1, 1998, on CDRs for disabled children.

House bill

The eligibility for all children qualifying for SSI benefits must be redetermined using the adult criteria within one year after turning 18 years of age. The review will be considered a substitute for any other review required under the changes made in this section.

Not later than October 1, 1998, the Commissioner of Social Security must submit to the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance a report on disability reviews for children enrolled in SSI.

The "minimum number of reviews" and the "sunset" provisions of section 207 of the Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994 are eliminated.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill with differences in wording. Like the House bill, the Senate amendment repeals section 207 of the Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill with modification that the Commissioner does not have to submit a report to Congress on disability reviews for SSI children.

C. DISABILITY REVIEW REQUIRED FOR LOW BIRTH WEIGHT BABIES WHO HAVE RECEIVED SSI BENEFITS FOR 12 MONTHS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

A review for continuing disability must be performed for all children qualifying for SSI due to low birth weight when the child has received benefits for 12 months.

Senate amendment

A review must be conducted 12 months after the birth of a child whose low birth weight is a contributing factor to the child's disability. At the time of review, the parent or guardian must present evidence demonstrating that the recipient is and has been receiving appropriate treatment for his or her disability.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with modification requiring evidence of needed treatment for continued representative payee status.

D. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

This section applies to benefits for months beginning ninety or more days after enactment, regardless of whether regulations have been issued.

Senate amendment

Applies to benefits for months beginning on or after the date of enactment, regardless of whether regulations have been issued.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

3. ADDITIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY REQUIREMENTS

A. DISPOSAL OF ASSETS

Present law

No provision. There is a transfer of assets provision in Medicaid law that is similar to H.R. 4 provision (Sec. 1917(c) of the Social Security Act).

House bill

The House bill delays eligibility for any child applicant whose parents or guardians, in order to qualify a child for benefits, dispose of assets for less than fair market value within 36 months of the date of application. The provision stipulates that any assets in a trust in which the child (i.e., parent or representative payee) has control shall be considered assets of the child and subject to the 36-month "look-back" rule. The delay (in months) is equal to the amount of assets divided by the SSI standard benefit.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with technical modifications.

REQUIREMENT TO ESTABLISH ACCOUNT

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

At the request of the representative payee (i.e., the parent), the Commissioner of Social Security may pay any lump sum payment for the benefit of a child into a dedicated savings account for the purpose of covering the costs of needs related to the child's disability and/or increasing the child's independence. The dedicated savings account could only be used to purchase education and job skills training, special equipment or housing modifications related to the child's disability, and appropriate therapy and rehabilitation. The funds in these accounts would not be counted as resources in determining SSI eligibility. This provision would take effect upon enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment with modification requiring the dedicated savings account (instead of it being optional at the request of the representative payee), expanding the list of allowable expenses, and requiring the Commissioner to establish a system for accountability monitoring.

CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

The House bill makes a number of conforming amendments, reflecting the addition of non-cash SSI benefits as described above.

IMPROVEMENTS TO DISABILITY EVALUATIONS FOR CHILDREN

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment directs the Commissioner of Social Security, within sixty days of enactment, to issue a request for comments in the Federal Register regarding improvements in the disability evaluation and determination procedures for children under age 18. The Commissioner must review the comments and issue regulations implementing changes within 18 months after enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill (i.e., no provision).

TEMPORARY ELIGIBILITY FOR CASH BENEFITS FOR POOR DISABLED CHILDREN RESIDING IN STATES APPLYING ALTERNATIVE INCOME ELIGIBILITY STANDARDS UNDER MEDICAID

Present law

States generally are required to provide Medicaid coverage for recipients of SSI. However, States may use more restrictive eligibility standards for Medicaid than those for SSI if they were using those standards on January 1, 1972 (before implementation of SSI). States that have chosen to apply at least one more restrictive standard are known as "section 209(b)" States, after the section of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 (P.L. 92–603) that established the option. These States may vary in their definition of disability, or in their standards related to income or resources. There are 12 section 209(b) States: Connecticut, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, and Virginia.

House bill

The House bill provides for temporary eligibility for cash SSI benefits (through the end of fiscal year 1996) for children who live in States that apply alternative income eligibility standards under Medicaid (also known as "209(b)" States).

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision).

4. REDUCTION OF CASH BENEFITS PAYABLE TO INSTITUTIONALIZED CHILDREN WHOSE MEDICAL COSTS ARE COVERED BY PRIVATE INSURANCE

Present law

Federal law stipulates that when an individual enters a hospital or other medical institution in which more than half of the bill is paid by the Medicaid program, his or her monthly SSI benefit standard is reduced to $30 per month. This personal needs allowance is intended to pay for small personal expenses, with the cost of maintenance and medical care provided by the Medicaid program.

House bill

Cash SSI payments to institutionalized children would be reduced for those whose medical costs are covered by private insurance.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

ADDITIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY REQUIREMENTS FOR PARENTS OR GUARDIANS

Present law

House bill

The Commissioner of Social Security and the Secretary of HHS will prescribe necessary regulations within three months after enactment of this Act.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

EXAMINATION OF MENTAL LISTINGS USED TO DETERMINE ELIGIBILITY OF CHILDREN FOR SSI BENEFITS BY REASON OF DISABILITY

Present law

Section 202 of the Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994 established a Childhood Disability Commission to study the desirability and methods of increasing the extent to which benefits are used in the effort to assist disabled children in achieving independence and engaging in substantial gainful activity. The Commission was also charged with examining the effects of the SSI program on disabled children and their families.

House bill

The Childhood Disability Commission must review the mental listings used by the Social Security Administration to determine child SSI eligibility. The Commission should conduct this investigation to ensure that the criteria in these listings are appropriate and that SSI eligibility is limited to children with serious disabilities for whom Federal assistance is necessary to improve the child's condition or quality of life.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment (i.e., no provision) due to the Childhood Disability Commission having completed their final report.

LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS TO PUERTO RICO, THE U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS AND GUAM UNDER PROGRAMS OF AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, OR DISABLED

Refer to Title I.

REPEAL OF MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT REQUIREMENT APPLICABLE TO OPTIONAL STATE PROGRAMS FOR SUPPLEMENTATION OF SSI BENEFITS

Present law

Since the beginning of the SSI program, States have had the option to supplement (with State funds) the Federal SSI payment. The purpose of section 1618 was to encourage States to pass along to SSI recipients the amount of any Federal SSI benefit increase. Under section 1618, a State that is found to be not in compliance with the "pass along/maintenance of effort provision" is subject to loss of its Medicaid reimbursements. Section 1618 allows States to comply with the "pass along/ maintenance of effort" provision by either maintaining their State supplementary payment levels at or above 1983 levels or by maintaining total annual expenditures for supplementary payments (including any Federal cost-of-living adjustment) at a level at least equal to the prior 12-month period, provided the State was in compliance for that period. In effect, section 1618 requires that once a State elects to provide supplementary payments it must continue to do so. [Sec. 1618 of the Social Security Act]

House bill

The House bill repeals the maintenance of effort requirements (Sec. 1618) applicable to optional State programs for supplementation of SSI benefits effective date of enactment.

Senate amendment

The study must examine the validity, reliability and consistency with current scientific standards of the Listings of Impairments cited above.

The study must also examine the appropriateness of the definitions of disability (and possible alternatives) used in connection with SSI and SSDI; and the operation of the disability determination process, including the appropriate method of performing comprehensive assessments of individuals under age 18 with physical or mental impairments.

The Commissioner must issue interim and final reports of the findings and recommendations of the study within 18 months and 24 months, respectively, from the date of contract for the study.

CHAPTER 6—RETIREMENT AGE ELIGIBILITY

13. ELIGIBILITY FOR SSI BENEFITS BASED ON SOCIAL SECURITY RETIREMENT AGE

Present law

The SSI program guarantees a minimum level of cash income to all aged, blind, or disabled persons with limited resources. The SSI program defines "aged" as persons age 65 and older.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment deletes references to age 65 and instead defines as "aged" those persons who reach "retirement age" as defined by the Social Security program. The Social Security "retirement age"—the age at which retired workers receive benefits that are not reduced for "early retirement"—gradually will rise from 65 to 67. It will do so in two steps. First, the retirement age will increase by 2 months for each year that a person was born after 1937, until it reaches age 66 for those born in 1943 (i.e., those who attain age 66 in 2009). Second, it will again increase by 2 months for each year that a person was born after 1954 until it reaches age 67 for those born after 1959.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

SUBTITLE C—CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

CHAPTER 1—ELIGIBILITY FOR SERVICES; DISTRIBUTION OF PAYMENTS

1. REFERENCES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Any reference in this title expressed in terms of an amendment to or repeal of a section or other provision is made to the Social Security Act.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

2. STATE OBLIGATION TO PROVIDE CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT SERVICES

Present law

States are required to establish paternity for children born out of wedlock if they are recipients of AFDC or Medicaid, and to obtain child and spousal support payments from noncustodial parents of children receiving AFDC, Medicaid benefits, or foster care maintenance payments. States must provide child support collection or paternity determination services to persons not otherwise eligible if the person applies for services. Federal law requires States to cooperate with other States in establishing paternity (if necessary), locating absent parents, collecting child support payments, and carrying out other child support enforcement functions.

House bill

States must provide services, including paternity establishment and establishment, modification, or enforcement of support obligations, for children receiving benefits under part A (Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant-TANF), part B (child protection block grant), Medicaid, and any child of an individual who applies for services. States must enforce support obligations with respect to children in their caseload and the custodial parents of such children. States must also make child support enforcement services available to nonresidents on the same terms as to residents. The provision also makes minor technical amendments to SSA section 454.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision with one exception: instead of reference to part B as in House bill, reference is to part E-foster care and adoption assistance.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment except the House recedes by agreeing States be required to provide child support services only to children actually receiving foster care payments.

3. DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD SUPPORT COLLECTIONS

A. DISTRIBUTION OF COLLECTED SUPPORT

Present law

To receive AFDC benefits, a custodial parent must assign to the State her right to collect child support payments. This assignment covers current support and any arrearages, and lasts as long as the family receives AFDC. Federal law requires that child support collections be distributed as follows: First, up to the first $50 in current support is paid to the AFDC family (a "disregard" that does not affect the family's AFDC benefit or eligibility status). Second, the Federal and State governments are reimbursed for the AFDC benefit paid to the family in that month. Third, if there is money left, the family receives it up to the amount of the current month's child support obligation. Fourth, if there is still money left, the State keeps it to reimburse itself for any arrearages owed to it under the AFDC assignment (with appropriate reimbursement of the Federal share of the collection to the Federal government). If no arrearages are owed the State, the money is used to pay arrearages to the family; such moneys are considered income under the AFDC program and would reduce the family's AFDC benefit.

House bill

To receive funds from the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) block grant, a custodial parents must assign to the State their right to child support payments. (p. 39) The bill ends the $50 child support disregard to (TANF) families. Families receiving cash assistance—States are given the option of passing the entire child support payment through to families. If States elect this option, they must pay the Federal share of the collection to the Federal government. Families that formerly received cash assistance—Current child support payments go to the family. Payments on arrearages that accrued before or after the custodial parent received cash assistance are paid to the family first if the family leaves welfare. Only after all arrearages owed to the custodial parent and children have been repaid are arrearages owed to the State and Federal government repaid. Payments on arrearages that accrued while the family received assistance must be retained by the State. The State is required to keep the State share of the collected amount, and pay to the Federal government the Federal share of the amount collected (to the extent necessary to reimburse amounts paid to the family as cash assistance). As a general rule, States must pay to the Federal government the Federal share of child support collections for parents on the Temporary Family Assistance program. This share is calculated using the State's Medicaid match rate in effect in 1995 or in subsequent years, whichever is greater. Families that never received cash assistance—All child support payments go directly to the family.

Senate amendment

Any rights to child support that were assigned to the State before the effective date of the amendment are to remain so assigned. Gives States the option of requiring TANF applicants and recipients to assign to the State their rights to child support payments. The amendment eliminates references (in both the TANF block grant title of the amendment and the CSE title) to the $50 child support disregard, but does not explicitly eliminate the $50 child support disregard. Families receiving cash assistance—States are given the option of passing the entire child support payment through to families. If States elect this option, they must pay the Federal share of the collection to the Federal government. Families that formerly received cash assistance—Current child support payments go to the family. Payments on arrearages that accrued after the custodial parent left welfare are paid to the family. With respect to payments on arrearages that accrued before or while the family received assistance, the State may retain all or part of the State share, and if the State does so, it must retain and pay to the Federal Government the Federal share (to the extent the amount retained does not exceed the cash assistance paid to the family). The Federal share is calculated using the State's Medicaid match rate in effect in 1995 or in subsequent years, whichever is greater. Families that never received cash assistance—All child support payments go directly to the family. In addition, in the case of a family receiving cash assistance from an Indian tribe, the child support collection is to be distributed according to the agreement specified in the State plan.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement modifies the House bill and Senate amendment as follows: (1) the $50 passthrough is ended; (2) beginning October 1, 1997, arrearages that accumulate during the period after the family leaves welfare and that are paid through the tax intercept are paid to the State; payments made by any other method are paid to the family; and (3) beginning October 1, 2000, arrearages that accumulated during the period before the mother went on welfare and that are paid through the tax intercept are paid to the State; arrearage payments made by any other method are paid to the family. Conferees also agree that if the amount of pre-welfare arrearages paid to the family exceeds the amount saved by a given State by ending the $50 passthrough and by other methods of improving collections contained in this legislation, the Federal government will pay that State an amount equal to the difference between pre-welfare arrearage payments to the family and State savings caused by this legislation. Finally, child support assignment rules are modified to conform to the changes described above in distribution rules.

B. CONTINUATION OF SERVICES FOR FAMILIES CEASING TO RECEIVE ASSISTANCE

Present law

Federal law requires States to continue providing child support enforcement services to AFDC, Medicaid, and foster care families who no longer qualify for AFDC benefits on the same basis as in the case of those who receive benefits or services, except that no application or request for services is required.

House bill

When families leave the TANF program, States are required to continue providing child support enforcement services to them subject to the same conditions and on the same basis as in the case of individuals who receive assistance.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

C. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The effective date for provisions relating to distribution of support collected for families who formerly received cash assistance is October 1, 1995. For all others it is October 1, 1999.

The effective date for the clerical amendments and provisions relating to the distribution of child support collected for families who formerly received cash assistance or who never received cash assistance is October 1, 1995.

Conference agreement

4. PRIVACY SAFEGUARDS

Present law

Federal law limits the use or disclosure of information concerning recipients of Child Support Enforcement Services to purposes connected with administering specified Federal welfare programs.

House bill

States must implement safeguards against unauthorized use or disclosure of information related to proceedings or actions to establish paternity or to enforce child support. These safeguards must include prohibitions on release of information where there is a protective order or where the State has reason to believe a party is at risk of physical or emotional harm from the other party. This provision is effective October 1, 1997.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference Agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

5. RIGHTS TO NOTIFICATION AND HEARING

Present law

Most States have procedural due process requirements with respect to wage withholding. Federal law requires States to carry out withholding in full compliance with all procedural due process requirements of the State.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Parties to child support cases under Title IV–D must receive notice of proceedings in which child support is established or modified and must receive a copy of orders establishing or modifying child support within 14 days of issuance. Individuals served by the child support program must also have access to a fair hearing or other complaint procedures. These rules and procedures become effective on October 1, 1997.

7. COLLECTION AND DISBURSEMENT OF SUPPORT PAYMENTS

A. STATE DISBURSEMENT UNIT

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment with the clarification that States that already have new hire reporting laws may continue to follow the provisions of their own law until October 1, 1996, at which time States must conform to Federal law.

C. EMPLOYER INFORMATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Employers must furnish to the State Directory of New Hires the name, address, and Social Security number of every new employee and the name and identification number of the employer. Multistate employers may report to the State in which they have the most employees.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, but allows multistate employers to report to the State they designate. The employer must notify the DHHS Secretary as to the name of the designated State.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment except that the House recedes to the Senate provision allowing multistate employers to report to the State of their choice. Employers must notify the Secretary of the name of the designated State.

D. TIMING OF REPORT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Employers must report new hire information within 15 days of the hire or on the date the employee first receives wages.

Senate amendment

Employers must report new hire information within 30 days of the hire or if the employer reports by magnetic or electronic means, the employer can report by the first business day of the week following the date on which the employee first receives wages.

Conference agreement

Conferees agree on two general rules for timing of new hire reports. First, except as noted below, employers must report new hire information within 20 days of the date of hire.

E. REPORTING FORMAT AND METHOD

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The report required in this section will be made on a W–4 form or the equivalent, and can be transmitted magnetically, electronically, or by first class mail.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, but only allows the report to be filed on a W–4 form, not the equivalent.

Conference agreement

The conferees agreed to follow both the House and Senate provisions except that the Senate would recede to the House provision allowing employers, at their option, to use an equivalent form. The decision of which reporting method to use is entirely up to employers.

F. CIVIL MONEY PENALTIES ON NONCOMPLYING EMPLOYERS

Present law

In general, no provision.

Section 1128 of the Social Security Act is an antifraud provision which excludes individuals and entities that have committed fraud from participation in Medicare and State health care programs. Section 1128A pertains to civil monetary penalties and describes the appropriate procedures and proceedings for such penalties.

House bill

An employer failing to make a timely report is subject to a $25 fine for each unreported employee. There is also a $500 penalty on employers for every employee for whom they do not transmit a W–4 form if, under the laws of the State, there is shown to be a conspiracy between the employer and the employee to prevent the proper information from being filed.

The House bill makes several but not all provisions of section 1128 applicable to employers that violate reporting requirements.

Senate amendment

States have the option of setting a civil money penalty which shall be not less than $25 or $500 if, under State law, the failure is the result of a conspiracy between the employer and employee. The Senate amendment does not make any provisions of section 1128 applicable to employers.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both the House and Senate provisions except that the House recedes to the Senate provision of making the penalties a State option.

G. ENTRY OF NEW HIRE INFORMATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

New hire information must be entered into the State data base within 5 business days of receipt from employer.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate requirement of requiring States to enter New Hire information in their data base within 5 business days.

H. INFORMATION COMPARISONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

By October 1, 1997, each State Directory of New Hires must conduct automated matches of the Social Security numbers of reported employees against the Social Security numbers of records in the State Case Registry being enforced by the State agency and report the name, Social Security number, and employer identification number on matches to the State child support agency.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires comparisons to begin by October 1, 1998 rather than 1997.

Conference agreement

Conferees agreed to follow the House and Senate provisions but to compromise on the date by which comparisons must begin by adopting a May 1, 1998 effective date.

I. TRANSMISSION OF INFORMATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Within two business days of the entry of data in the registry, the State must transmit a withholding order directing the employer to withhold wages in accord with the child support order. Within four days, the State Directory of New Hires must furnish employee information to the National Directory of New Hires for matching with the records of other State case registries. The State Directory of New Hires must also report quarterly to the National Directory of New Hires information on wages and unemployment compensation taken from the quarterly report to the Secretary of Labor now required by Title III of the Social Security Act.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires State Directory to report to the National Directory within two, rather than four, days.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement is to follow the House and Senate provisions and to compromise on the reporting date by allowing States three days to report to the National Directory of New Hires.

J. OTHER USES OF NEW HIRE INFORMATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The State child support agency must use the new hire information for purposes of establishing paternity as well as establishing, modifying, and enforcing child support obligations. New hire information (pursuant to section 1137 of the Social Security Act) must also be disclosed to the State agency administering the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, Medicaid, Unemployment Compensation, Food Stamp, SSI, and territorial cash assistance programs for income eligibility verification, and to State agencies administering unemployment and workers' compensation programs to assist determinations of the allowability of claims.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires State and local government agencies to be included in quarterly wage reporting unless the agency performs intelligence or counterintelligence functions and it is determined that wage reporting could endanger the safety of the employee or compromise the investigation or intelligence mission.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House and Senate provisions except that the House recedes to the Senate provision allowing State and local government agencies to exempt employees doing intelligence or counterintelligence work whose safety might be compromised by the reporting.

9. AMENDMENTS CONCERNING INCOME WITHHOLDING

Present law

Since November 1, 1990, all new or modified child support orders that were being enforced by the State's child support enforcement agency have been subject to immediate income withholding. If the noncustodial parent's wages are not subject to income withholding (pursuant to the November 1, 1990 provision), such parent's wages would become subject to withholding on the date when support payments are 30 days past due. Since January 1, 1994, the law has required States to use immediate income withholding for all new support orders, regardless of whether a parent has applied for child support enforcement services. There are two circumstances in which income withholding does not apply: 1) one of the parents demonstrates and the court or administrative agency finds that there is good cause not to do so, or 2) a written agreement is reached between both parents which provides for an alternative arrangement. States must implement procedures under which income withholding for child support can occur without the need for any amendment to the support order or for any further action by the court or administrative entity that issued the order. States are also required to implement income withholding in full compliance with all procedural due process requirements of the State, and States must send advance notice to each nonresident parent to whom income withholding applies (with an exception for some States that had income withholding before enactment of this provision that met State due process requirements). States must extend their income withholding systems to include out-of–State support orders.

House bill

States must have laws providing that all child support orders issued or modified before October 1, 1996, which are not otherwise subject to income withholding, will become subject to income withholding immediately if arrearages occur, without the need for judicial or administrative hearing. State law must also allow the child support agency to execute a withholding order through electronic means and without advance notice to the obligor. Employers must remit to the State disbursement unit income withheld within 2 working days after the date such amount would have been paid or credited to the employee.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, but requires all child support orders which are not part of the State IV–D program to be processed through the State disbursement unit. In addition, States must notify noncustodial parents that income withholding has commenced and inform them of procedures for contesting income withholding.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House and Senate provisions except that the House recedes to the Senate provision requiring all child support orders which are not part of the State IV–D program to be processed through the State disbursement unit. In addition, States must notify noncustodial parents that income withholding has commenced and inform them of procedures for contesting income withholding.

10. LOCATOR INFORMATION FROM INTERSTATE NETWORKS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

All State and the Federal Child Support Enforcement agencies must have access to the motor vehicle and law enforcement locator systems of all States.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

11. EXPANSION OF THE FEDERAL PARENT LOCATOR SERVICE

A. EXPANDED AUTHORITY TO LOCATE INDIVIDUALS AND ASSETS

Present law

The law requires that the Federal Parent Locator Service (FPLS) be used to obtain and transmit information about the location of any absent parent when that information is to be used for the purpose of enforcing child support.

House bill

The purposes of the Federal Parent Locator Service are expanded. For the purposes of establishing parentage, establishing support orders or modifying them, or enforcing support orders, the Federal Parent Locator Service will provide information to locate individuals who owe child support or against whom an obligation is sought or to whom such an obligation is owed. Information in the FPLS includes Social Security number, address, name and address of employer, and wages and employee benefits (including information about health care coverage).

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except clarifies current law by stating that information from the Federal Parent Locator Service can be used to enforce visitation orders. Senate also allows FPLS to contain and provide information on assets and debts.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement is similar to both the House bill and the Senate amendment. The agreement clarifies the statute so that nonresident parents are given access to information from the FPLS if these requests are made through a court or through the State child support agency.

B. REIMBURSEMENTS

Present law

Federal law requires that any department or agency of the United States must be reimbursed for costs incurred for providing requested information to the FPLS.

House bill

The Secretary is authorized to set reasonable rates for reimbursing Federal and State agencies for the costs of providing information to the FPLS and to set reimbursement rates that State and Federal agencies that use information from the FPLS must pay to the Secretary.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

C. NEW COMPONENTS OF FPLS

(1) FEDERAL CASE REGISTRY OF CHILD SUPPORT ORDERS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The House bill establishes within the FPLS an automated registry known as the Federal Case Registry of Child Support Orders. The Federal Case Registry contains abstracts of child support orders and other information specified by the Secretary (such as names, Social Security numbers or other uniform identification numbers, State case identification numbers, wages or other income, and rights to health care coverage) to identify individuals who owe or are owed support (or for or against whom support is sought to be established), and the State which has the case. States must begin reporting this information in accord with regulations issued by the Secretary, by October 1, 1998.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

(2) NATIONAL DIRECTORY OF NEW HIRES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The House bill establishes within the FPLS a National Directory of New Hires containing information supplied by State Directories of New Hires, beginning October 1, 1996. When fully implemented, the Federal Directory of New Hires will contain identifying information on virtually every person who is hired in the United States. In addition, the FPLS will contain quarterly data supplied by the State Directory of New Hires on wages and Unemployment Compensation paid. The Secretary of the Treasury must have access to information in the Federal Directory of New Hires for the purpose of administering section 32 of the Internal Revenue Code and the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Senate amendment

The Senate provision is similar to the House provision with two exceptions: 1) the Senate amendment includes the requirement that the information for the National Directory of New Hires must be entered within 2 days of receipt; and 2) the Senate amendment requires the DHHS Secretary to maintain within the National Directory of New Hires a list of multistate employers who choose a State to send their report to and the name of the State so designated.

Conference agreement

Conferees agree to follow both the House bill and Senate amendment except that the House recedes on the points of difference. Thus, the National Directory must enter new information within 2 days and the Secretary must maintain a list of the States to which multistate employers send their new hire information.

D. INFORMATION COMPARISONS AND OTHER DISCLOSURES

Present law

Upon request, the Secretary must provide to an "authorized person" (i.e., an employee or attorney of a child support agency, a court with jurisdiction over the parties involved, the custodial parent, legal guardian, or attorney of the child) the most recent address and place of employment of any absent parent if the information is contained in the records of the Department of Health and Human Services, or can be obtained from any other department or agency of the United States or of any State. The FPLS also can be used in connection with the enforcement or determination of child custody and in cases of parental kidnapping. Federal law requires the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health and Human Services to enter into an agreement to give the FPLS prompt access to wage and unemployment compensation claims information useful in locating a noncustodial parent or his employer.

House bill

The Secretary must verify the accuracy of the name, Social Security number, birth date, and employer identification number of individuals in the Federal Parent Locator Service with the Social Security Administration. The Secretary is required to match data in the National Directory of New Hires against the child support order abstracts in the Federal Case Registry at least every 2 working days and to report information obtained from matches to the State child support agency responsible for the case within 2 days. The information is to be used for purposes of locating individuals to establish paternity, and to establish, modify, or enforce child support orders. The Secretary may also compare information across all components of the FPLS to the extent and with the frequency that the Secretary determines will be effective. The Secretary will share information from the FPLS with several potential users including State agencies administering the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program, the Commissioner of Social Security (to determine the accuracy of Social Security and Supplemental Security Income), and researchers under some circumstances.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

E. FEES

Present law

"Authorized persons" who request information from FPLS must be charged a fee.

House bill

The Secretary must reimburse the Commissioner of Social Security for costs incurred in performing verification of Social Security information and to States for submitting information on New Hires. States or Federal agencies that use information from FPLS must pay fees established by the Secretary.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

F. RESTRICTION ON DISCLOSURE AND USE

Present law

Federal law stipulates that no information shall be disclosed if the disclosure would contravene the national policy or security interests of the United States or the confidentiality of Census data.

House bill

Information from the FPLS cannot be used for purposes other than those provided in this section, subject to section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

G. INFORMATION INTEGRITY AND SECURITY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary must establish and use safeguards to ensure the accuracy and completeness of information from the FPLS and restrict access to confidential information in the FPLS to authorized persons and purposes.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

H. QUARTERLY WAGE REPORTING

Present law

Requires the Secretary of Labor to provide prompt access for the DHHS Secretary to wage and unemployment compensation claims information and data maintained by the Labor Department or State employment security agencies.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Each department in U.S. shall submit name, Social Security number and wages paid the employee, on a quarterly basis to the FPLS. Quarterly wage reporting shall not be filed for a Federal or State employee performing intelligence or counter-intelligence functions, if it is determined that filing such a report could endanger the employee or compromise an ongoing investigation.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

I. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

This section makes several conforming amendments to Titles III and IV of the Social Security Act and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except amends section 303(h) to require State unemployment insurance agencies to report quarterly wage information to the Secretary of HHS or suffer financial penalties, while the House bill amends section 303(a) and simply requires quarterly reports to the Secretary of HHS.

Conference agreement

Conferees agreed to follow both the House and Senate provisions but to follow the Senate amendment by requiring State unemployment insurance agencies to file quarterly wage reports with the Secretary or pay penalties.

J. AUTHORIZED PERSON FOR INFORMATION REGARDING VISITATION RIGHTS

Present law

FPLS can also be used to provide information to authorized individuals and agencies making or entering a child custody order (see Sec. 463 of Social Security Act).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Expands functions of FPLS by requiring that information be made available to non-custodial parents for purposes of seeking or enforcing child visitation orders.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate amendment on this provision but with the agreement that nonresident parents cannot obtain information directly from the FPLS but must present their request through the courts or through the State child support agency. In addition, the agreement requires State child support agencies to treat requests for information from nonresident parents on the same basis and with the same priority as requests from resident parents.

12. COLLECTION AND USE OF SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS FOR USE IN CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

Present law

Federal law requires that in the administration of any law involving the issuance of a birth certificate, States must require each parent to furnish their Social Security number for the birth records. The State is required to make such numbers available to child support agencies in accordance with Federal or State law. States may not place Social Security numbers directly on birth certificates.

House bill

States must have laws requiring that Social Security numbers be placed on applications for professional licenses, commercial drivers licenses, and occupational licenses, marriage licenses, and in the records for divorce decrees, child support orders, and paternity determination or acknowledgment orders. Individuals who die will have their Social Security number placed in the records relating to the death and recorded on the death certificate. There are several conforming amendments.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except gives States the option of not including Social Security numbers on applications for licenses and bars the placement of Social Security numbers on marriage licenses.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment except that the House recedes to the Senate requirements that States have the option of not including Social Security numbers on applications and that States be barred from placing Social Security numbers on marriage licenses.

CHAPTER 3—STREAMLINING AND UNIFORMITY OF PROCEDURES

13. ADOPTION OF UNIFORM STATE LAWS

Present law

States have several options available for pursuing interstate child support cases including direct income withholding, interstate income withholding, and long-arm statutes which require the use of the court system in the State of the custodial parent. In addition, States use the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (URESA) and the Revised Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (RURESA) to conduct interstate cases. Moreover, Federal law imposes a Federal criminal penalty for the willful failure to pay past-due child support to a child who resides in a State other than the State of the obligor. In 1992, the National Conference of Commissioners on State Uniform Laws approved a new model State law for handling interstate CSE cases. The new Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) is designed to deal with desertion and nonsupport by instituting uniform laws in all 50 States that limit control of a child support case to a single State. This approach ensures that only one child support order from one court or child support agency will be in effect at any given time. It also helps to eliminate jurisdictional disputes between States that are impediments to locating parents and enforcing child support orders across State lines. As of March, 1995, 23 States had enacted UIFSA, 15 verbatim and 8 with minor changes.

House bill

By January 1, 1997, all States must have enacted the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) and have the procedures required for its implementation in effect. States are required to apply UIFSA to any case involving an order established or modified in one State that is sought to be modified in another State. States must also have a new provision on long-arm statutes and petitioning for modifications of orders, and are required to recognize as valid any method of service of process used in another State that is valid in that State.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except permits but does not require States to apply UIFSA to all interstate cases.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement is that States must adopt UIFSA by January 1, 1998. The House recedes to the Senate on when UIFSA is used.

14. IMPROVEMENTS TO FULL FAITH AND CREDIT FOR CHILD SUPPORT ORDERS

Present law

Federal law requires States to treat past-due support obligations as final judgments that are entitled to full faith and credit in every State. This means that a person who has a support order in one State does not have to obtain a second order in another State to obtain support due should the debtor parent move from the issuing court's jurisdiction. P.L. 103–383 restricts a State court's ability to modify a support order issued by another State unless the child and the custodial parent have moved to the State where the modification is sought or have agreed to the modification.

House bill

The provision clarifies the definition of a child's home State, makes several revisions to ensure that full faith and credit laws can be applied consistently with UIFSA, and clarifies the rules regarding which child support orders States must honor when there is more than one order.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both the House and Senate provisions but the House recedes on "more than 1 court".

15. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT IN INTERSTATE CASES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

States are required to have laws that permit them to send orders to and receive orders from other States without registering the underlying order unless the enforcement action is contested by the obligor on the grounds of mistake of fact or invalid order. The transmission of the order itself serves as certification to the responding State of the arrears amount and of the fact that the initiating State met all procedural due process requirements. No court action is required or permitted by the responding State. In addition, each responding State must, without requiring the case to be transferred to their State, match the case against its data bases, take appropriate action if a match occurs, and send the collections, if any, to the initiating State. States must keep records of the number of requests they receive, the number of cases that result in a collection, and the amount collected. States must respond to interstate requests within 5 days.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

16. USE OF FORMS IN INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary must issue forms that States must use for income withholding, for imposing liens, and for issuing administrative subpoenas in interstate cases. The forms must be issued by June 30, 1996 and States must be using the forms by October 1, 1996.

Senate amendment

Requires the DHHS Secretary to establish an advisory committee which must include State child support directors, and not later than June 30, 1996, after consultation with the advisory committee to issue forms that States must use for income withholding, for imposing liens, and for issuing administrative subpoenas in interstate cases. The forms must be issued by June 30, 1996 and States must be using the forms by October 1, 1996.

Conference agreement

Conferees agree to follow both the House and Senate provisions with a compromise on requiring the Secretary to consult with States. Rather than forming an advisory committee, the conference agreement requires the Secretary to consult with States before issuing the interstate forms. It is the intention of conferees to facilitate timely issuance of the forms but also to mandate that the Secretary work closely with State child support directors in developing the forms.

17. STATE LAWS PROVIDING EXPEDITED PROCEDURES

A. ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION BY STATE AGENCY

Present law

States must have procedures under which expedited processes are in effect under the State judicial system or under State administrative processes for obtaining and enforcing support orders and for establishing paternity.

House Bill

States must adopt a series of procedures to expedite both the establishment of paternity and the establishment, enforcement, and modification of support. These procedures provide for: (1) ordering genetic testing in appropriate cases; (2) entering a default order upon a showing of service of process and any other showing required by State law to establish paternity if the putative father refuses to submit to genetic testing and to establish or modify a support order when a parent fails to appear for a hearing; (3) issuing subpoenas to obtain information necessary to establish, modify or enforce an order, with appropriate sanctions for failure to respond to the subpoena; (4) obtaining access to records including: records of other State and local government agencies, law enforcement records, and corrections records, including automated access to records maintained in automated data bases; (5) directing the parties to pay support to the appropriate government entity; (6) ordering income withholding; (7) securing assets to satisfy arrearages by intercepting or seizing periodic or lump sum payments from States or local agencies; these payments include Unemployment Compensation, workers' compensation, judgements, settlements, lottery winnings, assets held by financial institutions, and public and private retirement funds; and (8) increasing automatically the monthly support due to include amounts to offset arrears.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires States to include the following additional procedures: (1) requiring all entities in the State (including for-profit, nonprofit, and governmental employers) to provide information on employment, compensation and benefits of any employee or contractor in response to a request from the State IV–D agency; (2) obtaining access to a variety of public and private records including: vital statistics, State and local tax records, real and personal property, occupational and professional licenses and records concerning ownership and control of corporations, partnerships and other business entities, employment security records, public assistance records, motor vehicle records, corrections records, customer records of public utilities and cable TV companies, and records of financial institutions; (3) imposing liens to force the sale of property and distribution of proceeds; (4) requiring financial institutions (subject to the limitation on liabilities arising from affording such access) to provide information held by them on individuals who owe or are owed child support (or against or with respect to whom a support obligation is sought) to State child support agencies; and (5) requiring that due process safeguards be followed.

The amendment does not include the House provision regarding default orders in paternity cases upon a showing of service of process.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate on the five additional expedited procedures and includes the House provision regarding default orders in paternity cases upon a showing of service of process.

B. SUBSTANTIVE AND PROCEDURAL RULES

Present law

Federal regulations provide a number of safeguards, such as requiring that the due process rights of the parties involved be protected.

House bill

States must follow a series of procedural rules that apply to all of the expedited procedures outlined in the preceding section:

(1) Locator Information and Notice—requires parties in paternity and child support actions to file and update information about identity, address, and employer with the tribunal and with the State Case Registry upon entry of the order. The tribunal can deem due process requirements for notice and service of process to be met in any subsequent action upon delivery of written notice to the most recent residential or employer address filed with the tribunal.

(2) Statewide Jurisdiction—grants the child support agency and any administrative or judicial tribunal with authority to hear child support and paternity cases, to exert Statewide jurisdiction over the parties, and to grant orders that have Statewide effect; also permits transfer of cases between administrative areas without additional filing or service of process.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment except House recede to Senate language by replacing the term "administrative areas" with the term "local jurisdictions" in the section on Statewide jurisdiction.

C. AUTOMATION OF STATE AGENCY FUNCTIONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The automated systems being developed by States are to be used, to the maximum extent possible, to implement the expedited procedures.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

CHAPTER 4—PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT

18. STATE LAWS CONCERNING PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT

A. ESTABLISHMENT PROCESS AVAILABLE FROM BIRTH UNTIL AGE 18

Present law

Federal law requires States to strengthen their paternity establishment laws by requiring that paternity may be established until the child reaches age 18. As of August 16, 1984, these procedures would apply to a child for whom paternity has not been established or for whom a paternity action was brought but dismissed because of statute of limitations of less than 18 years was then in effect in the State.

House bill

Same as current law.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires that paternity may be established until age 21 rather than 18.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes so that States are required to have laws that permit paternity establishment until at least age 18 (or a higher limit at State option).

B. PROCEDURES CONCERNING GENETIC TESTING

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement laws under which the child and all other parties must undergo genetic testing upon the request of a party in contested cases.

House bill

The child and all other parties must undergo genetic testing upon the request of a party, where the request is supported by a sworn statement establishing a reasonable possibility of parentage or nonparentage. When the tests are ordered by the State agency, States must pay for the costs, subject to recoupment at State option from the father if paternity is established.

Senate amendment

Similar provision. House mandates genetic tests in certain cases while Senate allows States with laws against genetic testing in some cases to follow State law.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both House and Senate provisions but the House recedes on the provision allowing States to exempt certain cases from the requirement for mandatory genetic testing. No State exemption, however, can permit a putative father to avoid paternity establishment procedures.

C. VOLUNTARY PATERNITY ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures for a simple civil process for voluntary paternity acknowledgment, including hospital-based programs.

House bill

(1) Simple Civil Process. States must have procedures that create a simple civil process for voluntary acknowledging paternity under which benefits, rights and responsibilities of acknowledgement are explained to unwed parents;

(2) Hospital Program. States must have procedures that establish a paternity acknowledgement program through hospitals and birth record agencies (and other agencies as designated by the Secretary).

(3) Paternity Services. States must have procedures that require the agency responsible for maintaining birth records to offer voluntary paternity establishment services. The Secretary must issue regulations, including regulations on other State agencies that may offer voluntary paternity acknowledgement services and the conditions such agencies must meet.

(4) Affidavit. States must have procedures that require agencies to use a uniform affidavit developed by the Secretary that is entitled to full faith and credit in any other State.

Senate amendment

(1) Simple Civil Process. Similar to House provision; Senate does not include language requiring that the explanation of alternatives, legal consequences, and rights and responsibilities be "in a language that each can understand".

(2) Hospital Program. Similar to House provision, except States must also establish good cause exceptions for not trying to establish paternity.

(3) Paternity Services. Identical to House provision.

(4) Affidavit. Similar provision but Senate amendment allows States to develop their own voluntary paternity acknowledgement form as long as they follow all the basic elements of a form developed by the Secretary.

Conference agreement

(1) Simple Civil Process. The conference agreement follows the House and Senate provisions except the House agrees to drop its requirement that the explanation be ''in a language that each [parent] can understand''.

(2) Hospital Program. Conferees agree to follow the House and Senate provisions but with a modification of the Senate language on ''good cause'' exceptions so that such exceptions become a State option.

(3) Paternity Services. The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

(4) Affidavit. The House recedes to allow States to develop their own voluntary acknowledgment form as long as the form contains all the basic elements of a form developed by the Secretary.

D. STATUS OF SIGNED PATERNITY ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures under which the voluntary acknowledgment of paternity creates a rebuttable presumption, or at State option, a conclusive presumption of paternity.

House bill

(1) Legal Finding. States must have procedures under which a signed acknowledgement of paternity is considered a legal finding of paternity unless rescinded within 60 days.

(2) Contest. States must have procedures under which a paternity acknowledgment can be challenged in court only on the basis of fraud, duress, or material mistake of fact.

(3) Rescission. States must have procedures under which minors who sign a voluntary paternity acknowledgement are allowed to rescind it until age 18 or the date of the first proceeding to establish a support order, visitation, or custody rights.

Senate amendment

(1) Legal Finding. Adds the requirement that the name of the father appear in the birth records only if there is a paternity acknowledgement signed by both parents or paternity has been established by court order.

(2) Contest. Identical to House provision.

(3) Rescission. No provision.

Conference agreement

(1) Legal Finding. The House recedes to the Senate requirement that the father's name appear in the birth records only if certain conditions are met;

(2) Contest. The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

(3) Rescission. The House agrees to drop the rescission requirement, thereby leaving this decision up to States.

E. BAR ON ACKNOWLEDGMENT RATIFICATION PROCEEDINGS

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures under which such voluntary acknowledgment is admissible as evidence of paternity and the voluntary acknowledgment of paternity must be recognized as a basis for seeking a support order without requiring any further proceedings to establish paternity.

House bill

No judicial or administrative proceedings are required or permitted to ratify a paternity acknowledgement which is not challenged by the parents.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

F. ADMISSIBILITY OF GENETIC TESTING RESULTS

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures which provide that any objection to genetic testing results must be made in writing within a specified number of days before any hearing at which such results may be introduced into evidence. If no objection is made, the test results must be admissible as evidence of paternity without the need for foundation testimony or other proof of authenticity or accuracy.

House bill

States must have procedures for admitting into evidence accredited genetic tests, unless any objection is made within a specified number of days, and if no objection is made, clarifying that test results are admissible without the need for foundation or other testimony.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

G. PRESUMPTION OF PATERNITY IN CERTAIN CASES

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures which create a rebuttable or, at State option, conclusive presumption of paternity based on genetic testing results indicating a threshold probability that the alleged father is the father of the child.

House bill

States must have laws that create a rebuttable or, at State option, conclusive presumption of paternity when results from genetic testing indicate a threshold probability that the alleged father is the father of the child.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

H. DEFAULT ORDERS

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures that require a default order to be entered in a paternity case upon a showing of service of process on the defendant and any additional showing required by State law.

House bill

A default order must be entered in a paternity case upon a showing of service of process on the defendant and any additional showing required by the State law.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

I. NO RIGHT TO JURY TRIAL

Present law

No provision.

House bill

State laws must state that parties in a contested paternity action are not entitled to a jury trial.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

J. TEMPORARY SUPPORT BASED ON PROBABLE PATERNITY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Upon motion of a party, State law must require issuance of a temporary support order pending an administrative or judicial determination of parentage if paternity is indicated by genetic testing or other clear and convincing evidence.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

K. PROOF OF CERTAIN SUPPORT AND PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT COSTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Bills for pregnancy, childbirth, and genetic testing must be admissible in judicial proceedings without foundation testimony.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

L. STANDING OF PUTATIVE FATHERS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Putative fathers must have a reasonable opportunity to initiate paternity action.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

M. FILING OF ACKNOWLEDGMENTS AND ADJUDICATIONS IN STATE REGISTRY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Both voluntary acknowledgements and adjudications of paternity must be filed with the State registry of birth records for data matches with the central Case Registry of Child Support Orders established by the State.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

N. NATIONAL PATERNITY ACKNOWLEDGMENT AFFIDAVIT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary is required to develop an affidavit to be used for voluntary acknowledgement of paternity which includes the Social Security number of each parent.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House and Senate provisions but includes a clarification that the Secretary, after consulting with the State child support directors, should list the common elements that States must include on their forms.

19. OUTREACH FOR VOLUNTARY PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT

Present law

States are required to regularly and frequently publicize, through public service announcements, the availability of child support enforcement services.

House bill

States must publicize the availability and encourage the use of procedures for voluntary establishment of paternity and child support.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

20. COOPERATION BY APPLICANTS FOR AND RECIPIENTS OF TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE FOR NEEDY FAMILIES

Present law

AFDC applicants and recipients are required to cooperate with the State in establishing the paternity of a child and in obtaining child support payments unless the applicant or recipient is found to have good cause for refusing to cooperate. Under the "good cause" regulations, the child support agency may determine that it is against the best interests of the child to seek to establish paternity in cases involving incest, rape, or pending procedures for adoption. Moreover, the agency may determine that it is against the best interest of the child to require the mother to cooperate if it is anticipated that such cooperation will result in the physical or emotional harm of the child, parent, or caretaker relative.

House bill

Individuals who apply for or receive public assistance under the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program must cooperate with child support enforcement efforts (establishing paternity, establishing, modifying or enforcing a support order) by providing specific identifying information about the other parent, unless the applicant or recipient is found to have good cause for refusing to cooperate. "Good cause" is defined by States. States may also require the applicant and child to submit to genetic testing. (See also Prohibitions in Title I, Section 101 of the House bill.)

Senate amendment

The Senate provision is similar to the House provision except the Senate amendment places additional specific requirements on State procedures. These include requiring the custodial parent to appear at interviews, hearings, and legal proceedings; requiring the State child support agency to notify the custodial parent and the IV–A and Medicaid agencies of whether she is cooperating and if not what she must do to cooperate; and requiring that when determining the custodial parent's cooperation States take into account the best interests of the child. Also requires the individual and the child to submit to genetic tests pursuant to a judicial or administrative order. Responsibility for determining failure to cooperate is shifted from the agency that administers the Temporary Assistance program to the agency that administers the child support program.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate's additional requirements for cooperation by adults applying for or receiving IV–A benefits.

CHAPTER 5—PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION AND FUNDING

21. FEDERAL MATCHING PAYMENTS

Present law

The Federal Government currently reimburses each State at the rate of 66 percent for the cost of administering its child support enforcement program. The Federal Government also reimburses States 90 percent of the laboratory costs of establishing paternity, and through fiscal year 1995, 90 percent of the costs of developing comprehensive Statewide automated systems. (There is no maintenance of effort provision in current law.)

House bill

The Federal matching payment for child support activities is maintained at 66 percent. The bill also adds a maintenance of effort requirement that the non-Federal share of IV–D funding for fiscal year 1997 and succeeding years not be less than such funding for fiscal year 1996.

Senate amendment

No provision. Maintains present law with respect to the Federal match rate of 66 percent.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

22. PERFORMANCE-BASED INCENTIVES AND PENALTIES

A. INCENTIVE ADJUSTMENTS TO FEDERAL MATCHING RATE

Present law

The Federal government reimburses approved administrative expenditures of States at a rate of 66%. In addition, the Federal government pays States an incentive amount ranging from 6 percent to 10 percent of both AFDC and non-AFDC collections.

House bill

Beginning in 1999, a new incentive system will reward good State performance by increasing the State's basic matching rate by up to 12 percentage points for outstanding performance in establishing paternity and by up to an additional 12 percentage points for overall performance (as measured by the percentage of cases that have support orders, the percentage of cases in which support is being paid, the ratio of child support collected to child support due, and cost-effectiveness). The Secretary will design the specific features of the system. In doing so, she will maintain overall Federal reimbursement of State programs through the combined matching rate and incentives at the level projected for the current combined matching and incentive payments to States. The effect of this provision is to change Federal financing so that relatively more Federal dollars will be awarded to States for good performance. The State must spend the money from incentive payments on their child support enforcement program.

Senate amendment

As under current law, the Senate amendment provides for an incentive payment to States, the funds for which come from the reimbursement of cash welfare payments to the Federal Government that is the Federal share of child support collections paid on behalf of families. Not later than 60 days after enactment, the DHHS Secretary is required to establish a committee, which must include State child support directors, which must develop for the Secretary's approval a formula for the distribution of incentive payments to the States. The State's incentive payment is based on its comparative performance as measured by five criteria and seven factors that are stipulated in the amendment.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Two conforming amendments are made in Section 454 of the Social Security Act.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes to the two conforming amendments in the House bill.

C. CALCULATION OF IV–D PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT PERCENTAGE

Present law

States are required to meet Federal standards for the establishment of paternity. The standard relates to the percentage obtained by dividing the number of children in the State who are born out of wedlock, are receiving AFDC or child support enforcement services, and for whom paternity has been established by the number of children who are born out of wedlock and are receiving AFDC or child support enforcement services. To meet Federal requirements, this percentage in a State must be at least 75 percent or meet the following standards of improvement from the preceding year: 1) if the State paternity establishment ratio is between 50 and 75 percent, the State ratio must increase by 3 or more percentage points from the ratio of the preceding year; 2) if the State ratio is between 45 and 50, the ratio must increase at least 4 percentage points; 3) if the State ratio is between 40 and 45 percent, it must increase at least 5 percentage points; and 4) if the State ratio is below 40 percent, it must increase at least 6 percentage points. If an audit finds that the State's child support enforcement program has not substantially complied with the requirements of its State plan, the State is subject to a penalty. In accord with this penalty, the Secretary must reduce a State's AFDC benefit payment by not less than 1 percent nor more than 2 percent for the first failure to comply; by not less than 2 percent nor more than 3 percent for the second consecutive failure to comply; and by not less than 3 percent nor more than 5 percent for third or subsequent consecutive failure to comply.

House bill

The IV–D paternity establishment percentage for a fiscal year is equal to: (1) the total number of children in the State who were born out-of-wedlock, who have not reached age 1 and for whom paternity is acknowledged or established during the fiscal year, divided by (2) the total number of children born out-of-wedlock in the State during the fiscal year. The requirements for meeting the standard are the same as current law except the 75 percent rule is increased to 90 percent. The noncompliance provisions of the child support program are modified so that the Secretary must take overall program performance into account and the minimum paternity establishment percentage is raised from 75 to 90.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

D. EFFECTIVE DATES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The new incentive payments go into effect on October 1, 1997, but procedures for computing the State incentive payments are not actually based on the new system until fiscal year 1999; the changes in penalty procedure become effective upon enactment.

Senate amendment

Effective upon enactment, except present law applies for purposes of incentive payments for fiscal years before fiscal year 2000.

Conference agreement

Effective upon enactment.

23. FEDERAL AND STATE REVIEWS AND AUDITS

A. STATE AGENCY ACTIVITIES

Present law

States are required to maintain a full record of child support collections and disbursements and to maintain an adequate reporting system.

House bill

States are required to annually review and report to the Secretary, using data from their automatic data processing system, both information adequate to determine the State's compliance with Federal requirements for expedited procedures and timely case processing as well as the information necessary to calculate their levels of accomplishment and rates of improvement on the performance indicators in the bill.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except does not include requirement that States submit process information on State compliance with Federal mandates on timely case processing.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both the House and Senate provisions but the House recedes on its requirement that States submit information on timely case processing.

B. FEDERAL ACTIVITIES

Present law

The Secretary must collect and maintain, on a fiscal year basis, up-to-date State-by-State statistics on each of the services provided under the child support enforcement program. The Secretary is also required to evaluate the implementation of State child support enforcement programs and conduct audits of these programs as necessary, but not less often than once every 3 years (or annually if a State has been found to be out of compliance with program rules).

House bill

The Secretary is required to determine the amount (if any) of incentives or penalties. The Secretary must also review State reports on compliance with Federal requirements and provide States with recommendations for corrective action. Audits must be conducted at least once every 3 years, or more often in the case of States that fail to meet Federal requirements. The purpose of the audits is to assess the completeness, reliability, accuracy, and security of data reported for use in calculating the performance indicators and to assess the adequacy of financial management of the State program.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

C. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

These provisions take effect beginning with the calendar quarter that begins 12 months after enactment.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

24. REQUIRED REPORTING PROCEDURES

Present law

The Secretary is required to assist States in establishing adequate reporting procedures and must maintain records of child support enforcement operations and of amounts collected and disbursed, including costs incurred in collecting support payments.

House bill

The Secretary is required to establish procedures and uniform definitions for State collection and reporting of information necessary to measure State compliance with expedited processes and timely case processing.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except does not mention timely case processing.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both the House and Senate provisions except, as in the State Agency Activities provision (see #23A above), the House recedes by dropping State reports on timely case processing.

25. AUTOMATED DATA PROCESSING REQUIREMENTS

A. IN GENERAL

Present law

Federal law (P.L. 104–35) requires that by October 1, 1997, States have an operational automated data processing and information retrieval system designed to control, account for, and monitor all factors in the support enforcement and paternity determination process, the collection and distribution of support payments, and the costs of all services rendered.

House bill

States are required to have a single Statewide automated data processing and information retrieval system which has the capacity to perform the necessary functions, as described in this section.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

B. PROGRAM MANAGEMENT

Present law

Federal law requires that the automated data processing system be capable of providing management information on all IV–D cases from initial referral or application through collection and enforcement.

House bill

The State data system must be used to perform functions the Secretary specifies, including controlling and accounting for the use of Federal, State, and local funds and maintaining the data necessary to meet Federal reporting requirements in carrying out the program.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

C. CALCULATION OF PERFORMANCE INDICATORS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The automated system must maintain the requisite data for Federal reporting, calculate the State's performance for purposes of the incentive and penalty provisions, and have in place systems controls to ensure the completeness, reliability, and accuracy of the data.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

D. INFORMATION INTEGRITY AND SECURITY

Present law

Federal law requires that the automated data processing system be capable of providing security against unauthorized access to, or use of, the data in such system.

House bill

The State agency must have safeguards to protect the integrity, accuracy, and completeness of, and access to, data in the automated systems (including restricting access to passwords, monitoring of access to and use of the system, training, and imposing penalties).

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

E. REGULATIONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary shall prescribe final regulations for implementation of this section no later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment.

F. IMPLEMENTATION TIMETABLE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The statutory provisions for State implementation of Federal automatic data processing requirements are revised to provide that, first, all requirements enacted on or before the date of enactment of the Family Support Act of 1988 are to be met by October 1, 1995. The requirements enacted on or before the date of enactment of this bill must be met by October 1, 1999. The October 1, 1999 deadline will be extended by one day for each day by which the Secretary fails to meet the 2-year deadline for regulations.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except allows States to meet requirements of the Family Support Act by October 1, 1997 rather than 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both House and Senate provisions but the completion date for data requirements imposed on States by the Family Support Act follows the Senate provision of October 1, 1997.

G. SPECIAL FEDERAL MATCHING RATE FOR DEVELOPMENT COSTS OF AUTOMATED SYSTEMS

Present law

The Federal Government, through FY 1995, reimburses States at a 90 percent matching rate for the costs of developing comprehensive Statewide automated systems.

House bill

The Federal government will provide 90 percent matching funds for fiscal year 1996 that will be applied to all State activities related to developing a comprehensive Statewide automated system. For fiscal years 1997 through 2001, the matching rate for the provisions of this bill and other authorized provisions will be the higher of 80 percent or the matching rate generally applicable to the State IV–D program, including incentive payments (which could be as high as 90 percent).

Senate amendment

Similar provision except Senate amendment continues the 90 percent matching rate for 1996 and 1997 in the case of provisions outlined in advanced planning documents submitted before May 1, 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment but the House recedes on the provision to continue 90 percent reimbursement of data processing activities that were included in any advanced planning document submitted by States and approved by the Secretary before May 1, 1995. The 90 percent funding, which continues through October 1, 1997, includes approved expenditures by States that were made between October 1, 1995 and the date of passage of this legislation.

H. TEMPORARY LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS UNDER SPECIAL FEDERAL MATCHING RATE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary must create procedures to cap these payments at $260,000,000 over 5 years (fiscal year 1996–2000) to be distributed among States by a formula set in regulations which takes into account the relative size of State caseloads and the level of automation needed to meet applicable automatic data processing requirements.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and Senate amendment, except the limitation on payments is increased from $260,000,000 to $400,000,000.

26. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

Present law

Annual appropriations are made to cover the expenses of the Administration for Children and Families, which includes the Federal Office of Child Support Enforcement (OCSE). Among OCSE's administrative expenses are the costs of providing technical assistance to the States.

House bill

The Secretary can use 1 percent of the Federal share of child support collections on behalf of families in the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families program the preceding year to provide technical assistance to the States. Technical assistance can include training of State and Federal staff, research and demonstration programs, and special projects of regional or national significance. The Secretary must use up to 2 percent of the Federal share of collections for operation of the Federal Parent Locator Service to the extent that costs of the Parent Locator Service are not recovered by user fees.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

27. REPORTS AND DATA COLLECTION BY THE SECRETARY

Present law

The Secretary is required to submit to Congress, not later than 3 months after the end of the fiscal year, a complete report on all child support enforcement activities.

House bill

In addition to current reporting requirements, the Secretary is required to report the following data to Congress in her annual report each fiscal year:

(1) the total amount of child support payments collected;

(2) the cost to the State and Federal governments of furnishing child support services;

(3) the number of cases involving families that became ineligible for aid under part A with respect to whom a child support payment was received:

(4) the total amount of current support collected and distributed;

(5) the total amount of past due support collected and distributed as arrearages; and

(6) the total amount of support due and unpaid for all fiscal years.

These requirements apply to fiscal year 1996 and succeeding fiscal years.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires the Secretary to include information on the degree to which States met Federal statutory time limits in responding to interstate requests and in distributing child support collections.

Conference agreement

Conferees agree to follow the provisions in both bills except that the House recedes on the additional requirements the Senate included in the Secretary's report to Congress.

CHAPTER 6—ESTABLISHMENT AND MODIFICATION OF SUPPORT ORDERS

28. NATIONAL CHILD SUPPORT GUIDELINES COMMISSION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Establishes a National Child Support Guidelines Commission that is responsible for deciding whether it is appropriate to develop national child support guidelines for consideration by the Congress or for adoption by individual States and the benefits and deficiencies of such models. Several matters the Commission must consider, such as the feasibility of adapting uniform terms in all child support orders, are outlined. The Commission is to be comprised of 12 individuals, 2 each appointed by the Chairman of Finance and Ways and Means, 1 each by the ranking member of Finance and Ways and Means, and 6 by the Secretary. The Commission report must be issued within 2 years.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes to the House provision of no National Guidelines Commission.

29. SIMPLIFIED PROCESS FOR REVIEW AND ADJUSTMENT OF CHILD SUPPORT ORDERS

Present law

A child support order legally obligates noncustodial parents to provide financial support for their child and stipulates the amount of the obligation and how it is to be paid. In 1984, P.L. 98–378 required States to establish guidelines for establishing child support orders. In 1988, P.L. 100–485 made the guidelines binding on judges and other officials who had authority to establish support orders. P.L. 100–485 also required States to review and adjust individual child support orders once every 3 years under some circumstances. States are required to notify both resident and non-resident parents of their right to a review.

House bill

States must review and, as appropriate, adjust the support order every 3 years. States may adjust child support orders by either applying the State guidelines and updating the reward amount or by applying a cost of living increase to the order. Both parties must be given 30 days after notice of adjustment to contest the results. States may use automated methods to identify orders eligible for review, conduct the review, identify orders eligible for adjustment, and apply the appropriate adjustment to the orders based on the threshold established by the State. States must also review and, upon a showing of a change in circumstances, adjust orders pursuant to the child support guidelines upon request of a party. States are required to give parties one notice of their right to request review and adjustment, which may be included in the order establishing the support amount.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except adds that review and adjustment must be done "upon the request of either parent or the State." If neither parent requests a review, States have the option of avoiding the 3-year review requirement.

Conference agreement

Conferees agree to follow the House and Senate provisions with one exception. The House recedes to the Senate provision that States are not required to conduct reviews unless requested by either parent but with the additional requirement that States inform mothers at least once every 3 years in writing of their right to a review.

30. FURNISHING CONSUMER REPORTS FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES RELATING TO CHILD SUPPORT

Present law

P.L. 102–537 amends the Fair Credit Act to require consumer reporting agencies to include in any consumer report information on child support delinquencies provided by or verified by a child support enforcement agency, which antedates the report by 7 years.

House bill

This section amends the Fair Credit Reporting Act. In response to a request by the head of a State or local child support agency (or a State or local government official authorized by the head of such an agency), consumer credit agencies must release information if the person making the request: certifies that the consumer report is needed to establish an individual's capacity to make child support payments or determine the level of payments; gives the consumer credit agency 10 days notice that the report is being requested; and provides assurances that the consumer report will be kept confidential, will be used solely for child support purposes, and will not be used in connection with any other civil, administrative, or criminal proceeding or for any other purpose. Consumer reporting agencies must also give reports to a child support agency for use to set an initial or modified award.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except requires that the consumer must have been shown to be the father (i.e., paternity must be established).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows both the House and Senate provisions except that the House receded to the Senate requirement that the consumer must have been shown to be the father.

31. NONLIABILITY FOR DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS PROVIDING FINANCIAL RECORDS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Depository institutions are not liable for information provided to child support agencies. Child support agencies can disclose information obtained from depository institutions only for child support purposes. Individuals who knowingly disclose information from financial records can have civil actions brought against them in Federal district court; the maximum penalty is $1,000 for each disclosure or actual damages plus, in the case of "willful disclosure" resulting from "gross negligence," punitive damages, plus the costs of the action.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate requirement that Sates have laws protecting depository institutions when information is provided to child support agencies.

CHAPTER 7—ENFORCEMENT OF SUPPORT ORDERS

32. FEDERAL INCOME TAX REFUND OFFSET

A. CHANGED ORDER OF REFUND DISTRIBUTION UNDER INTERNAL REVENUE CODE

Present law

Since 1981 in AFDC cases, and 1984 in non–AFDC cases, Federal law has required States to implement procedures under which child support agencies can collect child support arrearages through the interception of Federal income tax refunds.

Child support arrearages obtained through Federal income tax refunds are distributed to the State and are retained by the State for arrearages owed to it under the AFDC assignment. States must reimburse the Federal government for their share of these arrearage payments. If no arrearages are owed the State, the money is used to pay arrearages to the family.

House bill

The Internal Revenue Code is amended so that offsets of child support arrears owed to individuals take priority over most debts owed Federal agencies. Proceeds from tax intercepts will be distributed as follows:

(1) for Federal education debts and debts to the Department of Health and Human Services;

(2) for child support owed to individuals;

(3) for child support arrearages owed to State governments; and

(4) for other Federal debts.

The provision also amends the Internal Revenue Code so that the order of priority for distribution of tax offsets follows the distribution rules for child support payments specified in subtitle A of this bill.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate so that the order of payments from tax intercepts remains unchanged. This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. ELIMINATION OF DISPARITIES IN TREATMENT OF ASSIGNED AND NON-ASSIGNED ARREARAGES

Present law

Federal rules set different criteria for AFDC and non–AFDC cases. For example, in AFDC cases arrearages may be collected through the income tax offset program regardless of the child's age. In non–AFDC cases, the tax offset program can be used only if the postminor child is disabled (pursuant to the meaning of disability under titles II or XVI of the SSA). Moreover, the arrearage in AFDC cases must be only $150 or more, whereas the arrearage in non–AFDC cases must be at least $500.

House bill

The bill eliminates disparate treatment of families not receiving public assistance by repealing provisions applicable only to support arrears not assigned to the State. The Secretary of the Treasury is given access to information in the National Directory of New Hires for tax purposes.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

33. INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE COLLECTION OF ARREARAGES

Present law

If the amount of overdue child support is at least $750, the Internal Revenue Service can enforce the child support obligation through its regular collection process, which may include seizure of property, freezing accounts, or use of other procedures if the child support enforcement agencies request assistance according to prescribed rules (e.g., certifying that the delinquency is at least $750, etc.)

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends the Internal Revenue Code so that no additional fees can be assessed for adjustment to previously certified amounts for the same obligor, effective October 1, 1997.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate requirement that IRS cannot charge additional fees in the case of a previously certified amount for the same obligor.

34. AUTHORITY TO COLLECT SUPPORT FROM FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

A. CONSOLIDATION AND STREAMLINING OF AUTHORITIES

Present law

Federal law allows the wages of Federal employees to be garnished to enforce legal obligations for child support or alimony. Federal law provides that moneys payable by the United States to any individual are subject to being garnished in order to meet an individual's legal obligation to provide child support or make alimony payments. An executive order issued 2/27/95 establishes the Federal government as a model employer in promoting and facilitating the establishment and enforcement of child support.

By Executive Order on 2/27/95, all Federal agencies, including the Uniformed Services, are required to cooperate fully in efforts to establish paternity and child support and to enforce the collection of child and medical support. All Federal agencies are to review their wage withholding procedures to ensure that they are in full compliance.

Beginning no later than July 1, 1995, the Director of the Office of Personal Management must publish annually in the Federal Register the list of agents (and their addresses) designated to receive service of withholding notices for Federal employees.

Federal law states that neither the United States nor any disbursing officer or government entity shall be liable with respect to any payment made from moneys due or payable from the United States pursuant to the legal process.

Federal law provides that money that may be garnished includes compensation for personal services, whether such compensation is denominated as wages, salary, commission, bonus, pay, or otherwise, and includes but is not limited to, severance pay, sick pay, incentive payments, and periodic payments.

Includes definitions of "United States", "child support", "alimony", "private person", and "legal process".

House bill

Federal Employees are subject to wage withholding and other actions taken against them by State Child Support Enforcement Agencies.

Federal agencies are responsible for wage withholding and other child support actions taken by the State as if they were a private employer.

The head of each Federal agency must designate an agent and place the agent's name, title, address, and telephone number in the Federal Register annually. The agent must, upon receipt of process, send written notice to the individual involved as soon as possible, but no later than 15 days, and to comply with any notice of wage withholding or respond to other process within 30 days.

Amends existing law governing allocation of moneys owed by a Federal employee to give priority to child support, to require allocation of available funds, up to the amount owed, among child support claimants, and to allocate remaining funds to other claimants on a first-come, first-served basis.

A government entity served with notice of process for enforcement of child support is not required to change its normal pay and disbursement cycle to comply with the legal process.

Similar to current law, the U.S., the government of the District of Columbia, and disbursing officers are not liable for child support payments made in accord with this section; nor is any Federal employee subject to disciplinary action or civil or criminal liability for disclosing information while carrying out the provisions of this section.

The President has the authority to promulgate regulations to implement this section as it applies to Federal employees of the Administrative branch of government; the President Pro Tempore of the Senate and Speaker of the House can issue regulations governing their employees; and the Chief Justice can issue regulations applicable to the Judicial branch.

This section broadens the definition of income to include funds such as insurance benefits, retirement and pension pay, survivor's benefits, compensation for death and black lung disease, veteran's benefits, and workers' compensation; but to exclude from income funds paid to defray expenses incurred in carrying out job duties, owed to the U.S., used to pay Federal employment taxes and fines and forfeitures ordered by court martial, withheld for tax purposes, used for health insurance or life insurance premiums, normal retirement contributions, or life insurance premiums.

This section includes definitions of "United States", "child support", "alimony", "private person", and "legal process".

House bill

The Secretary of Defense must establish a central personnel locator service that contains residential or, in specified instances, duty addresses of every member of the Armed Services (including retirees, the National Guard, and the Reserves). The locator service must be updated within 30 days of the time an individual establishes a new address. C. PAYMENT OF MILITARY RETIRED PAY IN COMPLIANCE WITH CHILD SUPPORT ORDERS

House bill

The Secretary of each branch of the Armed Forces (including retirees, the Coast Guard, the National Guard, and the Reserves) is required to make child support payments directly to any State to which a custodial parent has assigned support rights as a condition of receiving public assistance. The Secretary of Defense must also ensure that payments to satisfy current support or child support arrears are made from disposable retirement pay. 37. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS THAT STATES SHOULD SUSPEND DRIVERS', BUSINESS, AND OCCUPATIONAL LICENSES OF PERSONS OWING PAST-DUE CHILD SUPPORT

House bill

It is the sense of Congress that each State should suspend any driver's license, business license, or occupational license issued to any person who owes past-due child support.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

House recedes (no provision).

38. WORK REQUIREMENT FOR PERSONS OWING PAST–DUE CHILD SUPPORT

Present law

P.L. 100–485 required the Secretary to grant waivers to up to 5 States allowing them to provide JOBS services on a voluntary or mandatory basis to noncustodial parents who are unemployed and unable to meet their child support obligations. (In their report the conferees noted that the demonstrations would not grant any new powers to the States to require participation by noncustodial parents. The demonstrations were to be evaluated.

House bill

States must have laws that direct courts to order individuals owing past-due child support for a child receiving assistance under the Temporary Family Assistance program either to pay the support due or to participate in work activities. "Past-due support" is defined.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except refers to "support" rather than "past-due support."

Conference agreement

Conferees agree to follow the House and Senate provisions except that the Senate recedes to the House provision that work apply only to nonresident parents owing past-due support.

39. DEFINITION OF SUPPORT ORDER

Present law

No provision.

House bill

A support order is defined as an order issued by a court or an administrative process established under State law that requires support of a child or of a child and the parent with whom the child lives.

Senate amendment

A support order is defined as a judgement, decree, or order (whether temporary, final, or subject to modification) issued by a court or an administrative agency for the support (monetary support, health care, arrearages, or reimbursement) of a child (including a child who has reached the age of majority under State law) or of a child and the parent with whom the child lives.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate definition of a support order.

40. REPORTING ARREARAGE TO CREDIT BUREAUS

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures which require them to periodically report to consumer reporting agencies the name of debtor parents owing at least 2 months of overdue child support and the amount of child support overdue. However, if the amount overdue is less than $1,000, information regarding it shall be made available only at the option of the State. Moreover, any information may only be made available after the noncustodial parent has been notified of the proposed action and has been given reasonable opportunity to contest the accuracy of the information. States are permitted to charge consumer reporting agencies that request child support arrearage information for a fee, not to exceed the actual cost.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

States are required to have procedures to periodically report to consumer credit reporting agencies the name of any noncustodial parent who is delinquent in the payment of support and the amount of overdue support owed by the parent.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate requirement that States periodically report to consumer credit reporting agencies.

41. LIENS

Present law

Federal law requires States to implement procedures under which liens are imposed against real and personal property for amounts of overdue support owed by a noncustodial parent who resides or owns property in the State.

House bill

States are required to have procedures to accord full faith and credit and to enforce in accordance with State law a lien from another State. The lien must be accompanied by a certification from the State issuing the lien of the amount of overdue support and a certification that due process requirements have been met. The second State is not required to register the underlying order, unless contested on the grounds of mistake of fact.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

42. STATE LAW AUTHORIZING SUSPENSION OF LICENSES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

States have the authority to withhold, suspend, or restrict the use of drivers' licenses, professional and occupational licenses, and recreational licenses of individuals owing past-due support or failing, after receiving appropriate notice, to comply with subpoenas or warrants relating to paternity or child support proceedings.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

43. DENIAL OF PASSPORTS FOR NONPAYMENT OF CHILD SUPPORT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

If an individual owes arrearages in excess of $5,000 of child support, the Secretary of HHS must request that the State Department deny, revoke, or limit the individual's passport. State child support agencies must have procedures for certifying arrearages in excess of $5,000 and for notifying individuals who are in arrears.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

44. INTERNATIONAL CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT

Present law

The United States has not signed any of the major treaties regarding international support enforcement. Pursuant to the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (URESA), most States have reciprocal agreements with at least one foreign country regarding reciprocal enforcement of support orders. States do not have the power to enter into treaties.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Secretary of State is authorized to negotiate reciprocal agreements with foreign nations on behalf of the States, territories, and possessions of the United States regarding the international enforcement of child support obligations.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with substantial modification. The Secretary of State, with concurrence of the Secretary of HHS, is authorized to declare reciprocity with foreign countries having requisite procedures for establishing and enforcing support orders. The Secretary may revoke reciprocity if she determines that the enforcement procedures do not continue to meet the requisite criteria.

The requirements for reciprocity include procedures in the foreign country for U.S. residents—available at no cost—to establish parentage, to establish and enforce support orders for children and custodial parents, and to distribute payments.

The Secretary of HHS is required to facilitate enforcement services in international cases involving residents of the U.S. and of foreign reciprocating countries, including developing uniform forms and procedures, and providing information from the FPLS on the State of residence of the obligor.

Where there is no Federal reciprocity agreement, States are permitted to enter into reciprocal agreements with foreign countries.

The State plan must provide that request for services in international cases be treated the same as interstate cases, except that no application will be required and no costs will be assessed against the foreign country or the obligee (costs may be assessed at State option against the obligor).

45. DENIAL OF MEANS-TESTED FEDERAL BENEFITS TO NONCUSTODIAL PARENTS WHO ARE DELINQUENT IN PAYING CHILD SUPPORT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Noncustodial parents who are more than 2 months delinquent in paying child support are not eligible to receive means-tested Federal benefits.

Conference agreement

Senate recede (no provision).

46. CHILD SUPPORT ENFORCEMENT FOR INDIAN TRIBES

Present law

There are about 340 Federally recognized Indian tribes in the 48 contiguous States. Among these tribes there are approximately 130 tribal courts and 17 Courts of Indian Offenses. Most tribal codes authorize their courts to hear parentage and child support matters that involve at least one member of the tribe or person living on the reservation. This jurisdiction may be exclusive or concurrent with State court jurisdiction, depending on specified circumstances.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires States to make reasonable efforts to enter into cooperative agreements with an Indian tribe or organization if the tribe or organization has an established tribal court system to establish paternity, establish and enforce support orders, and enter support orders in accordance with guidelines established by the tribe or organization. Such agreements shall provide for the cooperative delivery of child support enforcement services in Indian country and for the forwarding of all funds collected by the tribe or organization to the State agency, or conversely, by the State agency to the tribe or organization, which shall distribute the funds according to the agreement. The DHHS Secretary in appropriate cases is authorized to send Federal funds directly to the tribe or organization.

Conference agreement

Senate recede (no provision).

47. FINANCIAL INSTITUTION DATA MATCHES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

States are required to implement procedures under which the State child support agency shall enter into agreements with financial institutions doing business within the State to develop and operate a data match system, using automated data exchanges to the maximum extent feasible, in which such financial institutions are required to provide for each calendar quarter the name, address, Social Security number, and other identifying information for each noncustodial parent identified by the State who has an account at the institution and, in response to a notice of lien or levy, to encumber or surrender assets held by the institution on behalf of the noncustodial parent who is subject to the child support lien. Includes definition of the term "financial institution."

Conference agreement

Conferees agree that the House recede to the Senate requirement that States perform data matches on information supplied by financial institutions in the case of parents who owe past-due child support and have liens against them.

48. ENFORCEMENT OF ORDERS AGAINST PATERNAL GRANDPARENTS IN CASES OF MINOR PARENTS

Present law

No provision. However, Wisconsin and Hawaii have State laws that make grandparents financially responsible for their minor children's dependents.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

States would be required to implement procedures under which any child support order enforced by a child support enforcement agency would be enforceable against the paternal grandparents of a minor father if the child's minor mother were receiving benefits from the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant program.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate requirement that paternal grandparents be held accountable for paying child support in the case of minor mother with children being supported by benefits from the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant, or that the maternal grandparents be held accountable for paying child support in the case of a minor father raising children who receive benefits from the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant.

CHAPTER 8—MEDICAL SUPPORT

49. TECHNICAL CORRECTION TO ERISA DEFINITION OF MEDICAL CHILD SUPPORT ORDER

Present law

P.L. 103–66 requires States to adopt laws to require health insurers and employers to enforce orders for medical and child support and forbids health insurers from denying coverage to children who are not living with the covered individual or who were born outside of marriage. Under P.L. 103–66, group health plans are required to honor "qualified medical child support orders."

House bill

This provision expands the definition of medical child support order in ERISA to clarify that any judgement, decree, or order that is issued by a court of competent jurisdiction or by an administrative adjudication has the force and effect of law.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

50. ENFORCEMENT OF ORDERS FOR HEALTH CARE COVERAGE

Present law

Federal law requires the Secretary to require IV–D agencies to petition for the inclusion of medical support as part of child support whenever health care coverage is available to the noncustodial parent at reasonable cost.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

All orders enforced under this part must include a provision for health care coverage. If the noncustodial parent changes jobs and the new employer provides health coverage, the State must send notice of coverage, which shall operate to enroll the child in the health plan, to the new employer.

Conference agreement

The House recedes to the Senate provision on medical care coverage provided to children by nonresident parents changing jobs.

CHAPTER 9—ENHANCING RESPONSIBILITY AND OPPORTUNITY FOR NONRESIDENTIAL PARENTS

51. GRANTS TO STATES FOR ACCESS AND VISITATION PROGRAMS

A. IN GENERAL

Present law

In 1988, Congress authorized the Secretary to fund for fiscal year 1990 and fiscal year 1991 demonstration projects by States to help divorcing or never-married parents cooperate with each other, especially in arranging for visits between the child and the nonresident parent.

House bill

The bill authorizes grants to States for access and visitation programs including mediation, counseling, education, development of parenting plans, and visitation enforcement. Visitation enforcement can include monitoring, supervision, neutral drop-off and pick-up, and development of guidelines for visitation and alternative custody agreements. States are required to monitor and evaluate their programs and are given the authority to subcontract the program to courts, local public agencies, or private non-profit agencies. Programs operating under the grant do not have to be Statewide. Funding is authorized as capped spending under section IV–D of the Social Security Act. Projects are required to supplement rather than supplant State funds.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

B. AMOUNT OF GRANT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The amount of the grant to a State is equal to either 90 percent of the State expenditures during the year for access and visitation programs or the allotment for the State for the fiscal year.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

C. ALLOTMENT TO STATES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The allotment to the State bears the same ratio to the amount appropriated for the fiscal year as the number of children living in the State with one biological parent divided by the national number of children living with one biological parent. The Administration for Children and Families must adjust allotments to ensure that no State is allotted less than $50,000 for fiscal years 1996 or 1997 or less than $100,000 for any year after 1997.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

D. STATE ADMINISTRATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

States may use the money to create their own programs or to fund grant programs with courts, local public agencies, or non-profit organizations. The programs do not need to be Statewide. States must monitor, evaluate, and report on their programs in accord with the regulations issued by the Secretary.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

CHAPTER 10—EFFECT OF ENACTMENT

52. EFFECTIVE DATES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Except as noted in the text of the bill for specific provisions, the general effective date for provisions in the bill is October 1, 1996. However, given that many of the changes required by this bill must be approved by State Legislatures, the bill contains a grace period tied to the meeting schedule of State Legislatures. In any given State, the bill becomes effective either on October 1, 1996 or on the first day of the first calendar quarter after the close of the first regular session of the State Legislature that begins after the date of enactment of the bill. In the case of States that require a constitutional amendment to comply with the requirements of the bill, the grace period is extended either 1 year after the effective date of the necessary State constitutional amendment or 5 years after the date of enactment of the bill.

Senate amendment

Identical provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

SUBTITLE D—RESTRICTING WELFARE AND PUBLIC BENEFITS FOR ALIENS

1. STATEMENTS OF NATIONAL POLICY CONCERNING WELFARE AND IMMIGRATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Congress makes the following statements concerning national policy with respect to welfare and immigration:

(i) Self-sufficiency has been a basic principle of U.S. immigration law since this country's earliest immigration statutes;

(ii) It continues to be the immigration policy of the U.S. that aliens within the nation's borders depend not on public resources, but rely on their own capabilities and the resources of their families and sponsors and that the availability of public benefits not constitute an incentive for immigration;

(iii) Aliens have been applying for and receiving public benefits at increasing rates;

(iv) Current eligibility rules and unenforceable financial support agreements have proved incapable of assuring that individual aliens not burden the public benefits system;

(v) It is a compelling government interest to enact new rules for eligibility and sponsorship agreements to assure that aliens become self-reliant; and

(vi) It is a compelling government interest to remove the incentive for illegal immigration provided by the availability of public benefits.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

CHAPTER 1—ELIGIBILITY FOR FEDERAL BENEFITS PROGRAMS

2. INELIGIBILITY OF ILLEGAL ALIENS FOR CERTAIN FEDERAL BENEFITS PROGRAMS

Present law

Current law limits alien eligibility for most major Federal assistance programs, including restrictions on, among other programs, Supplemental Security Income, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, housing assistance, and Food Stamps Programs. Current law is silent on alienage under, among other programs, school lunch and nutrition, Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), Head Start, migrant health centers, and the earned income tax credit.

Under the programs with restrictions, benefits are generally allowed for permanent resident aliens (also referred to as immigrants and green card holders), refugees, asylees, and parolees, but benefits (other than emergency Medicaid) are denied to nonimmigrants (or aliens lawfully admitted as, e.g., tourists, students, or temporary workers) and illegal aliens. Benefits are permitted under AFDC, SSI, unemployment compensation, and nonemergency Medicaid to other aliens permanently residing in the U.S. under color of law (PRUCOL).

House bill

Any alien who is not lawfully present in the U.S. shall not be eligible for any Federal means-tested public benefits program, with the exception of non-cash, in-kind emergency assistance, including emergency medical services. Housing-related assistance, which allows limited assistance for households containing both eligible and ineligible individuals, remains prohibited as under current law.

The Attorney General is to decide which aliens are lawfully present for purposes of benefit eligibility. In doing so, the Attorney General is not required to consider an alien to be lawfully present solely because the alien is considered to be permanently residing under color of law (PRUCOL) under current standards.

Senate amendment

Any individual who is not lawfully present in the U.S. is ineligible for any Federal benefit other than: emergency medical services under Medicaid; short-term emergency disaster relief; assistance under the National School Lunch Act or the Child Nutrition Act of 1966; and public health assistance for immunizations and, if found necessary by HHS, testing for and treatment of communicable diseases. Similarly, States which administer a Federally-funded benefit program (or provide benefits pursuant to such a program) are not required to assist aliens who are not lawfully present.

An individual is lawfully present for purposes of qualifying for benefits if the individual is a citizen, non-citizen national (i.e. American Samoan), permanent resident alien, refugee, asylee (including an alien who has had his/her deportation stayed because it would return the alien to a country which would persecute him/her), or an alien who has been paroled into the U.S. by the Attorney General for at least 1 year.

Noncitizens are not lawfully present for the purposes of the SSI program merely because they are considered to be permanently residing under color of law (PRUCOL).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, except that aliens who are not lawfully present in the U.S. and nonimmigrants and aliens paroled into the U.S. for a period of less than 1 year as described below are grouped together and defined as classes "not qualified" to receive most mandatory Federal public benefits. However, even these "non-qualified" aliens may continue to receive: short-term, in-kind, emergency disaster relief; emergency medical services under Medicaid; public health assistance for immunizations and testing and treatment to prevent the spread of communicable diseases; and programs specified by the Attorney General as necessary to protect life and safety, such as soup kitchens and crisis counseling. With regard to public housing assistance, non-qualified aliens receiving benefits on the date of enactment will continue to be treated as they are under current law.

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment regarding the definition of Federal public benefits for this and subsequent sections, namely: any mandatory grant, contract, loan, professional license, or commercial license provided by an agency of the United States or by directly appropriated funds of the United States; and any mandatory retirement, welfare, health, disability, public or assisted housing, post-secondary education, food assistance, unemployment benefit, or any other similar benefit for which payments or assistance are provided to an individual, household, or family by an agency of the U.S. or by directly appropriated funds of the U.S.

The allowance for treatment of communicable diseases is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply where absolutely necessary to prevent the spread of such diseases. This is only a stop-gap measure until the deportation of a person or persons unlawfully here. It is not intended to provide authority for continued treatment of such diseases for a long term.

The allowance for emergency medical services under Medicaid is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply to medical care that is strictly of an emergency nature, such as medical treatment administered in an emergency room, critical care unit, or intensive care unit. The conferees do not intend that emergency medical services include pre-natal or delivery care assistance that is not strictly of an emergency nature as specified herein.

The intent of the conferees is that title I, part A of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act would not be affected by section 12401 because the benefit is not provided to an individual, household, or family eligibility unit.

The conferees believe that, as a matter of national immigration policy regarding immigration and welfare, self-sufficiency has been a basic principle of United States immigration law since this country's earliest immigration statutes.

It continues to be the immigration policy of the United States that aliens within the nation's borders not depend on taxpayer-funded public resources to meet their needs, but rather rely on their own capabilities and the resources of their families, their sponsors, and private organizations. The availability of taxpayer-funded public benefits should not constitute an incentive for immigration to the United States.

Despite the principle of self-sufficiency, aliens have been applying for and receiving public benefits from Federal, State, and local governments at increasing rates. Current eligibility rules for public benefits and unenforceable financial support agreements have proved wholly incapable of assuring that individual aliens not burden the public benefits system.

The conferees further believe that it is a compelling government interest to enact new rules for eligibility and sponsorship agreements in order to assure that aliens be self-reliant in accordance with national immigration policy. It is also a compelling government interest to remove the incentive for illegal immigration provided by the availability of public benefits. Finally, with respect to the State authority to make determinations concerning alien eligibility for public benefits in this subtitle, a State that chooses to follow the Federal classifications in determining the eligibility of aliens for public benefits shall be considered to have chosen the least restrictive means available for achieving the compelling government interest of assuring that aliens be self-reliant in accordance with national immigration policy.

3. INELIGIBILITY OF NONIMMIGRANTS, ASYLEES, AND PAROLEES FOR CERTAIN FEDERAL BENEFITS PROGRAMS

A. IN GENERAL

Present law

The Immigration and Nationality Act lists 19 categories of nonimmigrant aliens, including tourists, business visitors, foreign students, exchange visitors, temporary workers, and diplomats. Aliens granted political asylum and aliens allowed into the U.S. under the Attorney General's discretionary parole power are not among the nonimmigrant categories. Nonimmigrants generally are denied benefits under public benefits programs that have alienage restrictions. By contrast, asylees and parolees are not disqualified.

House bill

Aliens who are lawfully in the U.S. as nonimmigrants are ineligible for means-tested Federal benefits, other than the programs excepted below. Nonimmigrants admitted as temporary agricultural workers are not to be treated as nonimmigrants for public benefits purposes, but rather are to be treated as immigrants. Other aliens who also are not to be treated as nonimmigrants include aliens granted asylum and aliens paroled into the U.S. for 1 year or longer. However, aliens paroled into the U.S. for a period briefer than 1 year are subject to the nonimmigrant restrictions.

Senate amendment

Nonimmigrant aliens are not considered lawfully present for Federal benefits purposes, and are thus ineligible for any Federal benefit other than the programs specifically excepted below.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment, as described in section 2 above.

The conferees believe that, as a matter of national immigration policy regarding immigration and welfare, self-sufficiency has been a basic principle of United States immigration law since this country's earliest immigration statutes.

It continues to be the immigration policy of the United States that aliens within the nation's borders not depend on mandatory taxpayer-funded public resources to meet their needs, but rather rely on their own capabilities and the resources of their families, their sponsors, and private organizations. The availability of taxpayer-funded public benefits should not constitute an incentive for immigration to the United States.

Despite the principle of self-sufficiency, aliens have been applying for and receiving public benefits from Federal, State, and local governments at increasing rates. Current eligibility rules for public benefits and unenforceable financial support agreements have proved wholly incapable of assuring that individual aliens not burden the public benefits system.

The conferees further believe that it is a compelling government interest to enact new rules for eligibility and sponsorship agreements in order to assure that aliens be self-reliant in accordance with national immigration policy. It is also a compelling government interest to remove the incentive for illegal immigration provided by the availability of public benefits. Finally, with respect to the State authority to make determinations concerning alien eligibility for public benefits in this subtitle, a State that chooses to follow the Federal classifications in determining the eligibility of aliens for public benefits shall be considered to have chosen the least restrictive means available for achieving the compelling government interest of assuring that aliens be self-reliant in accordance with national immigration policy.

B. EXCEPTED PROGRAMS

Present law

Of Federal programs with alien eligibility restrictions, nonimmigrants are eligible for emergency services under Medicaid. Temporary agricultural workers may receive legal services funded through the Legal Services Corporation with respect to their wages, housing, and other employment rights covered by their employment contract. Those nonimmigrants whose wages are not exempt from unemployment taxes (FUTA) may qualify for unemployment compensation under certain circumstances.

House bill

Exception to the bill's blanket denial of Federal means-tested assistance to nonimmigrants is made for Emergency Assistance, including non-cash emergency medical services. Housing-related assistance is not covered by the bill's general rule, but rather existing restrictions under housing programs are to continue to apply. These restrictions deny assisted housing to nonimmigrants except as they may incidentally benefit as members of mixed families. However, all aliens granted parole are eligible for housing assistance.

Senate amendment

Permits nonimmigrants (and all others who are not lawfully present) to receive: emergency medical services under Medicaid; short-term emergency disaster relief; school lunch and child nutrition assistance; and public health assistance for immunizations and, if found necessary by HHS, testing for and treatment of communicable diseases.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment, as described in section 2 above.

The allowance for treatment of communicable diseases is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply where absolutely necessary to prevent the spread of such diseases. This is only a stop-gap measure until the deportation of a person or persons unlawfully here. It is not intended to provide authority for continued treatment of such diseases for a long term.

The allowance for emergency medical services under Medicaid is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply to medical care that is strictly of an emergency nature, such as medical treatment administered in an emergency room, critical care unit, or intensive care unit. The conferees do not intend that emergency medical services include pre-natal or delivery care assistance that is not strictly of an emergency nature as specified herein.

C. TREATMENT OF ALIENS PAROLED INTO THE U.S.

Present law

In some cases, aliens paroled into the U.S. are entitled to public benefits while they remain in parole status.

House bill

Aliens paroled into the U.S. for less than 1 year are treated as nonimmigrants for benefits purposes (i.e., general ineligibility) but aliens paroled into the U.S. for longer than 1 year are treated as immigrants (i.e. somewhat broader, but still limited, eligibility).

Senate amendment

Aliens who have been paroled into the U.S. for a period of less than 1 year are not considered to be lawfully present for benefits purposes and therefore are generally ineligible for benefits. (Aliens who have been paroled into the U.S. for a period of 1 year or longer are considered to be lawfully present.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment, as described in section 2 above.

4. LIMITED ELIGIBILITY OF LAWFULLY PRESENT ALIENS (OTHER THAN NONIMMIGRANTS) FOR FEDERAL BENEFITS

A. IN GENERAL

Present law

With the exception of certain buy-in rights under Medicare, immigrants (or aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence) are eligible for major Federal benefits, but the ability of some immigrants to meet the needs tests for SSI, AFDC, and food stamps may be affected by the sponsor-to-alien deeming provisions discussed below. Refugees, asylees, and parolees also generally are eligible. Benefits are permitted under AFDC, SSI, unemployment compensation, and nonemergency Medicaid to other aliens permanently residing in the U.S. under color of law (PRUCOL).

House bill

With certain specific exceptions noted below, any alien who is lawfully present in the U.S. shall not be eligible for any of the following Federal means-tested public benefits programs (except as they provide non-cash, in-kind emergency services): Supplemental Security Income, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families, Social Services Block Grant (Title XX), Medicaid, and Food Stamps.

Under programs other than the foregoing 5 major benefits programs, the eligibility of lawfully present aliens (other than nonimmigrants) for benefits would continue to be governed by current law as modified by the sponsor-to-alien deeming provisions discussed below. The Attorney General is to determine which aliens are "lawfully present" and is not bound in doing so by current interpretations of "PRUCOL", or "permanently residing under color of law."

Senate amendment

Except for specific classes noted below, all aliens are to be denied SSI.

Except for specific classes and programs noted below, all aliens arriving after enactment are ineligible for all Federal needs-based assistance for 5 years after entry.

Except for specific classes and programs noted below, States may deny noncitizens need-based assistance funded by the Federal Government (e.g., Temporary Assistance for Needy Families and similar block grants).

For lawfully present aliens who are in the U.S. on the date of enactment and who have been here 5 years, current rules will continue to apply to programs other than SSI, except as eligibility may be affected by the State option to deny noncitizens needs-based assistance funded by Federal funds.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment with the following modifications:

(1) current resident aliens and those arriving after enactment (with the exception of the specific classes described below) may not receive SSI or food stamps until attaining citizenship or working long enough (that is, at least 10 years) to qualify for Social Security retirement benefits;

(2) aliens have no entitlement to benefits;

(3) States have the option of providing benefits to lawfully present aliens under the TANF, Medicaid, or Title XX programs; and

(4) new entrants are denied benefits under all mandatory Federal means-tested programs for five years after their entry into the U.S. with the exception of those programs described in section (4)(B) below.

B. EXCEPTED PROGRAMS

Present law

Not applicable. (See above.)

House bill

Only exception is for non-cash, in-kind emergency services, as described above.

Senate amendment

The 5-year bar on Federally-funded assistance to new arrivals does not apply to:

(1) emergency medical services under Medicaid;

(2) short-term emergency disaster relief;

(3) assistance under the National School Lunch Act or the Child Nutrition Act of 1966;

(4) the Head Start program;

(5) foster care and adoption assistance (but foster parents or adoptive parents cannot be aliens who are ineligible for benefits due to this provision);

(6) public health assistance for immunizations and, if found necessary by HHS, testing for and treatment of communicable diseases; and

(7) programs specified by the Attorney General that (i) deliver services at the community level, (ii) do not condition assistance on the recipient's income or resources, and (iii) are necessary to protect life, safety, or public health (e.g. soup kitchens).

States may deny needs-based assistance funded by the Federal government to all noncitizens except (1) programs described above in 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, or 7; or (2) assistance to noncitizens in the classes described below.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification that the following programs are also excepted: (1) programs of student assistance under titles IV, V, IX, and X of the Higher Education Act of 1965, and (2) means-tested programs under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

C. EXCEPTED CLASSES

Present law

Not applicable. (See above.)

House bill

Excepted are: (i) refugees during their first 5 years in the U.S. (ii) aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the U.S. for permanent residence, are over 75 years of age, and have resided in U.S. for at least 5 years; (iii) honorably discharged veterans and active duty personnel or their spouses and unmarried dependent children lawfully residing in any State or territory or possession of the U.S.; (iv) aliens lawfully residing in any State or Territory or Possession of the U.S. during the first year of enactment; and (v) immigrants who are unable to comply with naturalization requirements because of disability or mental impairment.

Senate amendment

Excepted are: (i) refugees during their first 5 years in the U.S.; (ii) honorably discharged veterans (if determined by the Attorney General to be lawfully present), and their spouses and unmarried dependent children; (iii) aliens receiving SSI benefits on the date of enactment (whose eligibility would end) will remain eligible for SSI until January 1, 1997; (iv) asylees (including those who have had deportation stayed because it would return them to a country which would persecute them) during their first 5 years in the U.S.; (v) noncitizens who have worked long enough to be fully insured for Social Security or disability insurance benefits are exempt from the ban on SSI and the prospective 5 year ban; and (vi) agencies may exempt individuals who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty from the denial of State-administered Federal benefits (and the sponsor-alien "deeming" provision discussed below) if the resulting denial of assistance will endanger their well-being.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment so that the following classes are excepted:

(1) refugees (during their first 5 years in the U.S.), asylees (for 5 years after being adjudicated as an asylee), and aliens whose deportation has been withheld (during their first 5 years after their deportation has been withheld);

(2) aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the U.S. for permanent residence and have worked at least 40 quarters (that is, at least 10 years which is currently the criteria for eligibility for Social Security retirement benefits), when a worker reaches retirement age;

(3) honorably discharged veterans and active duty personnel or their spouses and unmarried dependent children lawfully residing in any State, territory, or possession of the U.S.; and

(4) lawfully present aliens receiving SSI or food stamps on the date of enactment, whose eligibility would end January 1, 1997.

D. EFFECTIVE DATE(S)

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

In general, applies to applicants for benefits after the date of enactment. For current residents of the U.S. on the date of enactment, restriction on eligibility does not apply until 1 year after enactment.

Senate amendment

In general, applies to benefits on or after the date of enactment. Current SSI recipients lose eligibility after January 1, 1997. The Attorney General must adopt regulations to verify the eligibility of applicants for Federal benefits no later than 18 months after enactment. States must have a verification system that complies with these regulations within 24 months of their adoption.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification that the eligibility of current resident noncitizens receiving SSI and food stamps on the date of enactment ends for months beginning on or after January 1, 1997.

E. REAPPLICATION

Present law

An individual who is eligible for SSI but who thereafter becomes ineligible for a period of 12 consecutive months must reapply for benefits.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Individuals receiving SSI benefits on the date of enactment who are notified of their termination of eligibility may reapply for benefits within 4 months after the date of enactment. The Commissioner of Social Security shall determine within 1 year of enactment the eligibility of individuals who reapply within 1 year after enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification that similar reapplication procedures are established with regard to food stamps.

5. NOTIFICATION

Present law

Under regulation, individual advance written notice must be given of an intent to suspend, reduce, or terminate SSI benefits.

House bill

Each Federal Agency that administers an affected program shall post information and provide general notification to the public and to program recipients of changes regarding eligibility.

Senate amendment

The Commissioner of Social Security shall notify noncitizens made ineligible for SSI benefits within 3 months after the date of enactment.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

6. VERIFICATION AND INFORMATION SHARING

Present law

State agencies that administer most major Federal programs with alienage restrictions generally use the SAVE (Systematic Alien Verification for Entitlements) system to verify the immigration status of aliens applying for benefits.

AFDC and SSI require safeguards that restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants or recipients to purposes connected to the administration of needs-based Federal programs.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Attorney General must adopt regulations to verify the lawful presence of applicants for Federal benefits no later than 18 months after enactment. States must have a verification system that complies with these regulations within 24 months of their adoption.

The agencies which administer SSI, housing assistance programs under the United States Housing Act of 1937, or block grants for temporary assistance for needy families (the successor program to AFDC) are required to furnish information to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) about aliens they know to be unlawfully in the United States at least 4 times annually and upon INS request.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except with regard to agencies required to furnish information to the INS, which was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

CHAPTER 2—ELIGIBILITY FOR STATE AND LOCAL PUBLIC BENEFITS PROGRAMS

7. INELIGIBILITY OF ILLEGAL ALIENS FOR STATE AND LOCAL PUBLIC BENEFITS PROGRAMS

Present law

Under Plyler v. Doe (457 U.S. 202 (1982)), States may not deny illegal alien children access to a public elementary education. However, the narrow 5–4 Supreme Court decision may imply that illegal aliens may be denied at least some State benefits and that Congress may influence the eligibility of illegal aliens for State benefits. Many, but not all, State general assistance laws currently deny illegal aliens means-tested general assistance.

House bill

No alien who is not lawfully present in the U.S. shall be eligible for any State and local means-tested public benefits programs (see definitions below). The only exception is emergency medical services.

Senate amendment

No provision affects programs wholly administered and funded by State or local governments. Aliens who are not lawfully present are ineligible for benefits paid with Federal funds under State-administered programs (or paid with State funds pursuant to such programs).

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

8. INELIGIBILITY OF NONIMMIGRANTS FOR STATE AND LOCAL PUBLIC BENEFITS PROGRAMS

Present law

Currently, there is no Federal law barring nonimmigrants from State and local needs-based programs. In general, States are restricted in denying assistance to nonimmigrants where the denial is inconsistent with the terms under which the nonimmigrants were admitted. Where a denial of benefits is not inconsistent with Federal immigration law, however, States have broader authority to deny benefits and States often do deny certain benefits to nonimmigrants. Also, aliens in most nonimmigrant categories generally may have difficulty qualifying for many State and local benefits because of requirements that they be State "residents."

House bill

No alien who is lawfully present in the U.S. as a non-immigrant shall be eligible for any State and local means-tested public benefit programs. Exceptions for: non-cash emergency assistance (including emergency medical services) aliens granted asylum, and certain temporary agricultural workers who are treated as immigrants for purposes of application for State and local means-tested benefits (see below). Aliens paroled into the U.S. for a period of less than 1 year are considered to be nonimmigrants under this part.

Senate amendment

No provision affects programs wholly administered and funded by State or local governments. Nonimmigrants are not considered to be lawfully present for Federal benefits purposes and are thus ineligible for benefits paid with Federal funds under State-administered programs (or paid with State funds pursuant to such programs).

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

9. STATE AUTHORITY TO LIMIT ELIGIBILITY OF IMMIGRANTS FOR STATE AND LOCAL MEANS–TESTED PUBLIC BENEFITS PROGRAMS

Present law

Under Graham v. Richardson (403 U.S. 365 (1971)), States are barred from denying legal permanent residents from State-funded assistance that is provided to equally needy citizens.

House bill

States are authorized to determine eligibility requirements for aliens who are lawfully present in the U.S. for any State and local means-tested public benefit program (other than non-cash emergency assistance, including emergency medical services), with exception of:

(i) refugees during their first 5 years in the U.S.;

(ii) Aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the U.S. for permanent residence, are over 75 years of age, and have resided in U.S. for five years;

(iii) Honorably discharged veterans and active duty personnel or their spouses and unmarried dependent children lawfully residing in any State or territory or possession of the U.S.; and

(iv) Aliens lawfully residing in any State or Territory or possession of the U.S. during the first year after the date of enactment. Aliens lawfully present would remain eligible for emergency medical services.

In addition to enhancing State discretion to impose alienage restrictions, eligibility for State and local needs-based benefits also would be restricted by application of new sponsor-to-alien deeming requirements discussed below.

Senate amendment

No provision restricts benefits wholly funded by State or local governments, but States may use the sponsor-alien deeming provisions, described below, to determine whether a sponsored individual qualifies for assistance under such a program.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

CHAPTER 3—ATTRIBUTION OF INCOME AND AFFIDAVITS OF SUPPORT

10. REQUIREMENTS FOR AFFIDAVITS OF SUPPORT

A. WHEN REQUIRED AND ENFORCEABILITY

Present law

Administrative authorities may request an affidavit of support on behalf of an alien seeking permanent residency. Requirements for affidavits of support are not specified under current law.

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, an alien who is likely to become a public charge may be excluded from entry unless this restriction is waived, as is the case for refugees. By regulation and administrative practice, the State Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service permit a prospective permanent resident alien (also immigrant or green card holder) who otherwise would be excluded as a public charge (i.e., insufficient means or prospective income) to overcome exclusion through an affidavit of support or similar document executed by an individual in the U.S. Individuals who execute affidavits of support commonly are called sponsors, even though that term also is used under immigration practice to refer to individuals and other entities who undertake various other acts (e.g., file a visa preference petition for a relative or prospective employee or undertake to resettle individuals who enter in refugee status) and who may or may not also execute affidavits of support. About one-half of the aliens who obtain legal permanent resident status have had affidavits of support filed on their behalf.

Various State court decisions and decisions by immigration courts have held that these affidavits, as currently constituted, do not impose a binding obligation on the sponsor to reimburse State agencies providing aid to the sponsored alien.

House bill

When affidavits of support are required, they must comply with the following:

(A) no affidavit of support may be accepted to overcome a public charge exclusion unless the affidavit is executed as a contract that is legally enforceable against the sponsor by the Federal Government and by any State or local government with respect to any means-tested benefits paid to the sponsored alien before the alien becomes a citizen. However, affidavits of support are not to be construed to provide any right to sponsored aliens;

(B) any Federal, State or local means-tested benefits paid to sponsored alien;

(C) to qualify to execute an affidavit of support, an individual must be within the definition of sponsor set out in item G(1), below;

(D) governmental entities that provide benefits may seek reimbursement up to 10 years after a sponsored alien last receives benefits. In the affidavit of support, the sponsor must agree to submit to the jurisdiction of any Federal or State court regarding reimbursement of the cost of benefits received by the alien; and

(E) sponsorship extends until alien becomes a citizen.

Senate amendment

When affidavits of support are required, they must comply with the following:

(A) no affidavit of support may be relied upon to overcome a public charge exclusion unless the affidavit is executed as a contract that is legally enforceable against the sponsor by the sponsored alien and by Federal, State, and local governmental entities that provide the sponsored alien with means-tested assistance during the support period described below;

(B) programs for which reimbursement shall be requested are: (1) AFDC or its successor; (2) Medicaid; (3) Food Stamps; (4) SSI; (5) any State general assistance program; and (6) any other Federal, State, or local need-based program. However, governmental entities cannot seek reimbursement with respect to (1) emergency medical services under Medicaid; (2) short-term emergency disaster relief; (3) assistance provided under the National School Lunch Act or the Child Nutrition Act of 1966; (4) the Head Start program; (5) public health assistance for immunizations and, if determined necessary by HHS, testing for or treatment of communicable diseases; and (6) programs specified by the Attorney General that (i) deliver services at the community level, (ii) do not condition assistance on the recipient's income or resources, and (iii) are necessary to protect life, safety, or public health (e.g., soup kitchens);

(C) to qualify to execute an affidavit of support, an individual must be within the definition of sponsor set out in item G(1), below;

(D) governmental entities may seek reimbursement of other means-tested assistance up to 10 years after a sponsored alien last receives benefits. In the affidavit of support, the sponsor must agree to submit to the jurisdiction of any Federal or State court regarding reimbursement of the cost of benefits received by the alien; and

(E) sponsor must agree in the affidavit of support to provide sufficient financial support so that the sponsored individual will not become a public charge until the individual has worked in the U.S. for 40 qualifying quarters, regardless of whether the individual chooses to naturalize or not. A qualifying quarter is a 3-month period (1) which counts as a quarter for the purposes of social security coverage, (2) during which the individual did not receive needs-based assistance, and (3) which occurs in a tax year for which the individual had income tax liability.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment as follows:

When affidavits of support are required, they must comply with the following:

(A) no affidavit of support may be accepted to overcome a public charge exclusion unless the affidavit is executed as a contract that is legally enforceable against the sponsor by the Federal Government with respect to any mandatory means-tested benefits paid to the sponsored alien before the alien becomes a citizen. However, affidavits of support are not to be construed to provide any right to sponsored aliens;

(B) programs for which reimbursement shall be requested are: (1) AFDC or its successor; (2) Medicaid; (3) Food Stamps; (4) SSI; and (5) other mandatory Federal need-based programs. However, governmental entities cannot seek reimbursement with respect to (1) emergency medical services under Medicaid; (2) short-term emergency disaster relief; (3) assistance provided under the National School Lunch Act or the Child Nutrition Act of 1966; (4) the Head Start program; (5) public health assistance for immunizations and, if determined necessary by HHS, testing for or treatment of communicable diseases; (6) programs specified by the Attorney General that (i) deliver services at the community level, (ii) do not condition assistance on the recipient's income or resources, and (iii) are necessary to protect life, safety, or public health (e.g., soup kitchens); and (7) postsecondary education benefits (however, in the event a permanent resident alien applies for Federal student loans, the sponsor or citizen must cosign the loan);

(C) to qualify to execute an affidavit of support, an individual must be within the definition of sponsor set out in item G(1), below;

(D) governmental entities that provide benefits may seek reimbursement up to 10 years after a sponsored alien last receives benefits. In the affidavit of support, the sponsor must agree to submit to the jurisdiction of any Federal or State court regarding reimbursement of the cost of benefits received by the alien; and

(E) sponsorship extends until alien becomes a citizen.

The allowance for treatment of communicable diseases is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply where absolutely necessary to prevent the spread of such diseases. This is only a stopgap measure until the deportation of a person or persons unlawfully here. It is not intended to provide authority for continued treatment of such diseases for a long term.

The allowance for emergency medical services under Medicaid is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply to medical care that is strictly of an emergency nature, such as medical treatment administered in an emergency room, critical care unit, or intensive care unit. The conferees do not intend that emergency medical services include pre-natal or delivery care assistance that is not strictly of an emergency nature as specified herein.

B. FORMS

Present law

No statutory provision. The Department of Justice issues a form (Form I–134) that complies with current sponsorship guidelines.

House bill

The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Secretary of HHS, shall formulate an affidavit of support within 90 days after enactment, consistent with this section.

Senate amendment

The Attorney General, the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of HHS shall jointly formulate an affidavit of support within 90 days after enactment, consistent with this section.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Nothing in this section shall be construed to grant third party beneficiary rights to any sponsored alien under an affidavit of support.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment expressly requires that affidavits of support permit sponsored individuals to enforce support obligations of their sponsors as contained in the affidavits.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

D. NOTIFICATION OF CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Present law

There is no express requirement under current administrative practice that sponsors inform welfare agencies of a change in address. However, a sponsored alien who applies for benefits for which deeming is required must provide various information regarding the alien's sponsor.

House bill

Until they no longer are potentially liable for reimbursement of benefits paid to sponsored aliens, sponsors must notify welfare agencies of any change of their address within 30 days of moving. Failure to notify may result in a civil penalty of up to $2,000 or, if the failure occurs after knowledge that the sponsored alien has received a reimbursable benefit, of up to $5,000.

Senate amendment

Until they no longer are potentially liable for reimbursement of benefits paid to sponsored individuals, sponsors must notify the Attorney General and the State, district, territory or possession in which the sponsored individual resides of any change of their address within 30 days of moving. Failure to notify may result in a civil penalty of up to $2,000 or, if the failure occurs after knowledge that the sponsored individual has received a reimbursable benefit, of up to $5,000.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

E. REIMBURSEMENT PROCEDURES

Present law

Various State court decisions and decisions by immigration courts have held that these affidavits, as currently constituted, do not impose a binding obligation on the sponsor to reimburse State agencies providing aid to the sponsored alien.

House bill

If a sponsored alien receives any benefit under any means-tested public assistance program, the appropriate Federal, State, or local official shall request reimbursement by the sponsor in the amount of such assistance. Thereafter the official may seek reimbursement in court if the sponsor fails to respond within 45 days of the request that the sponsor is willing to begin repayments. The official also may seek reimbursement through the courts within 60 days after a sponsor fails to comply with the terms of repayment. The Attorney General in consultation with the Secretary of HHS, shall prescribe regulations on requesting reimbursement. No action may be brought later than 10 years after the alien last received benefits.

Senate amendment

Upon notification that a sponsored individual has received a reimbursable need-based benefit (see above), the appropriate government official shall request reimbursement in accordance with the same procedures and limitations that are in the House bill. The Commissioner of Social Security is to prescribe regulations for requesting reimbursement from sponsors, and such regulations must include the notification of sponsors (at their last known address) by certified mail.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

F. JURISDICTION

Present law

State law sets forth which types of cases its courts will hear, subject to due process requirements on minimal connections between activities, people, or property within the State and the matter being litigated.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

No State court shall decline for lack of jurisdiction to hear any action brought against a sponsor for reimbursement for the cost of any benefit if the sponsored individual received public assistance while residing in the State.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The conferees intend that both Federal and State courts have jurisdiction over reimbursement actions against a sponsor.

G. DEFINITIONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

A "Sponsor" is an individual who (1) is a citizen or national of the U.S. or an alien who is lawfully admitted to the U.S. for permanent residence; (2) is at least 18 years of age; and (3) resides in any State.

A "Means-Tested Public Benefits Program" is a program of public benefits of the Federal, State or local government in which eligibility or the amount of benefits or both are determined on the basis of income, resources, or financial need.

Senate amendment

A "Sponsor" is an individual who (1) is a citizen or national of the U.S. or an alien who is lawfully admitted to the U.S. for permanent residence; (2) is at least 18 years of age; (3) resides in any

State or U.S. territory; and (4) is able to demonstrate (through evidence which includes attested copies of tax returns for the 2 most recent tax years) the means to maintain an income equal to 200% of the Federal poverty line for the individual and the individual's family, including the person sponsored.

"Federal Poverty Line" has the same meaning as in section 673(2) of the Community Services Block Grant Act.

A "Qualifying Quarter" is a 3-month period (1) in which the sponsored individual earned at least the minimum necessary for the period to count as one of 40 calendar quarters required to qualify for Social Security retirement benefits; (2) during which the sponsored individual did not receive need-based public assistance; and (3) which falls within a tax year for which the sponsored individual had income tax liability.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment, except that the sponsor is not required to demonstrate the means to maintain an income equal to 200% of the poverty level and the Senate recedes on the conditions that a qualifying quarter is (1) one in which the sponsored individual did not receive need-based public assistance, and (2) which falls within a tax year for which the sponsored individual has tax liability. The sponsor must also be the person petitioning for the alien's admission.

H. CLERICAL AMENDMENT

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

A minor clerical amendment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

I. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

The changes regarding affidavits of support shall apply to affidavits of support executed no earlier than 60 days or later than 90 days after the Attorney General promulgates the form.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

11. ATTRIBUTION OF SPONSOR'S INCOME AND RESOURCES TO SPONSORED IMMIGRANTS

A. FEDERAL BENEFITS

Present law

In determining whether an alien meets the means test for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Supplemental Security Income (SSI), and Food Stamps, the resources and income of an individual who filed an affidavit of support for the alien (and the income and resources of the individual's spouse) are taken into account during a designated period after entry.

House bill

During the applicable deeming period, the income and resources of an individual who files a binding affidavit of support (as required above) for an alien (and the income and resources of the individual's spouse) are taken into account under all Federal means-tested programs (with the exception of housing-related assistance) in determining a sponsored alien's neediness. Current law remains effective for aliens whose sponsors filed affidavits before the new affidavit requirements become effective (60–90 days after enactment).

Senate amendment

During the applicable deeming period, the income and resources of an individual who filed an affidavit of support for an alien (and the income and resources of the individual's spouse) are to be taken into account under all Federally-funded means-tested programs (with the exception of the programs below) in determining the sponsored individual's neediness.

Excepted programs are (1) emergency Medicaid services; (2) short-term emergency disaster relief; (3) assistance provided under the National School Lunch Act or the Child Nutrition Act of 1966; (4) the Head Start program; (5) public health assistance for immunizations and, if determined by HHS, testing for or treatment of communicable diseases; and (6) programs specified by the Attorney General that (i) deliver services at the community level, (ii) do not condition assistance on the recipient's income or resources, and (iii) are necessary to protect life, safety, or public health (e.g. soup kitchens).

Individuals who are exempt from deeming include (1) honorably discharged legal alien veterans and their spouses and unmarried children; (2) refugees; (3) asylees (including aliens who have had their deportation stayed because it would return them to a country which will persecute them); and (4) individuals who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty, if application of deeming would endanger their well-being.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except that post-secondary education is included as an excepted program and battered individuals are not included as an excepted class.

The allowance for treatment of communicable diseases is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply where absolutely necessary to prevent the spread of such diseases. This is only a stop-gap measure until the deportation of a person or persons unlawfully here. It is not intended to provide authority for continued treatment of such diseases for a long term.

The allowance for emergency medical services under Medicaid is very narrow. The conferees intend that it only apply to medical care that is strictly of an emergency nature, such as medical treatment administered in an emergency room, critical care unit, or intensive care unit. The conferees do not intend that emergency medical services include pre-natal or delivery care assistance that is not strictly of an emergency nature as specified herein.

B. AMOUNT OF INCOME AND RESOURCES DEEMED

Present law

While the offset formulas vary among the programs, the amount of income and resources deemed under AFDC, SSI, and Food Stamps is reduced by certain offsets to provide for some of the sponsor's own needs.

House bill

The full income and resources of the sponsor and the sponsor's spouse are deemed to be that of the sponsored alien.

Senate amendment

If an agency determines that a sponsored individual would not be able to obtain food and shelter without the agency's assistance (taking into account the income and resources actually provided to the individual by the sponsor and others), then deeming will not apply for a period of 12 months and the agency need take into account during this period only the amount of support the sponsor actually provides.

If the address of the sponsor is unknown to the sponsored individual, then assistance is provided until 12 months after the sponsor is located.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. LENGTH OF DEEMING PERIOD

Present law

For AFDC and Food Stamps, sponsor-to-alien deeming applies to a sponsored alien seeking assistance within 3 years of entry. Until September 1996, sponsor-to-alien deeming applies to a sponsored alien seeking SSI within 5 years of entry.

House bill

For aliens whose sponsors have filed binding affidavits of support as required above, the sponsors' income and resources are deemed to the alien until the alien becomes a citizen. Current law remains effective for aliens whose sponsors filed affidavits before the new affidavit requirements become effective (60–90 days after enactment).

Senate amendment

Deeming applies until the immigrant has worked 40 qualifying quarters (the period of time future sponsors must agree to support the immigrant) or for 5 years from the alien's arrival in the U.S. (for current noncitizens), whichever is longer. Deeming continues until the above requirements are met, regardless of whether the immigrant naturalizes or not. [A qualifying quarter is a 3-month period (1) in which the sponsored individual earned at least the minimum necessary for the period to count as one of 40 calendar quarters required to qualify for Social Security retirement benefits; (2) during which the sponsored individual did not receive need-based public assistance; and (3) which falls within a tax year for which the sponsored individual had income tax liability.]

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

D. STATE AND LOCAL BENEFITS

Present law

The highest courts of at least 2 States have held that the Supreme Court decision barring State discrimination against legal aliens in providing State benefits (Graham v. Richardson, 403 U.S. 365 (1971)) prohibits State sponsor-to-alien deeming requirements for State benefits.

House bill

In determining the eligibility and amount of benefits of an alien for any State or local means-tested public benefit program, the income and resources of the alien shall be deemed to include the income and resources of their sponsor (and their sponsor's spouse). Housing related assistance continues to be treated as under current law.

Senate amendment

With the exception of those programs exempted from all benefit restrictions (see above) and those aliens exempt from deeming requirements, States and local governments may deem a sponsor's income and resources (and those of the sponsor's spouse) to a sponsored individual in determining eligibility for and the amount of needs-based benefits. State deeming provisions must also provide for temporary assistance if the sponsor is not assisting the sponsored individual or cannot be located.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

CHAPTER 4—GENERAL PROVISIONS

12. DEFINITIONS

A. IN GENERAL

Present law

Federal assistance programs that have alien eligibility restrictions generally reference specific classes defined in the Immigration and Nationality Act.

House bill

Unless otherwise provided, the terms used in this title have the same meaning as defined in Section 101(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. LAWFUL PRESENCE

Present law

Some programs allow benefits for otherwise eligible aliens who are "permanently residing under color of law (PRUCOL)." This term is not defined under the Immigration and Nationality Act, and there has been some inconsistency in determining which classes of aliens fit within the PRUCOL standard.

House bill

For purposes of this Title, the determination of whether an alien is lawfully present in the U.S. shall be made in accordance with regulations issued by the Attorney General. An alien shall not be considered to be lawfully present in the U.S. merely because the alien may be considered to be permanently residing in the U.S. under color of law ("PRUCOL") for purposes of any particular program.

Senate amendment

An individual is lawfully present if the individual is a citizen, non-citizen national (i.e. American Samoan), permanent resident alien, refugee, asylee (including an alien who has had his/her deportation stayed because it would return him/her to a country which would persecute him/her), or an alien who has been paroled into the U.S. by the Attorney General for at least 1 year. Individuals who are not lawfully present are ineligible for any Federal benefit.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification that eligibility is determined by specific classes of aliens, not whether noncitizens are "lawfully present."

C. STATE

Present law

There is no single definition of "State" for purposes of alien eligibility under Federal assistance programs. The Immigration and Nationality Act defines "State" to include the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

House bill

The term "State" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and American Samoa.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

D. PUBLIC BENEFITS PROGRAMS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

A "Means-Tested Program" is a program of public benefits of the Federal government in which eligibility for benefits under the program, or the amount of benefits, or both, are determined on basis of income, resources or financial need.

A "Federal Means-Tested Public Benefits Program" is a means-tested public benefit program of (or contributed to by) the Federal Government under which the Federal Government establishes standards for eligibility.

A "State Means-Tested Public Benefits Program" is a means-tested program of a State or political subdivision under which the State or political subdivision specifies the standards of eligibility, and does not include any Federal means-tested public benefits program.

Senate amendment

"Federal Benefit" means any grant, contract loan, professional or commercial license, retirement benefit, health or disability benefit, public housing, food stamps, higher education benefits, unemployment benefit, or any similar benefit provided by a Federal agency or with appropriated Federal funds. (Individuals who are not lawfully present are ineligible for Federal benefits.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

13. CONSTRUCTION

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Nothing in this title shall be construed as addressing alien eligibility for governmental programs that are not means-tested public benefits programs.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment's bar to Federal benefits for individuals who are not lawfully present covers a wide range of contracts, grants, licenses, and other assistance that is not means-tested.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with a clarification that the subtitle is silent on alien eligibility for a basic public elementary education as determined by the U.S. Supreme Court in Plyler v. Doe, 457 U.S. 202 (1982).

SUBTITLE E—CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

14. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO ASSISTED HOUSING

Present law

No provision.

House bill

A series of technical and conforming amendments.

Senate amendment

A series of technical and conforming amendments.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

SUBTITLE E—REDUCTION IN FEDERAL GOVERNMENT POSITIONS

This Subtitle was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

SUBTITLE F—HOUSING

This Subtitle was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

SUBTITLE F—NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE

DISPOSAL OF CERTAIN MATERIALS IN THE NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE FOR DEFICIT REDUCTION

House bill

Section 8021 of the House bill contained a provision that would authorize disposal of certain materials from the National Defense Stockpile.

Senate amendment

Section 2001 of the Senate amendment contained a similar provision.

Conference agreement

The conferees agree to a provision that would require disposal of certain materials, to result in receipts to the general fund of the Treasury equal to $649.0 million by the year 2002. The disposal authority of this provision would be considered new disposal authority, meaning that it is in addition to any other disposal authority provided by law, and the authority would expire after achieving the $649.0 million revenue target. The provision would require the President to dispose of materials previously authorized for disposal under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98h).

The conferees are confident that the Department of Defense process for conducting such disposals, to include review by the Market Impact Committee, will continue to ensure an orderly and successful disposal of Stockpile materials.

SUBTITLE G—CHILD PROTECTION BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM AND FOSTER CARE AND ADOPTION ASSISTANCE

1. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM

A. PURPOSE

Present law

Child Welfare Services, now provided for in Title IV–B of the Social Security Act, are designed to help States provide child welfare services, family preservation and community-based family support services, and improve State court procedures related to child welfare.

Title IV–E Foster Care and Title IV–E Adoption Assistance are intended to help States finance foster care and adoption assistance maintenance payments, administration, child placement services, and training related to foster care and adoption assistance.

The purpose of the Title IV–E Independent Living program is to help older foster children make the transition to independent living.

House bill

The House provision replaces Title IV–B and Title IV–E of the Social Security Act and several additional programs (see below) by establishing a block grant to enable eligible States to carry out child protection programs to:

(1) identify and assist families at risk of abusing or neglecting their children;

(2) operate a system for receiving reports of abuse or neglect of children;

(3) investigate families reported to abuse or neglect their children;

(4) provide support, treatment, and family preservation services to families which are, or are at risk of, abusing or neglecting their children;

(5) support children who must be removed from or who cannot live with their families;

(6) make timely decisions about permanent living arrangements for children who must be removed from or who cannot live with their families; and

(7) provide for continuing evaluation and improvement of child protection laws, regulations, and services.

Additional programs to be replaced are: the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act; the Abandoned Infants Assistance Act; adoption opportunities under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act; family support centers under the McKinney Homeless Assistance Act; grants to improve investigation and prosecution of child abuse cases, and children's advocacy centers under the Victims of Child Abuse Act; crisis nurseries under the Temporary Child Care and Crisis Nurseries Act; and Family Unification under Section 8 of the Housing Act.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment would leave intact child welfare services, foster care, adoption assistance and independent living, which are permanently authorized under Titles IV–B and IV–E of the Social Security Act. The Senate amendment would reauthorize the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act; adoption opportunities; abandoned infants assistance; missing children's assistance; investigation and prosecution grants, and children's advocacy centers under the Victims of Child Abuse Act. The amendment would repeal both the Temporary Child Care and Crisis Nurseries Act and the Family Support Centers under the McKinney Homeless Assistance Act.

The Senate amendment gives the Secretary authority under CAPTA to make grants to the States for purposes of assisting the States in improving the child protective service system of each State in:

(1) screening intake, assessing, and investigating of reports of abuse and neglect;

(2) creating and improving the use of multidisciplinary teams and interagency protocols to enhance investigations;

(3) improving case management and delivery of services;

(4) enhancing the general child protection system by improving risk and safety assessment tools and protocols and automation systems;

(5) developing, strengthening, and facilitating training opportunities and requirements for individuals overseeing and providing services to children and their families;

(6) developing and facilitating training protocols for individuals mandated to report child abuse or neglect;

(7) developing, strengthening, and supporting child abuse and neglect prevention, treatment, and research programs in the public and private sectors;

(8) developing, implementing, or operating information and education programs or training programs designed to improve the provision of services to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions; and

(9) developing and enhancing the capacity of community-based programs to integrate shared leadership strategies between parents and professionals to prevent and treat child abuse and neglect at the neighborhood level.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. ELIGIBLE STATES

ELIGIBLE STATE

Present law

To be eligible for funding under Title IV–B and IV–E, States must have State plans (developed jointly with the Secretary under Title IV–B, and approved by the Secretary under Title IV–E).

House bill

An "Eligible State" is one that, during the 3-year period that ends on October 1 of the fiscal year, has submitted to the Secretary a plan that describes how the State intends to pursue the purposes described above.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. See Item 6.I., below, for summary of State eligibility under CAPTA.

Conference agreement

An "Eligible State" is one that has submitted to the Secretary, not later than October 1, 1996 and every three years thereafter, a plan (as described below) which has been signed by the Chief Executive officer of the State.

OUTLINE OF CHILD PROTECTION PROGRAM

Present law

States must have a child welfare services plan developed jointly by the Secretary and the relevant State agency which provides for single agency administration and describe services to be provided and geographic areas where services will be available, among numerous other requirements. To receive their full allotment of incentive funds under Title IV–B, States also must comply with extensive Federal Section 427 protections. The State plan also must meet many other requirements, such as setting forth a 5-year statement of goals for family preservation and family support and assuring the review of progress toward those goals. For foster care and adoption assistance, States must submit for approval a Title IV–E plan providing for a foster care and adoption assistance program and satisfying numerous requirements. The Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act requires States to have in effect a law for reporting known and suspected child abuse and neglect as well as providing for prompt investigation of child abuse and neglect reports, among many other requirements.

House bill

A State plan must include the following outline of Child Protection Program including procedures to be used for:

a. receiving reports of child abuse or neglect;

b. investigating such reports;

c. protecting children in families in which child abuse or neglect is found to have occurred;

d. removing children from dangerous settings;

e. protecting children in foster care;

f. promoting timely adoptions;

g. protecting the rights of families, using adult relatives as the preferred placement for children separated from their parents if such relatives meet all relevant standards;

h. preventing child abuse and neglect; and

i. establishing and responding to citizen review panels.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. CAPTA requires a 5-year plan that is coordinated with the State plan for child welfare services and family preservation. For amendments to CAPTA requirements, see Section 6 of this document, below.

Conference agreement

A State plan must include information on the Child Protection Program including procedures to be used for:

a. receiving and assessing reports of child abuse or neglect;

b. investigating such reports;

c. with respect to families in which abuse or neglect has been confirmed, providing services or referral for services for families and children where the State makes a determination that the child may safely remain.

d. protecting children by removing them from dangerous settings and ensuring their placement in a safe environment;

e. providing training for individuals mandated to report suspected cases of child abuse or neglect;

f. protecting children in foster care;

g. promoting timely adoptions;

h. protecting the rights of families, using adult relatives as the preferred placement for children separated from their parents if such relatives meet all relevant standards;

h. providing services aimed at preventing child abuse and neglect; and

i. establishing and responding to citizen review panels.

Certifications

Present law

To receive funds under the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, States must have a law in effect that provides for reporting of known and suspected instances of child abuse and neglect and provides immunity from prosecution for reporters of abuse or neglect. States also must have a program to investigate allegations of abuse or neglect, must preserve confidentiality of records, provide that every abused or neglected child involved in a court proceeding is represented by a guardian ad litem. To receive funding under Title IV–B and IV–E of the Social Security Act, States must comply with certain procedures for removal of children from their families when necessary, and must develop case plans for each child that are reviewed at least every six months and contain specified information.

House bill

Also included in the submitted plan must be the following certifications:

a. certification of State law requiring reporting of child abuse and neglect;

b. certification of State program to investigate child abuse and neglect cases;

c. certification of State procedures for removal and placement of abused or neglected children;

d. certification of State procedures for developing and reviewing written plans for permanent placement of each child removed from the family that:

(1) specifies the goal for achieving a permanent placement for the child in a timely fashion;

(2) ensures that the plan is reviewed every 6 months; and

(3) ensures that information about the child is gathered regularly and placed in the case record;

e. certification that when the State begins operating under the block grant on or after October 1, 1995, families receiving adoption assistance payments at that time continue to receive adoption assistance payments;

f. certification of State program to provide Independent Living services to 16–19 year old youths (at State option to age 21) who are in the foster care system but have no family to turn to for support;

g. certification of State procedures to respond to reporting of medical neglect of disabled infants; and

h. a declaration of State child welfare goals; States must, within 3 years of the date of passage, report quantifiable information on whether they are making progress toward achieving their self-defined child protection goals. (See Data Collection and Reporting, item G. below).

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. CAPTA requires several certifications, many of which are identical to those outlined for the House bill. For amendments to CAPTA requirements, see Section 6 of this document, below.

Conference agreement

The following certifications must be included in the State plan:

(1) certification of State law requiring reporting of child abuse and neglect;

(2) certification of State procedures for the immediate screening, safety assessment, and prompt investigation of such reports;

(3) certification of State procedures for the removal and placement of abused or neglected children;

(4) certification of State laws requiring immunity from prosecution under State and local laws for individuals making good faith reports of suspected or known cases of child abuse or neglect;

(5) certification of State law and procedures for expungement of any public records on false or unsubstantiated cases;

(6) certification of State laws and procedures affording individuals an opportunity to appeal an official finding of abuse or neglect;

(7) certification of State procedures for developing and reviewing written plans for permanent placement of each child removed from the family that:

(A) specifies the goal for achieving a permanent placement for the child in a timely fashion;

(B) ensures that the plan is reviewed every 6 months; and

(C) ensures that information about the child is gathered regularly and placed in the case record;

(8) certification of State program to provide Independent Living services to 16–19 year old youths (at State option to age 21) who are in the foster care system but have no family to turn to for support;

(9) certification of State procedures to respond to reporting of medical neglect of disabled infants;

(10) a declaration of quantifiable State child welfare goals;

(11) with respect to fiscal years beginning on or after April 1, 1996, certification that—

(A) the State has completed an inventory of all children who, before the inventory, had been in foster care under the responsibility of the State for 6 months or more, which determined—

(i) the appropriateness of, and necessity for, the foster care placement;

(ii) whether the child could or should be returned to the parents of the child or should be freed for adoption or other permanent placement; and

(iii) the services necessary to facilitate the return of the child or the placement of the child for adoption or legal guardianship;

(B) is operating to the satisfaction of the Secretary—

(i) a statewide information system on children who are or have been in foster care in the last year;

(ii) a case review system for each child receiving foster care under the supervision of the State;

(iii) a service program designed to help children—

(I) return to families from which they have been removed; or

(12) certification of reasonable efforts to prevent placement of children in foster care; and

(13) certification of cooperative efforts to secure an assignment to the State of any rights to support on behalf of each child receiving foster care maintenance payments.

DETERMINATIONS

Present law

State Title IV–B plans are developed jointly with the Secretary. State Title IV–E plans must be approved by the Secretary. The Secretary must approve any plan that complies with statutory provisions.

House bill

The Secretary of HHS must determine whether the State plan includes all of the elements required above but cannot add new elements or review the adequacy of State procedures. The Secretary may not require a State to alter its child protection law regarding determination of the adequacy, type and timing of health care.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. See item 6.N., below for description of similar CAPTA provision on medical care.

Conference agreement

The Secretary of HHS must determine whether the State plan includes the required materials and certifications (except material related to the certification of State procedures to respond to reporting of medical neglect of disabled infants). The Secretary cannot add new elements beyond those listed above.

C. GRANTS TO STATES FOR CHILD PROTECTION

ENTITLEMENT

Present law

Titles IV–B and IV–E of the Social Security Act contain several types of funding, including substantial entitlement funding, for helping States provide assistance to troubled families and their children.

House bill

The block grant money is guaranteed funding to States. Each eligible State is entitled to receive from the Secretary an amount equal to the State share of the Child Protection Grant amount for fiscal years 1996 through 2000.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. See item 6, below for description of similar CAPTA provision.

Conference agreement

As explained above, the Child Protection Block Grant includes a capped entitlement component for States. Each eligible State is entitled to receive from the Secretary an amount equal to the State share of the Child Protection Grant amount which increases from $1.938 billion in 1996 to $2.593 in 2002. In addition, each eligible State is entitled to receive reimbursements, on an open-ended basis, for the State share of allowable expenditures on eligible children placed in qualified foster care and adoption.

CHILD PROTECTION GRANT AMOUNT

Present law

Federal funds for child welfare and child protection activities consist both of direct spending under Titles IV–B and IV–E of the Social Security Act, and appropriated funds under Title IV–B of the Social Security Act and selected additional programs, including the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act. (For additional programs, see Item 1.A. of this document, above.)

House bill

The Child Protection Grant amount is composed of both a direct spending component and an appropriated component as follows: $3.930 billion in 1996, $4.195 billion in 1997, $4.507 billion in 1998, $4.767 billion in 1999, and $5.071 billion in 2000 in direct spending; and $486 million in each year 1996–2000 in appropriated spending.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. The amendment authorizes a total of $263 million for fiscal year 1996 and such sums as necessary for fiscal year 1997 through fiscal year 2000 for State grants, State demonstration projects, discretionary activities and community-based family resource and support grants under CAPTA; adoption opportunities grants; and abandoned infants assistance grants.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement generally follows the House bill, with the modification that the discretionary component of the block grant was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

STATE SHARE

Present law

No specific allocation formula governs the allocation of foster care and adoption assistance funds to States; States are reimbursed on an open-ended entitlement basis for eligible expenditures on behalf of eligible children. Independent living allocations to States are based on each State's share of Title IV–E foster children in fiscal year 1984. Family violence grants are awarded on the basis of State population. [Note: The family violence program would not be repealed by H.R. 4.] Child abuse State grants and community-based family resource grants are awarded on the basis of population under the age of 18. State allocations for child welfare services under Title IV–B are based on per capita income and population age 21 and under.

House bill

"State Share" means each State receives the same proportion of the block grant each year as it received of payments to States by the Federal government for the following selected child welfare programs in either the average of years 1992 through 1994 or in 1994, whichever is greater:

a. foster care maintenance, administration, and training;
b. adoption assistance maintenance, administration, and training;
c. title IV–E independent living awards;
d. family violence and prevention services;
e. child abuse State grants;
f. child abuse community-based prevention grants; and
g. child welfare services.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. See Item 6, below, for description of similar CAPTA provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except the selected child welfare programs on which the State share is to be based are:

(1) foster care administration and training;
(2) adoption assistance administration and training;
(3) child welfare services;
(4) family preservation and family support; and
(5) independent living services.

DEFINITION OF STATE

Present law

Under Titles IV–B and IV–E of the Social Security Act, "State" means the 50 States and the District of Columbia. The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa receive funds through set-asides and under special rules.

House bill

"State" includes the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact.

Conference agreement

"State" includes the several States and the District of Columbia. The territories will carry out a child protection program in accordance with this part; entitlement funding is provided under section 1108 of the Social Security Act.

USE OF GRANT

Present law

Funds must be used for: "protecting and promoting the welfare of children . . . preventing unnecessary separation of children from their families . . . restoring children to their families if they have been removed . . . family preservation services . . . community-based family support services to promote the well-being of children and families and to increase parents' confidence and competence." Foster care maintenance and adoption assistance payments are an open-ended entitlement to individuals.

House bill

A State to which funds are paid under this section may use such funds in any manner that the State deems appropriate to accomplish the purposes of this part. Permissible spending includes, but is not limited to: abuse and neglect reporting systems, abuse and neglect prevention, family preservation, foster care, adoption, program administration, and training.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. CAPTA grants can be used for improving child protective services, investigation and reporting of abuse and neglect, case management and delivery of services to children and families, training for service providers and abuse reporters, demonstration projects, kinship care arrangements, abuse and neglect prevention, and similar activities.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill. A State to which funds are paid under this section may use such funds in any manner that the State deems appropriate to accomplish the purposes of this part.

TRANSFER OF FUNDS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

In fiscal year 1998 and succeeding years, States may transfer up to 30% of funds paid under this section for activities under any or all of the following: the temporary assistance for needy families block grant; the social services block grant under Title XX of the Social Security Act; the child care and development block grant; and any food and nutrition or employment and training grants enacted during the 104th Congress. Rules of the recipient program will apply to the transferred funds. Funds may be transferred into the Child Protection Block Grant from other block grants and are then subject to the rules of this part.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Conferees agree that no funds can be transferred out of the block grant.

TIMING OF EXPENDITURES

Present law

Provisions vary under programs to be replaced. Under Title IV–E, States have up to two fiscal years in which to claim reimbursement for expenditures.

House bill

A State to which funds are paid under this section for a fiscal year shall expend such funds not later than the end of the immediately succeeding fiscal year.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

RULE OF INTERPRETATION

Present law

For-profit foster care providers are not eligible for Federal funding under Title IV–E.

House bill

Nothing in this act shall preclude for-profit short- and long-term foster care facilities from being eligible to receive funds from this block grant.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

TIMING OF PAYMENTS

Present law

Under Title IV–B, the Secretary makes payments to States periodically. Under Title IV–E, the Secretary reimburses States for expenditures on a quarterly basis.

House bill

The Secretary must make payments on a quarterly basis.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

PENALTIES

Present law

States that do not comply with Section 427 child protections may not receive their share of Title IV–B appropriations above $141 million. However, effective April 1, 1996, these protections are to become State plan requirements and the incentive funding mechanism will no longer be in effect. Section 1123 of the Social Security Act requires the Secretary to establish by regulation a new Federal review system for child welfare, which would allow penalties for misuse of funds.

House bill

The Secretary must reduce amounts otherwise payable to a State by any amount which an audit conducted under the Single Audit Act finds has been used in violation of this part. The Secretary, however, shall not reduce any quarterly payment by more than 25 percent. The amount of misspent funds will be withheld from the State's payments during the following year, if necessary, to recover the full amount of the penalty.

If an audit conducted pursuant to the Single Audit Act finds that a State has reduced its level of expenditures in fiscal year 1996 or 1997 below its level of non–Federal expenditures in fiscal year 1995 under Title IV–B or Title IV–E, the Secretary must reduce subsequent amounts otherwise payable to the State by an amount equal to the difference between State spending in fiscal year 1995 and the current year.

The Secretary must reduce by 3 percent the amount otherwise payable to a State for a fiscal year if the State has not submitted a report required (see item 7 below) for the immediately preceding fiscal year within 6 months after the end of the year. The penalty may be rescinded if the report is submitted within 12 months after the end of the year.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, except that an additional penalty equal to 5% of a State's block grant amount will be imposed in cases where the Secretary finds that funds have been spent in violation of the part, or where a State has failed to meet its maintenance-of-effort requirement. States will be required to maintain 100% of their fiscal year 1995 non–Federal expenditure level in fiscal year 1996 and 1997, and 75% of such expenditures in subsequent years.

The agreement provides that the Secretary may not impose a penalty if she determines that the State has reasonable cause for failing to comply with the requirement. Further, a State must be informed before any penalty is imposed and be given an opportunity to enter into a corrective compliance plan. The agreement provides a series of deadlines for submission of such corrective compliance plans, and review by the Federal government.

LIMITATION ON FEDERAL AUTHORITY

Present law

See above.

House bill

Except as expressly provided in this part, the Secretary may not regulate the conduct of States under this part or enforce any provision of this part.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

D. CHILD PROTECTION STANDARDS

Present law

In order to receive its full share of appropriations for child welfare services under subpart 1 of Title IV–B, each State must meet section 427 protections, including requirements that it: conduct an inventory of children in foster care; operate a tracking system for all children in foster care; operate a case review system for all children in foster care; and conduct a service program to reunite foster children with their families if appropriate, or be placed for adoption or another permanent placement. In addition, if Federal appropriations for the program reach $325 million for two consecutive years, States also must implement a preplacement preventive services program to help children remain with their families. [This funding level has never been reached.] Effective April 1, 1996, these provisions are scheduled to become mandatory State plan requirements, rather than funding incentives, under legislation enacted on Oct. 31, 1994 (P.L. 103–432). States also will be required to review their policies and procedures regarding abandoned children and to implement policies and procedures considered necessary to enable permanent decisions to be made expeditiously with regard to placement of such children.

House bill

The following standards are included in the bill to indicate what States must do to assure the protection of children and to provide guidance to the Citizen Review Panels:

a. the primary standard by which child welfare system shall be judged is the protection of children;

b. each State shall investigate reports of abuse and neglect promptly;

c. children removed from their homes shall have a permanency plan and a dispositional hearing within 3 months after a fact-finding hearing; and

d. all child protection cases with an out-of-home placement shall be reviewed every 6 months unless the child is already in a long-term placement.

A State receiving funds from this block grant may consider: establishing a new type of permanent foster care placement referred to as "kinship care" in which adult relatives would be the preferred placement option if they met all relevant standards, and could receive needs-based payments and supportive services; and, in placing children for adoption, giving preference to adult relatives who meet applicable standards.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. CAPTA requires a number of certifications by the State, including several that are similar to standards in the House block grant. For details see Item 6.I., below.

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Under CAPTA, the Secretary may award grants to public entities to develop or implement procedures using adult relatives as the preferred placement for children removed from their home; see item 6.H. below.

Conference agreement

In order for a State to receive foster care maintenance payments such State must certify that it has conducted an inventory of children in foster care; is operating a tracking system for all children in foster care; is operating a case review system for all children in foster care; and conducting a service program to reunite foster children with their families if appropriate, or be placed for adoption or another permanent placement.

Effective April 1, 1996, these provisions are scheduled to become mandatory State plan requirements, rather than funding incentives, under legislation enacted on Oct. 31, 1994 (P.L. 103–432). States also will be required to review their policies and procedures regarding abandoned children and to implement policies and procedures considered necessary to enable permanent decisions to be made expeditiously with regard to placement of such children.

E. CITIZEN REVIEW PANELS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Each State to which funds are paid under this part must have at least three Citizen Review Panels. Each Panel is to be broadly representative of the community from which it is drawn.

The Panels, which must meet at least quarterly, are charged with the responsibility of reviewing cases from the child welfare system to determine whether State and local agencies receiving funds under this program are carrying out activities in accord with the State plan, are achieving the child protection standards, and are meeting any other child welfare criteria that the Panels consider important.

The members and staff of any Panel must not disclose to any person or government agency any information about specific cases. States must afford a Panel access to any information on any case that the Panel desires to review, and shall provide the Panels with staff assistance in performing their duties.

Panels must produce a public report after each meeting and States must include information in their annual report detailing their responses to the panel report and recommendations. (See Data Collection and Reporting, item G. below.)

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

F. CLEARINGHOUSE AND HOTLINE FOR MISSING AND RUNAWAY CHILDREN

Present law

The Missing Children's Assistance Act, authorized as part of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act, authorizes a toll-free hotline and national clearinghouse to collect and disseminate information about missing children.

House bill

The Attorney General of the United States shall have the authority to establish and operate a national information clearinghouse, including a 24-hour toll free telephone hotline, for information on missing children cases. An appropriation not to exceed $7 million per fiscal year is authorized for this purpose.

Senate amendment

Reauthorizes the Missing Children's Assistance Act through FY 1997 (see Item 12.A. of this document, below).

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

G. DATA COLLECTION AND REPORTING

Present law

States are not required to report specific child welfare data. Section 479 requires the Secretary to publish regulations that implement a system for the collection of adoption and foster care data. These regulations were published as final on Dec. 22, 1993, and are mandatory for all States. In addition, section 13713 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (P.L. 103–66) makes available enhanced Federal matching funds (75 percent Federal match instead of 50 percent) for planning, design, development and installation of statewide automated child welfare information systems. Regulations governing these systems were published on Dec. 22, 1993, and May 19, 1995. The enhanced match expires after Sept. 30, 1996.

House bill

Three years after the effective date and annually thereafter, each State to which funds are paid under this part must submit to the Secretary a report containing quantitative information on the extent to which the State is making progress toward its child protection program goals (as described above).

Each State to which funds are paid under this part must annually submit to the Secretary of Health and Human Services a report that includes the following annual statistics:

(1) the number of children reported to the State during the year as abused or neglected;

(2) of the number of reported cases of abuse or neglect, the number that were substantiated;

(3) of the number of reported cases that were substantiated, (a) the number that received no services under the State program funded under this part; (b) the number that received services under the State program funded under this part; and (c) the number removed from their families;

(4) the number of families that received preventive services from the State;

(5) the number of children who entered foster care under the responsibility of the State;

(6) the number of children who exited foster care under the responsibility of the State;

(7) types of foster care placements made by State and the number of children in each type of care;

(8) average length of foster care placements made by State;

(9) the age, ethnicity, gender, and family income of children placed in foster care under the responsibility of the State;

(10) the number of children in foster care for whom the State has the goal of adoption;

(11) the number of children in foster care under the responsibility of the State who were freed for adoption;

(12) the number of children in foster care under the responsibility of the State whose adoptions were finalized;

(13) the number of disrupted adoptions in the State;

(14) quantitative measurements showing whether the State is making progress toward the child protection goals identified by the State;

(15) the number of infants abandoned during the year, the number of these infants who were adopted, and the length of time between abandonment and legal adoption;

(16) the number of deaths of children occurring while said children were in custody of the State;

(17) the number of deaths of children resulting from child abuse or neglect;

(18) the number of children served by the State Independent Living program;

(19) other information which the Secretary and a majority of the States agree is appropriate to collect for purposes of this part; and

(20) the response of the State to findings and recommendations of the citizen review panels.

States may fulfill the data collection and reporting requirements by collecting the required information on either individual children and families receiving child protection services or by using scientific statistical sampling methods.

Within 6 months after the end of each fiscal year, the Secretary must prepare an annual report on State data for Congress and the public.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law would remain intact. States receiving CAPTA grants must submit annual data reports to the Secretary (see Item 6.I, below). CAPTA requires States to report 10 data elements, many of which are substantially similar to the House reporting requirements.

Requires the Secretary, in administering CAPTA, to prepare annual reports, based on State data, for Congress and the national information clearinghouse on child abuse and neglect. (See Item 6.I, below.) Requires Secretary in 6 months after receiving State reports to prepare and submit annual report to Congress.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with regard to annual State reports containing quantitative information showing progress toward achieving State child protection goals.

Of all children receiving publicly-supported child welfare services, the following information shall be reported every 6 months:

(1) whether the child received services under the programs funded under this part:

(2) the age, gender, and family income of the parents and child;

(3) county of residence;

(4) whether the child was removed from the family;

(5) whether the child entered foster care under the responsibility of the State:

(6) the type of out-of-home care in which the child was placed (institution, group home, family foster care, or relative placement);

(7) the child's permanency planning goal, such as family reunification, adoption, or independent living;

(8) whether the child was freed for adoption;

(9) whether the child exited from foster care, and, if so, the reason for the exit, such as return to family, placement with relatives, adoption, independent living, or death.

References to race in the information that is reported annually by States was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

States may be required to report other information approved by the Secretary and agreed to by a majority of States, including information necessary to assure a smooth transition from AFCARS and NCANDS to the data reporting system required by this legislation.

States must also submit the following aggregate data annually:

(1) the number of children reported to the State during the year as alleged victims of abuse or neglect;

(2) the number of children for whom an investigation of alleged maltreatment resulted in a determination of substantiated abuse or neglect, the number for whom maltreatment was unsubstantiated, determined to be false;

(3) the number of families that received preventive services;

(4) the number of infants abandoned during the year, the number of these infants who were adopted, and the length of time between abandonment and adoption;

(5) the number of deaths resulting from child abuse or neglect;

(6) the number of deaths of children occurring while children were in custody of the State;

(7) the number of children served by the State Independent Living Program

(8) quantitative measurements showing whether the State is making progress toward the child protection goals identified by the State;

(9) types of maltreatment suffered by victims of abuse and neglect;

(10) number of abused and neglected children receiving services;

(11) average length of stay in out-of-home care;

(12) the response of the State to findings and recommendations of the citizen review panels; and

(13) other information which the Secretary and a majority of States agree is appropriated to collect for purposes of this part.

States may fulfill the data collection and reporting requirements by collecting the required information on either individual children and families receiving child protection services or by using scientific statistical sampling methods. If States use sampling, the Secretary must review and approve their methods.

The requirement that the Secretary prepare an annual report on State data for Congress and the public was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

H. RESEARCH AND TRAINING

Present law

Current law authorizes appropriations for research under Title IV–B of the Social Security Act and the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act. In FY 1995, $6 million is appropriated under Title IV–B and $9 million under CAPTA.

House bill

An appropriation of $10 million per year is authorized for the Secretary to spend at her discretion on research and training in child welfare.

Senate amendment

No directly comparable provision in Titles IV–B or IV–E. Current law under Title IV–B would remain intact, and CAPTA would be reauthorized. Although CAPTA has no separate authorization for research and training, the Secretary has discretionary authority to conduct research and training. For details see Item 6.G., below.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

I. NATIONAL RANDOM SAMPLE STUDY OF CHILD WELFARE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The Secretary is provided with $6 million per year for fiscal years 1996–2000 to conduct a national random-sample study of child welfare. The study will have a longitudinal component, yield data reliable at the State level for as many States as the Secretary determines is feasible, and should alternate data collection in small States from year-to-year to yield an occasional picture of child welfare in small States. The Secretary has discretion in drawing the sample and in selecting measures, but should carefully consider selecting the sample from all cases of confirmed abuse and neglect and then following each case over several years while obtaining such measures as type of abuse or neglect involved, frequency of contact with agencies, whether the child was separated from the family, types and characteristics of out-of-home placements, number of placements, and average length of placement. The Secretary must prepare occasional reports on this study and make them available to the public. The reports should summarize and compare the results of this study with the data reported by States. Written reports or tapes of the raw data from the study should be made available to the public at a fee the Secretary thinks appropriate.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

J. REMOVAL OF BARRIERS TO INTERETHNIC ADOPTION

Present law

State law governs adoption and foster care placement. Forty three States permit race matching either in regulation, statute, policy or practice. The Metzenbaum Multiethnic Placement Act of 1994 permits States to consider race and ethnicity in selecting a foster care or adoptive home, but States cannot delay or deny the placement of the child solely on the basis of race, color or national origin.

Noncompliance with the Metzenbaum Act is deemed a violation of title VI of the Civil Rights Act.

House bill

Section 553 of the Howard M. Metzenbaum Multiethnic Placement Act of 1994 is repealed. (See conforming amendments, item 2 below.) In addition, a State or other entity that receives Federal assistance may not deny to any person the opportunity to become an adoptive or a foster parent on the basis of the race, color, or national origin of the person or of the child involved. Similarly, no State or other entity receiving Federal funds can delay or deny the placement of a child for adoption or foster care, or otherwise discriminate in making a placement decision, on the basis of the race, color, or national origin of the adoptive or foster parent or the child involved.

A State or other entity that violates this provision during a period shall remit to the Secretary all funds that were paid to the State or entity during the period.

An action under this paragraph may not be brought more than 2 years after the date the alleged violation occurred.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

2. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

This section contains technical amendments that conform provisions of the bill to Titles IV–D and XVI of the Social Security Act, and to the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986, and provide for the repeal of Section 553 of the Howard M. Metzenbaum Multiethnic Placement Act of 1994, Title IV–E of the Social Security Act, section 13712 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993, and subtitle C of Title 17 of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994. (Under section 371 of Title III–C of the House bill, the following additional programs are repealed related to the Child Protection Block Grant: abandoned infants assistance, the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act, adoption opportunities, crisis nurseries, missing children's assistance, family support centers, certain activities under the Victims of Child Abuse Act, and Family Unification under the Housing Act.)

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The provision requiring the Secretary of HHS to submit, within 90 days of enactment, a legislative proposal providing necessary technical and conforming amendments was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

The agreement also repeals Title IV–E of the Social Security Act and section 13712 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993, and makes a conforming amendment to section 9442(4) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986. Additional repeals and technical amendments are described below.

3. CONTINUED APPLICATION OF CURRENT STANDARDS UNDER MEDICAID PROGRAM

Present law

Children for whom Federal foster care payments are made are deemed to be "dependent children" for purposes of Medicaid eligibility.

House bill

Conforms Medicaid coverage of this title with title I of the House bill. In general, the Medicaid provision is designed to ensure that individuals who receive Medicaid coverage under current law will continue to be covered after passage of H.R.4. Here is a summary of Medicaid provision from title I: "An individual who on enactment was receiving AFDC, was eligible for medical assistance under the State plan under this title, and would be eligible to receive aid or assistance under a State plan approved under part A of title IV but for the prohibition on grant funds being used to provide assistance to noncitizens, minor unwed mothers or their children, or children born to families already on welfare, would continue to be eligible for Medicaid. Families leaving welfare for work would also continue to receive the 1-year Medicaid transition benefit."

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

See Medicaid Section.

4. EFFECTIVE DATE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Unless otherwise indicated in particular sections of the bill, the amendments and repeals made by this title take effect on October 1, 1995. The amendments shall not apply with respect to powers, duties, functions, rights, claims, penalties, or obligations applicable to aid or services provided before the effective date, or to administrative actions and proceedings commenced, or authorized to be commenced, before the effective date.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, and also provides a transition rule that allows States to continue current programs under Titles IV–B and IV–E of the Social Security Act until June 30, 1996, and provides for a corresponding reduction in the payment made to such States from the new program created by this legislation. The agreement also contains provisions related to the closing out of accounts for programs that are ended or substantially modified.

5. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING TIMELY ADOPTION OF CHILDREN

Present law

No provision.

House bill

It is the sense of the Congress that:

(1) too many adoptable children are spending too much time in foster care;

(2) States must increase the number of waiting children being adopted in a timely manner;

(3) Studies have shown that States would save significant amounts of money if they offered incentives to families to adopt special needs children who would otherwise require foster care;

(4) States should allocate sufficient funds for adoption and medical assistance to encourage families to adopt children who are languishing in foster care;

(5) States should offer incentives for families that adopt special needs children to make adoption more affordable for middle-income families;

(6) States should strive to provide children removed from their biological parents with a single foster care placement and case team and to conclude an adoption of the child, when adoption is the goal, within one year of the child's placement in foster care; and

(7) States should participate in programs to enable maximum visibility of waiting children to potential parents, including a nationwide computer network to disseminate information on children eligible for adoption.

Senate amendment

Title VIII of the Senate amendment addresses adoption issues. See Section 13, below.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

6. CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT; GENERAL PROGRAM

A. REFERENCE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Provides that, unless otherwise indicated, any amendments or repeals should be considered to apply to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends section 2 to update findings with regard to the scope of child abuse and neglect and to make minor changes, including change of references from "child protection" to "child and family protection."

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

D. ADVISORY BOARD ON CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT

Present law

Section 102 of CAPTA requires the Secretary to appoint a U.S. Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect, and specifies the composition and duties of the board.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends section 102 by repealing current mandate for a U.S. Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect, and instead allows the Secretary of HHS to appoint an advisory board to make recommendations concerning child abuse and neglect issues. Duties of the new board would include making recommendations on coordination of Federal, State and local child abuse and neglect activities with similar activities regarding family violence at those levels; specific modifications needed in Federal and State laws to reduce the number of unfounded or unsubstantiated cases of child maltreatment; and modifications needed to facilitate coordinated data collection with respect to child protection and child welfare.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

E. REPEAL OF INTERAGENCY TASK FORCE

Present law

Section 103 of CAPTA requires the Secretary to establish an Interagency Task Force on Child Abuse and Neglect.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Repeals section 103 of CAPTA.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

F. NATIONAL CLEARINGHOUSE FOR INFORMATION RELATING TO CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT

Present law

Section 104 of CAPTA requires the Secretary to establish a national clearinghouse for information relating to child abuse and neglect.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends section 104 to retain authorization for a national information clearinghouse on child abuse and neglect, and expands the duties of the clearinghouse to include collecting data on false and unsubstantiated reports and deaths resulting from child abuse and neglect, and, through a national data collection and analysis program, to collect and make available State child abuse and neglect reporting information which, to the extent practical, is universal and case specific, and integrated with other case-based foster care and adoption data collected by HHS.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

G. RESEARCH, EVALUATION AND ASSISTANCE ACTIVITIES

Present law

Section 105 of CAPTA authorizes the Secretary, through the National Center, to conduct research and technical assistance related to child abuse and neglect.

House bill

Authorizes appropriations of $10 million annually for the Secretary to conduct research and training related to child welfare. (See Item 1.H., above).

Senate amendment

Amends section 105 to restructure the research activities function of the Secretary of HHS by deleting references to the National Center and by requiring research on additional issues, including substantiated and unsubstantiated reported child abuse cases. Authorizes technical assistance to include evaluation or identification of: various methods for investigation, assessment, and prosecution of child physical and sexual abuse cases; ways to mitigate psychological trauma to child victims; and effective programs carried out under CAPTA. Allows the Secretary of HHS to provide for dissemination of information related to various training resources available at the State and local levels. Continues authorization for a formal peer review process which utilizes scientifically valid review criteria.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends section 106 to retain authority for the demonstration grants program and to change the criteria for awarding grants. Authorizes the following purposes for demonstration programs and projects: training programs, mutual support and self-help programs for parents, innovative programs that use collaborative partnerships between various agencies to allow for establishment of a triage system in responding to child abuse and neglect reports; kinship care programs, and supervised visitation centers for families where there has been child abuse or domestic violence. All demonstration projects will be evaluated for their effectiveness.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

I. STATE GRANTS FOR PREVENTION AND TREATMENT PROGRAMS

Present law

Section 107 of CAPTA authorizes the Secretary to make development and operation grants to States to assist them in improving their child protective service systems. States must meet certain eligibility requirements, which include having a State law in effect providing for reporting of child abuse or neglect allegations and providing immunity from prosecution for reporters of abuse or neglect.

Requires that States have in place procedures for responding to reports of medical neglect, including instances of withholding medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

House bill

States would receive Child Protection Block Grants, which would be used for child protective service systems, among other related activities. To receive block grants, States must certify that they have in effect a State law for reporting of child abuse or neglect, a program to investigate child abuse and neglect reports, and procedures to respond to reporting of medical neglect of disabled infants among other requirements. (See Item 1.B. (2) and (3), above.)

Requires States participating in the Child Protection Block Grant to submit detailed annual data reports to the Secretary. (See Item 1.G.2., above.) The Secretary would prepare annual reports for Congress. (See Item 1.G.4., above.)

Senate amendment

Revises section 107. Under revised eligibility requirements, States would provide an assurance or certification, signed by the chief executive officer of the State, that the State has a law or statewide program relating to procedures for: reporting of known and suspected instances of child abuse and neglect; immediate screening, safety assessment, and prompt investigation of such reports; procedures for immediate steps to be taken to protect the safety of children; provisions for immunity from prosecution for individuals making good faith reports of child abuse; methods for preserving confidentiality of records; requirements for the prompt disclosure of relevant information to appropriate entities working to protect children; the cooperation of law enforcement officials, court personnel and human services agencies; provision for the appointment of a guardian ad litem to represent the child in any judicial proceedings; and provisions that facilitate the prompt expungement of unsubstantiated or false child abuse reports.

Requires that States have in place procedures for responding to reports of medical neglect, including instances of withholding medically indicated treatment from disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

States must have in place, within two years of enactment, provisions by which individuals who disagree with an official finding of abuse or neglect can appeal such a finding.

States would submit a plan every 5 years, instead of 4, demonstrating their eligibility and specifics about how their grant money will be used.

States would be required to work annually with the Secretary to provide, to the maximum extent practicable, a report containing specified data on their child protective service systems, including the number of children reported as abused or neglected, data on substantiation of reports, services provided to reported children, preventive services provided to families, the number of child deaths resulting from abuse or neglect including the number of children who died while in foster care, number of caseworkers responsible for intake and screening, agency response time to abuse or neglect reports, response time with respect to provision of services to families where abuse or neglect has been alleged, and the number of caseworkers relative to the number of reports investigated in the previous year. The Secretary would prepare a report based on State data, to be submitted to Congress and the national information clearinghouse on child abuse and neglect.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

Strikes definitions of "Board" and "Center," and changes the definition of "child abuse and neglect" to mean, at a minimum, "any recent act or failure to act on the part of a parent or caretaker, which results in death, serious physical or emotional harm, sexual abuse or exploitation, or an act or failure to act which presents an imminent risk of serious harm."

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

M. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

Present law

N. RULE OF CONSTRUCTION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No directly comparable provision, but see section 1.B.4., above.

Senate amendment

Establishes a new section of CAPTA that addresses the issue of spiritual treatment of children. The section does not require a parent or legal guardian to provide a child with medical service or treatment, against his or her religious beliefs, nor does it require a State to find, or prohibit a State from finding, abuse or neglect in cases where the parent or guardian relied solely or partially on spiritual means rather than medical treatment, in accordance with their religious beliefs. The section requires a State to have in place authority under State law to pursue any legal remedies necessary to provide medical care or treatment when such care or treatment is necessary to prevent or remedy serious harm to the child, or to prevent the withholding of medically indicated treatment from children with life-threatening conditions. Each State has sole discretion over its case-by-case determinations relating to medical neglect.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

O. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT

No provision.

Senate amendment

Replaces current law with a new Title II to establish Community-Based Family Resource and Support Grants.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

A. PURPOSE AND AUTHORITY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

States could use Child Protection Block Grant allotments for family resource and support services. (See Item 1.C.(5), above.)

Senate amendment

Establishes the purpose of Title II as: to support State efforts to develop, operate, expand and enhance a network of community-based, prevention-focused, family resource and support programs. Authorizes the Secretary of HHS to make grants on a formula basis to entities designated by States as "lead entities."

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. ELIGIBILITY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Establishes eligibility requirements for States to receive grants. States are eligible if:

(1) the chief executive officer has designated a lead entity that is an existing public, quasi-public or nonprofit private entity, with priority for the State trust fund advisory board or an existing entity that leverages funds for a broad range of child abuse and neglect prevention activities and family resource programs;

(2) the chief executive officer assures that the lead entity will provide or be responsible for providing a network of community-based family resource and support programs and providing direction and oversight to the network; and

(3) the chief executive officer assures that the lead entity has a demonstrated commitment to parental participation, a demonstrated ability to work with State and community-based public and private nonprofit organizations, the capacity to provide operational support and training and technical assistance to the statewide network of community-based family resource and support programs, and will integrate its efforts with experienced individuals and organizations.

Conference agreement

C. AMOUNT OF GRANT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Senate amendment

Reserves 1 percent of appropriations for Title II of CAPTA for allotments to Indian tribes and tribal organizations and migrant programs. Remaining funds are allotted to States equally according to the State "minor child amount" and the State "matchable amount." The State minor child amount is based on the State's relative population of children under 18, except that no State can receive less than $250,000. The State matching amount is based each State's relative amount of funds (including foundation, corporate and other private funding, State revenues and Federal funds) that have been dedicated toward the purposes of this program.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

D. EXISTING AND CONTINUATION GRANTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Provides that any State or entity that has a grant, contract, or cooperative agreement in effective on the date of enactment, under the Family Resource and Support Program, the Community–Based Family Resource Program, the Family Support Center Program, the Emergency Child Abuse Prevention Grant Program, or the Temporary Child Care and Crisis Nurseries Program, shall continue to be funded under the original terms through the end of the applicable grant cycle. Also allows the Secretary to continue grants for Family Resource and Support Program grantees and other programs funded under CAPTA on a non-competitive basis, subject to available appropriations, grantee performance, and receipt of required reports.

SUBTITLE H—CHILD CARE

1. GOALS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Adds the following goals:

(1) to allow each State maximum flexibility in developing child care programs and policies that best suit the needs of children and parents within such State;

(2) to promote parental choice to empower working parents to make their own decisions on the child care that best suits their family's needs;

(3) to encourage States to provide consumer education information to help parents make informed choices about child care;

(4) to assist States to provide child care to parents trying to achieve independence from public assistance; and

(5) to assist States in implementing the health, safety, licensing and registration standards established in State regulation.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

2. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

Present law

The authorization of appropriations expires at the end of fiscal year 1995. Appropriations in fiscal year 1995 are $935 million; such sums as necessary are authorized. [Sec. 658B of the CCDBG Act]

[Note: In addition, entitlement funds are available for child care under the AFDC Child Care, Transitional Child Care, and At-Risk Child Care programs authorized by Title IV–A of the Social Security Act.]

House bill

Authorizes appropriations of $2,093 million for each of fiscal year 1996–2000.

[Note: Title I of the House bill repeals the AFDC Child Care, Transitional Child Care, and At-Risk Child Care programs.]

Senate amendment

Authorizes appropriations as follows: $1 billion for fiscal year 1996, and such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal year 1997–2000.

[Note: Additional funds are provided for child care under Title I of the Senate amendment, to replace the current AFDC Child Care, Transitional Child Care, and At-Risk Child Care programs—$8 billion over 5 years in direct spending.]

Conference agreement

The conference agreement establishes a single child care block grant and State administrative system by adding mandatory funds to the existing Child Care and Development Block Grant (CCDBG). Specifically, one discretionary and two mandatory streams of funding will be consolidated in a reconstituted CCDBG.

The child care funds made available in the Child Care Block Grant total $17 billion over 7 years; $10 billion in mandatory funds ($1.17 billion in fiscal year 1996, $1.24 billion in fiscal year 1997, $1.32 billion in fiscal year 1998, $1.4 billion fiscal year 1999, $1.5 billion in fiscal year 2000, $1.625 billion in fiscal year 2001, and $1.745 in fiscal year 2002) combined with $1 billion each year (fiscal year 1996–2002) in discretionary funds.

Each State will receive the amount of funds it received for child care under all of the entitlement programs currently under title IV of the Social Security Act (AFDC Child Care, transitional Child Care, and At-Risk Child Care) in the 1994 fiscal year, or the average amount of funds received for those programs from fiscal year 1992 through fiscal year 1994, which ever is greater. These programs, combined, provide approximately $990 million in mandatory child care funding for the States.

The mandatory funds remaining after the State allocations based on previous years child care allotments will be distributed among the States based on the formula currently used in the title IV–A At-Risk Child Care grant. Specifically, funds will be distributed based on the proportion of the number of children under the age of 13 residing in the State to the number of all of the nation's children under the age of 13. States must provide matching funds in the amount of the fiscal year 1995 State Medicaid rate to receive these funds.

Discretionary funds appropriated for the Child Care Block Grant will be distributed to States based on the current formula for the Child Care and Development Block Grant. This formula utilizes the number of children in low income families and the State per capita income as criteria for the distribution of funds to States. As in current law governing the CCDBG, there is no requirement for the State to provide matching funds to receive an allotment from the discretionary funds appropriated for the Child Care Block Grant.

If a State does not use their full portion of funds, the remaining portion will be redistributed to the states according to section 402(i) (as such section was in effect before October 1, 1995).

For the first year of enactment, States will receive their total allotment (mandatory and discretionary) for child care less any amount States had already spent on Title IV of Social Security child care programs in fiscal year 1996 on the day before enactment.

3. LEAD AGENCY

Present law

Requires the chief executive officer of a State to designate an appropriate State agency to act as the lead agency in administering financial assistance under the Act. [Sec. 658D of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Changes the term "agency" to "entity."

Senate amendment

Allows the State lead agency to administer financial assistance received under the Act through other "governmental or nongovernmental" agencies (instead of other "State" agencies); requires that "sufficient time and Statewide distribution of the notice" be given of the public hearing on development of the State plan; and strikes language on issues that may be considered during consultation with local governments on development of the State plan.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

4. APPLICATION AND PLAN

Present law

Requires States to prepare and submit to the Secretary an application that includes a State plan. The initial plan must cover a 3-year period, and subsequent plans must cover a 2-year period. Required contents of the plan include designation of a lead agency; policies and procedures regarding parental choice of providers, unlimited parental access, parental complaints, consumer education, compliance with State and local regulatory requirements, establishment of and compliance with health and safety requirements, review of State licensing and regulatory requirements, and supplementation.

In addition, the State plan must provide that funds will be used for child care services, and that 25% of funds will be reserved for activities to improve the quality of child care and to increase the availability of early childhood development and before- and after-school child care. [Sec. 658E of the CCDBG Act]

Further, State plans must assure that payment rates will be adequate to provide eligible children equal access to child care as compared with children whose families are not eligible for subsidies, and must assure that the State will establish and periodically revise a sliding fee scale that provides for cost sharing by families that receive child care subsidies.

House bill

Requires the State plan to cover a 2-year period. Requires States to provide a detailed description of procedures to be used to assure parental choice of providers. Changes "provide assurances" to "certify" that procedures are in effect within the State to ensure unlimited parental access to children and parental choice; also requires that the State plan provide a detailed description of such procedures. Changes "provide assurances" to "certify" that the State maintains a record of parental complaints, and requires the State to provide a detailed description of how such a record is maintained and made available. Changes the consumer education part of the State plan to require assurances that the State will collect and disseminate consumer education information. Requires that the State certify that providers comply with State and local health, safety and licensing or regulatory requirements and provide a detailed description of such requirements and how they are enforced. Eliminates current law provisions requiring establishment of and compliance with health and safety requirements, review of State licensing and regulatory requirements, notification to HHS when standards are reduced, and supplementation. Eliminates the requirement that unlicensed providers be registered.

Adds a requirement that a summary of the facts relied upon by the State to determine that payment rates are sufficient to ensure equal access to child care is included in the State plan. Eliminates the assurance that the State will establish a sliding fee scale. Also provides that funds, other than amounts transferred under section 658T (see Item 14, below), will be used for child care services, activities to improve the quality and availability of such services, and any other activity that the State deems appropriate to realize the goals specified above (see Item 1). Deletes the current law requirement that States reserve 25% of funds for activities to improve the quality of child care and to increase availability of early childhood development and before- and after-school care.

Requires States to spend no more than 5% on administrative costs.

Senate amendment

Requires the State plan to cover a 2-year period. Replaces the requirement that providers not subject to licensing or regulation be registered with the State, with a requirement that the State implement mechanisms to ensure proper payment to providers. Requires the Secretary to develop minimum standards for Indian tribes and tribal organizations receiving assistance under the Act, in lieu of State or local licensing or regulatory requirements. Eliminates provisions related to reduction in standards and reviews of State licensing and regulatory requirements.

Requires the State plan to describe the manner in which services will be provided to the working poor. Reserves 15% of each State's allotment for activities to improve quality of child care, instead of 25% for both quality improvement and before- and after-school child care services.

Requires States to spend no more than 5% on administrative costs, not including direct service costs. Administrative costs shall not include direct service costs.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with a modification that the States must certify that they have licensing standards for child care which are applied uniformly without regard to whether a child care provider is receiving Federal funds. Nothing in this Act shall either require or prohibit the application of State licensing standards, regulations, or laws to a particular type of child care or child care provider. The Secretary must develop minimum standards for Indian tribes and tribal organizations receiving assistance under this Act, in lieu of State or local licensing or regulatory requirements. at least 70% of the mandatory funding must be used to provide child care for children in families who are receiving welfare, working their way off welfare, or at risk of becoming welfare dependent. A substantial portion of the discretionary funding for child care authorized under this Act is intended to be used for low-income working families who are not working their way off welfare or at risk of becoming welfare dependent. The State plan must demonstrate how the State is meeting the specific needs of each of these populations.

5. LIMITATION ON STATE ALLOTMENTS

Present law

Prohibits the use of funds for purchase or improvement of land or buildings, except in the case of sectarian agencies or organizations that need to make renovations or repairs in order to comply with specific health and safety requirements that States are required to establish. [Sec. 658F of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Amends section 658F to make a conforming amendment referring to the elimination of specific health and safety requirements.

Senate amendment

No provision (maintains current law).

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with a modification that this Act prohibit the use of funds for purchase or improvement of land or buildings except for Indian tribes or tribal organizations. Indian tribes and tribal organizations may use funds for construction or renovation of facilities, upon the request by the tribe or tribal organization and subject to the approval by the Secretary.

6. ACTIVITIES TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF CHILD CARE

Present law

As stated above, 25% of State allotments must be reserved for activities to improve child care quality and to increase the availability of early childhood development and before- and after-school child care (see Item 1.D, above). Section 658G specifies how these funds are to be used. Of reserved funds, requires States to use no less than 20% for activities to improve the quality of care, including resource and referral programs, grants or loans to assist providers in meeting State and local standards, monitoring of compliance with licensing and regulatory requirements, training of child care personnel, and improving compensation for child care personnel. [Sec. 658G of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Repeals the requirement that 25% of funds be set aside for quality improvement activities (see Item 5, above). Repeals section 658G regarding the use of these set-aside funds.

Senate amendment

As stated above, reduces quality improvement set-aside to 15% (see Item 5, above). Amends section 658G to require States to use their quality improvement set-aside for resource and referral activities, including "providing comprehensive consumer education to parents and the public, referrals that honor parental choice, and activities designed to improve the quality and availability of child care," and for one or more "other activities," which include those listed in the current section 658G, plus activities to increase the availability of before- and after-school care, infant care, and child care between the hours of 5:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m.

Adds new language to prohibit States from discriminating against providers that wish to participate in resource and referral systems, that are operating legally within the State but that are exempt from State licensing requirements.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with a modification that States retain at least a 3% set-aside of the total mandatory and discretionary funding received for child care under this Act for activities designed to provide comprehensive consumer education to parents and the public, activities that increase parental choice, and activities designed to improve the quality and availability of child care, such as resource and referral services.

The House recedes, with a modification to limit the amount of total child care funds made available under this Act for administrative costs to 3%. Administrative cost shall not include direct service costs.

7. EARLY CHILDHOOD DEVELOPMENT AND BEFORE- AND AFTER-SCHOOL CARE

Senate amendment

Repeals section 658H.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

8. ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT

Present law

Requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS) to coordinate HHS and other Federal child care activities, to collect and publish a list of State child care standards every 3 years, and to provide technical assistance to States. Requires the Secretary to review, monitor, and enforce compliance with the Act and the State plan by withholding payments and imposing additional sanctions in certain cases. [Sec. 658I of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Deletes the requirement that the Secretary of HHS collect and publish a list of child care standards every 3 years. Maintains current law for repayment.

Senate amendment

Strikes the current law requirement that the Secretary withhold further payments to a State in case of a finding of noncompliance until the noncompliance is corrected. Instead, authorizes the Secretary, in such cases, to impose additional program requirements on the State, such as a requirement that the State reimburse the Secretary for any improperly spent funds, or the Secretary may deduct from the administrative portion of the State's subsequent allotment an amount equal to or less than the misspent funds, or a combination of such options. The amendment also strikes sections related to additional sanctions and notice of such additional sanctions.

Conference agreement

The House recedes, with a modification that the Secretary may not impose additional program requirements on the State for an improperly spent funds.

9. PAYMENTS

Present law

Provides that payments received by a State for a fiscal year may be expended in that fiscal year or in the succeeding 3 fiscal years. [Sec. 658J of the CCDBG Act]

Senate amendment

No provision (maintains current law).

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes.

States are also required to present evidence demonstrating that they have State requirements designed to protect the health and safety of children.

Deletes current report requirements on: 1) increasing the affordability and availability of child care; 2) reviewing findings on State licensing and regulatory requirements; and 3) reducing standards.

Requires States to include an evaluation plan in their first annual report due after enactment and every 2 years thereafter, and to include the results of such evaluation in the second annual report due after enactment and every 2 years thereafter. The plan must include an evaluation regarding the extent to which the State has realized the following goals:

(1) promoting parental choice to make their own decisions on the child care that best suits their family's needs;

(2) providing consumer education information to help parents make informed choices about child care;

(3) providing child care to parents trying to achieve independence from public assistance; and

(4) implementing the health, safety, licensing, and registration standards established in State regulations.

Senate amendment

Requires States to submit reports every 2 years, rather than every year, with the first report due no later than December 31, 1996. Requires that States include information on the type of Federal child care and preschool programs serving children in the State, and requires that States describe the extent and manner to which resource and referral activities are being carried out by the State. Strikes the current requirement for information on the type and number of child care programs, providers, caregivers and support personnel in the State, and strikes the provision related to review findings of State licensing and regulatory requirements.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with a modification that the State prepare and submit a data report to the Secretary every six months, and that the report include: (1) family income; (2) county of residence; (3) the sex, age of children receiving benefits; (4) whether the family includes only one parent; (5) the sources of family income, including the amount obtained from (and separately identified as being from): a) employment, including self-employment; b) Part A cash assistance or other assistance; c) housing assistance; d) food stamps; and e) other; (6) the number of months the family has received benefits; (7) the type of care in which the child was enrolled (family day care, center, own home); (8) whether the provider was a relative; (9) the cost of care; and (10) the average hours per week of care. Annually, the State must submit the following aggregate data: (1) the number of providers separately identified in accord with each type of provider specified in section 658P(5) that received funding under this subchapter; (2) the monthly cost of child care services and the portion of such cost paid with assistance from this Act by type of care; (3) the number and total amount of payments by the State in vouchers, contracts, cash, and disregards from public benefit programs by type of care; (4) the manner in which consumer education information was provided; (5) information on programs from which funds were transferred under 658T; and (6) total number (unduplicated) of children and families served.

States are required to present evidence demonstrating that they have State requirements designed to protect the health and safety of children.

The House recedes on the requirement that States include an evaluation plan in their reports to the Secretary.

Deletes current report requirements on: (1) increasing the affordability and availability of child care; (2) reviewing findings on State licensing and regulatry reauirements; and (3) reducing standards.

11. REPORT BY THE SECRETARY

Present law

Requires the Secretary to prepare and submit an annual report, summarizing and analyzing information provided by States, to the House Education and Labor Committee and the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. This report must contain an assessment and, where appropriate, recommendations to Congress regarding efforts that should be taken to improve access of the public to quality and affordable child care. [Sec. 658L of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Revises the Secretary's report to become a biennial report to the Speaker and the President pro tempore.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary to prepare and submit biennial reports, rather than annual, with the first report due no later than July 31, 1997; and replaces the reference to the House Education and Labor Committee with the House Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

12. ALLOTMENTS

Present law

Requires the Secretary to reserve one-half of 1% of appropriations for payment to Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Northern Marianas and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. The Secretary also must reserve no more than 3% for payment to Indian tribes and tribal organizations with approved applications. Remaining funds are allocated to the States based on the States' proportion of children under age 5 and the number of children receiving free or reduced-price school lunches, as well as the States' per capita income. Any portion of a State's reallotment that the Secretary determines is not needed by the State to carry out its plan for the allotment period, must be reallotted by the Secretary to the other States in the same proportion as the original allotments. [Sec. 658O of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Maintains the current law set-asides for the Territories and Indian tribes and tribal organizations, except that the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands is deleted from the set-aside for Territories. Allots remaining funds to States as follows: each State will receive an amount based on its relative share of the aggregate amount of Federal funds received by the State in fiscal year 1994 under the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act, and under child care programs for AFDC recipients and former AFDC recipients and the At-Risk Child Care program under Title IV–A of the Social Security Act. Eliminates reallotment provisions.

Senate amendment

Maintains current law allotment procedures. Amends section 658O(c), related to payments for the benefit of Indian children, to add new provisions allowing the use of funds by Indian tribes or tribal organizations for construction or renovation of facilities, upon request by the tribe or tribal organization and subject to approval by the Secretary. The Secretary may not permit a tribe or tribal organization to use funds for construction or renovation if such use will result in a decrease in the level of child care services. The Secretary is also allowed to reallot to other tribes any tribal allotments that are not expended, which is similar to what happens with unused State allotments.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes, with a modification that the set-aside for Indian tribes and tribal organizations and Native Hawaiian Organizations is 1% of the total funds for child care made available under this Act. Any portion of a State's allotment that the Secretary determines is not needed by the State to carry out its plan for the allotment period must be reallotted by the Secretary to the other States in the same proportion as the original allotments. The Secretary is also allowed to reallot to other tribes any tribal allotments that are expended, which is similar to the process for reallotment to States.

13. DEFINITIONS

Present law

Provides definitions of the following terms: caregiver, child care certificate, elementary school, eligible child, eligible child care provider, family child care provider, Indian tribe, lead agency, parent, secondary school, Secretary, sliding fee scale, State, and tribal organization. [Sec. 658P of the CCDBG Act]

House bill

Includes definitions for lead entity and child care services, and strikes definitions for elementary school, secondary school, and sliding fee scale.

Senate amendment

Revises the definition of eligible child to one whose family income does not exceed 100% of the State median, instead of 75%.

Adds the following as an allowable use of a child care certificate: "as a deposit for child care services if such a deposit is required of other children being cared for by the provider."

Revise the definition of relative child care provider by adding great grandchild and sibling (if the provider lives in a separate residence) to the list of eligible children; by striking the requirement that such providers be registered; and by requiring such providers to comply with any "applicable" requirements governing child care provided by a relative.

Conference agreement

The House recedes, with a modification that strikes the definition for elementary and secondary school and revises the definition of eligible child to one whose family income does not exceed 85% of the State median income.

14. TRANSFER OF FUNDS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Adds a new section 658T to the CCDBG Act, allowing a State to transfer no more than 20% of CCDBG funds to one or more of the following programs:

1. Part A of Title IV of the Social Security Act;
2. Part B of Title IV of the Social Security Act;
3. Child Nutrition Act of 1966;
4. National School Lunch Act; and
5. Title XX of the Social Security Act.

Transferred funds would be subject to the rules of the program to which they are transferred.

Senate amendment

States can transfer up to 30% of their cash assistance block grant (title IV–A) into the CCDBG.

Conference agreement

The House recedes, no funds can be transfered out of the Child Care and Development Block Grant.

15. APPLICATION TO OTHER PROGRAMS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Adds a new section 658T to the CCDBG Act, that requires States that use any Federal funds for child care services to ensure that such services meet the requirements, standards and criteria, with the exception of the 15% quality set-aside, of the CCDBG and any regulations issued under the CCDBG. These funds must be administered through a uniform State plan and, to the maximum extent practicable, shall be transferred to the lead agency and integrated into the CCDBG program.

Conference agreement

The Senate recedes.

16. REPEALS AND TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

Repeals the following programs:

(1) Child Development Associate (CDA) Scholarship Assistance;

(2) State Dependent Care Development Grants;

(3) Programs of National Significance under Title X of the Elementary and Secondary Education Assistance Act of 1965 (child care related to Cultural Partnerships for At-Risk Children and Youth, and Urban and Rural Education Assistance); and

(4) Native-Hawaiian Family-Based Education Centers.

[Note: Title I of the House bill also repeals child care assistance provided under current law by Title IV–A of the Social Security Act. This assistance is provided under 3 programs known as AFDC Child Care, Transitional Child Care, and At-Risk Child Care.]

Senate amendment

Repeals CDA Scholarship Assistance and State Dependent Care Development Grants.

Requires the Secretary of HHS, after consultation with the appropriate committees of Congress and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, to prepare and submit to Congress, within 6 months after enactment, a legislative proposal containing technical and conforming amendments that reflect the amendments and repeals made by this Act.

[Note: Title I of the Senate amendment also earmarks and provides additional funds for child care, to replace the AFDC Child Care, Transitional Child Care, and At-Risk Child Care programs.]

Conference agreement

These repeals were dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

SUBTITLE I—CHILD NUTRITION

1. CHILD NUTRITION ACT OF 1966

Present law

Authorizes the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), the School Breakfast program, the Special Milk program, assistance to States for child nutrition administrative expenses and nutrition education and training, and school breakfast assistance for Defense Department overseas dependents' schools.

The WIC program provides specific nutritious foods to lower-income pregnant, postpartum, and breastfeeding women, and infants and children (up to age 5). Recipients' family income must be below 185% of Federal poverty guidelines, and they must be judged at nutritional risk. Federal funds, set by appropriation levels, are made available to State health agencies under a formula. States then provide funds to local health agencies, which are responsible for day-to-day operations. Funds also are used for food, nutrition assessments and counselling, referrals to other programs, breastfeeding promotion, and a farmers' market program. [Sec. 17 and 21 of the Child Nutrition Act]

Under the School Breakfast program, schools choosing to participate in the program receive per-meal Federal cash subsidies for all breakfasts they serve that meet Federal nutrition standards. Subsidies are indexed annually for inflation and differ depending on whether the meal is served free (to children from families with income below 130% of poverty), at a reduced price (to children with family income between 130% and 185% of poverty), or at "full price" (so-called "paid" meals for those with family income above 185% of poverty or who do not apply for free or reduced-price meals). Schools with high proportions of lower-income students get larger per-meal subsidies, and special grants are provided to assist in paying start-up and expansion costs. [Sec. 4 of the Child Nutrition Act]

Under the Special Milk program, schools and institutions not otherwise participating in a meal service program (and schools with split sessions for kindergartners) provide milk to all children at a low price or free, and each half-pint served is federally subsidized at a different rate—depending on whether it is served free or not. Provision of free milk is not required. [Sec. 3 of the Child Nutrition Act]

Under the State administrative expense assistance program, grants are made to States to help cover administrative costs associated with child nutrition programs. The amount available each year is 1.5% of Federal cash payments for School Lunch, School Breakfast, Child and Adult Care Food, and Special Milk programs. [Sec. 7 of the Child Nutrition Act]

For nutrition education and training, States are provided with Federal funds for training school food service personnel in food service management, instructing teachers in nutrition education, and teaching children about nutrition. [Sec. 19 of the Child Nutrition Act]

Special provisions are made for Federal assistance for school breakfast programs in Defense Department overseas dependents' schools. [Sec. 20 of the Child Nutrition Act]

House bill

Retains the designation of the Act as the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 and replaces the Act's current provisions with authorization for a Family Nutrition Block Grant Program.

Senate amendment

No comparable provisions.

Conference agreement

Senate recedes with an amendment to:

A. Create an optional State block grant entitled, "CHILD CARE AND SUMMER FOOD SERVICE OPTIONAL BLOCK GRANT."

OPTIONAL BLOCK GRANT—Under the terms of the optional block grant, all States have the option of receiving funds for the Child Care Food and Summer Food Programs through a block grant. For fiscal year 1996, 22 States will have the option to participate. In fiscal year 1997, all States will have the option to participate.

DECISION TO PARTICIPATE—States opting to participate in the block grant may reverse a decision to participate in the block grant once prior to the termination date and only after a two-year period of participation. If a State opts out, such State may resume participation under the summer food service program and the child care food program.

STATE PLAN—States are required to submit a State plan to the Secretary in order to participate in the block grant.

USE OF FUNDS—States must insure that the funds will only be used to provide assistance in providing meals and meal supplements in summer food service facilities and nonresidential child care institutions that are licensed or approved by the Federal Government, the State, or a local government (State option to make payments to sponsoring organizations).

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES—None of the funds under the block grant are to be used for State administrative expenses (States will continue to receive such funds under current SAE provisions).

NUTRITIONAL REQUIREMENTS—States are to provide minimum nutritional requirements for meals and meal supplements based on the most recent tested nutritional research available. Such requirements shall, to the extent practicable, be consistent with the goals of the most recent Dietary Guidelines for Americans. Meals shall provide, on the average over a week, at least ⅓ of the recommended dietary allowance for lunches and dinners and ¼ of the recommended dietary allowance for breakfasts. The Secretary may not impose any additional nutritional requirements beyond those specified in this section.

STATE REVIEW—States will review the meal operations in each participating summer food service facility and nonresidential child care institution no later than two years after implementation of the block grant and at the end of each 5-year period thereafter.

INCOME ELIGIBILITY—The State plan will describe how the block grant will serve specific groups of children in the State. The plan will further describe the income eligibility limitations established for meal and meal supplements. Only children who are members of families with incomes below 185 percent of the poverty line are eligible to participate.

SUMMER FOOD ELIGIBILITY—A summer food service facility may only receive funds if it operates in an area where at least 50 percent of the children are eligible for free or reduce price school meals—or be a residential public or nonprofit private summer camp. Existing summer food service sponsors must be given an opportunity to continue participation.

DOD PARTICIPATION—Nonresidential child care institutions on military installations are eligible to participate on an equitable basis with all other nonresidential child care institutions in the State participating in the block grant. If such facility is licensed or approved by DOD, the State may not require them to be licensed or approved under State or local law.

PRIVACY—States shall provide for safeguarding and restricting the use and disclosure of information about children receiving assistance under this Act. Physical segregation and overt identification of children participating in the block grant is prohibited.

REQUIRED REPORT—In order to participate, States must agree to submit a report to the Secretary each fiscal year describing (a) the number of children receiving assistance; (b) the different types of assistance provided; (c) the extent to which assistance was effective in achieving program goals; (d) the standards and methods used to ensure the nutritional quality of meals and meal supplements and (e) other information the Secretary may reasonably require. Failure to submit the required report will reduce the amounts otherwise payable to a State.

COMPLIANCE—The Secretary is required to review and monitor State compliance and withhold funds to the State with respect to the program or activity for which noncompliance is found, until the Secretary determines the problem has been corrected. The Secretary may seek financial restitution for misused funds.

PAYMENTS TO STATES—Payments to States under the block grant shall be on a quarterly basis and may be expended by the State for the current fiscal year or the succeeding fiscal year.

AUDITS—A yearly audit is required.

ALLOTMENT—In the first year of participation, the Secretary is required to allot to each participating State an amount that is equal to the amount the Secretary projects will be made available to the State to carry out the current law summer food service program and the child care food program for the current fiscal year. In the succeeding years such amount will be adjusted to reflect changes in the Consumer Price Index, series for food away from home and changes in each State's child population.

ALTERNATIVE ASSISTANCE—The Secretary is to arrange for the provision of such assistance and reduce the State allotment accordingly in cases where a State prohibited by law from providing assistance to an eligible sponsoring organization or a DOD domestic dependents' school, as well as States that have substantially failed or are unwilling to provide such assistance.

EVALUATION—No later than three years after the establishment of the block grant the Secretary is to conduct an evaluation and submit a report to Congress, including the comments of the Comptroller General. The report is to include information on the effects of the block grant on the nutritional quality of meals; the income distribution of children served, the difference between implementation of the block grant and implementation of the existing Summer Food program and Child Care Food program.

AUTHORIZATION PERIOD—the block grant option is authorized through September 30, 2002.

B. Streamlining provisions in the Child Nutrition Act of 1966. The following changes are intended to streamline the operation of programs under the Child Nutrition Act.

56. Revise Sec. 19(f)(1)(A), striking clauses (ix)–(xix), eliminating unnecessary stipulations on uses of funds.

57. Strike Sec. 19(f)(1)(B) to eliminate "language appropriate" information provision.

58. Strike Sec. 19(f)(2) and 19(f)(4). Technical and conforming.

63. Revise Sec. 19(i), making discretionary and authorizing appropriations of $10 million per year.

2. AUTHORIZATION FOR FAMILY NUTRITION BLOCK GRANT

A. REQUIREMENT FOR GRANTS

Present law

The Child Nutrition Act (see item 1) and the National School Lunch Act (see item 11) require that the Secretary of Agriculture provide Federal assistance to States for the WIC, Child and Adult Care Food, Summer Food Service, and Special Milk programs, as well as other support (e.g., for State administrative expenses and nutrition education and training), under terms of agreements with States meeting Federal standards.

House bill

Directs the Secretary of Agriculture to provide to each State that submits an annual application in accordance with the revised Child Nutrition Act's requirements (see item 4) an annual family nutrition grant for the purpose of achieving the goals of the Family Nutrition Block Grant Program (see item 2B for the program's goals and item 3 for State allotments).

Senate amendment

No comparable provisions.

Conference agreement

Senate recedes with an amendment creating an optional State block grant and making changes to Child Nutrition Act (see Item #1).

B. GOALS

Present law

The Child Nutrition Act declares it the policy of Congress to extend, expand, and strengthen child nutrition programs as a measure to safeguard the health and well-being of the Nation's children and to encourage the domestic consumption of agricultural commodities by assisting States through grants and other means to more effectively meet children's nutritional needs. [Sec. 2 of the Child Nutrition Act]

House bill

Establishes the goals of the Family Nutrition Block Grant Program:

(1) to provide nutritional risk assessments, food assistance based on the assessments, and nutrition education and counseling to economically disadvantaged pregnant, postpartum, and breastfeeding women, as well as infants and young children, determined to be at nutritional risk (see item 10 for definitions);

(2) to provide nutritional risk assessments of participating women so that food assistance and nutrition education is provided that meets their specific needs;

(3) to provide nutrition education to participating women to increase their awareness of the foods needed for good health;

(4) to provide food assistance, including nutritious supplements, to participating women in order to reduce the incidence of low-birthweight babies and babies born with birth defects because of nutritional deficiencies;

(5) to provide food assistance, including nutritious supplements, to participating women, infants, and children to ensure their future good health;

(6) to ensure that participating women, infants, and children are referred to other health services, including routine pediatric/obstetric care;

(7) to ensure that children from economically disadvantaged families in day care facilities, family day care homes, homeless shelters, settlement houses, recreational centers, Head Start centers, Even Start programs, and facilities for disabled children receive nutritious meals, supplements, and low-cost milk; (see item 10B for definition of "economically disadvantaged"); and

(8) to provide summer food service programs for children from economically disadvantaged families when school is not in session (see item 10B for definition of "economically disadvantaged").

Under the WIC program, Federal funds, determined by appropriations levels, are made available to States under a formula that reflects State caseloads, food cost inflation, need (as evidenced by poverty and health indices), and a specified national average per participant grant; in effect, funds are allotted so that each State can maintain its caseload from year to year, and extra money is shared so as to support expanded enrollment in States with greater need.

Under the Homeless Children Nutrition program, Federal funds are made available to existing projects to continue operations and, from any additional amounts, money is provided for new projects or to expand existing projects.

Under the Child and Adult Care Food program, child and adult care centers and family day care homes receive Federal reimbursements for each meal or supplement served at legislatively established, inflation indexed rates.

[Sec. 17(b)(8) & (14) and (f)(12) of the Child Nutrition Act; Sec. 17(g)(1) and Sec. 13(f) of the National School Lunch Act]

The use/disclosure of information obtained from applications for free/reduced-price meals is limited to those administering/enforcing child nutrition programs, administrators of other health or education programs (with restrictions), and the General Accounting Office and law enforcement officials. [Sec. 9(b)(2) of the National School Lunch Act]

(2) an agreement that the State will set minimum nutrition requirements for food assistance provided under the grant based on the most recent tested nutrition research available (but the requirements may not prohibit the substitution of foods to accommodate medical or other special dietary needs, and would have to be based, at a minimum, on the weekly average nutrient content of school lunches or other standards set by the State);

(5) an agreement that the State will not use more than 5% of its grant for administrative costs incurred to provide assistance (costs associated with nutritional risk assessments of pregnant, postpartum, and breastfeeding women, and infants and children, as well as those associated with nutrition education and counseling for these individuals, would not be considered administrative costs subject to the 5% limit); and

(6) an agreement that the State will submit an annual report to the Secretary (see item 6).

Senate amendment

No comparable provisions.

Conference agreement

Senate recedes with an amendment creating an optional block grant and making changes to Child Nutrition Act (see Item #1).

5. USE OF AMOUNTS PROVIDED UNDER THE FAMILY NUTRITION BLOCK GRANT

A. ACTIVITIES SUPPORTED

Present law

The WIC program provides nutritional risk assessment, specific nutritious foods (under Federal guidelines), nutrition education/counseling, breastfeeding support, and a farmers' market program for lower-income pregnant, postpartum, and breastfeeding women, as well as infants and children (up to age 5). Recipients' family income must be below 185% of poverty, and they must be judged at nutritional risk. [Sec. 17 of the Child Nutrition Act]

The Special Milk program provides Federal reimbursement for each half-pint of milk served in schools and other child care institutions not participating in a meal service program (and schools with split sessions for kindergartners). Milk is served at a low price or for free and each half-pint is subsidized at a different rate depending on whether it served free or not. Provision of free milk is not required. [Sec. 3 of the Child Nutrition Act]

The Child and Adult Care Food program provides Federal per-meal/supplement reimbursements for all meals and supplements served in public and private nonprofit child care centers, public and private nonprofit adult day care centers, certain for-profit child and adult day care centers, and family day care homes. Reimbursements for meals/supplements served in child/adult care centers differ according to whether they are served free (to children from families with income below 130% of Federal poverty guidelines), at a reduced price (to children with family income between 130% and 185% of the poverty guidelines), or at "full price" (so-called "paid" meals and supplements for those with family income above 185% of poverty or who do not apply for free or reduced price meals/supplements). [Sec. 17 of the National School Lunch Act]

The Summer Food Service program provides Federal per meal/ supplement reimbursements for all summer meals and supplements served through public and private nonprofit sponsors (including schools and local governments) to children in areas where 50% or more have family income below 185% of the Federal poverty guidelines (are eligible for free or reduced-price school meals). Summer food service subsidies also are provided to public and private nonprofit summer camps and higher education institutions in the National Youth Sports program. [Sec. 13 of the National School Lunch Act]

The Homeless Children Nutrition program grants funds to public and private nonprofit sponsors providing food service (meals and supplements), similar to that provided under the Child and Adult Care Food program, to homeless children under age 6 in shelters. [Sec. 17B of the National School Lunch Act] [General Note: In addition to cash reimbursements, Federal commodity assistance is available for the Child and Adult Care Food and Summer Food Service programs.]

House bill

Provides that the Secretary of Agriculture make family nutrition grants to States if they agree to use their grant to:

(1) provide nutritional risk assessment, food assistance based on the assessment, and nutrition education and counseling to economically disadvantaged pregnant, postpartum, and breastfeeding women, and infants and young children, who are determined to be at nutritional risk (see item 10 for definitions);

(2) provide milk in nonprofit nursery schools, child care centers, settlement houses, summer camps, and similar child care settings to children from economically disadvantaged families (see item 10 for definitions) [Note: Under the School-Based Nutrition Block Grant Program, support could be provided for milk served in schools.];

(3) provide food service in institutions and family day care homes providing child care to children from economically disadvantaged families (see item 10 for definitions) [Note: Under the School-Based Nutrition Block Grant Program, support could be provided for child care food service provided through schools. Further Note: Adult-care food service would not be funded under the Family Nutrition Block Grant program.];

(4) provide summer food service to economically disadvantaged children through programs carried out by nonprofit food authorities, local governments, higher education institutions in the National Youth Sports program, and nonprofit summer camps (see item 10 for definitions) [Note: Under the School-Based Nutrition Block Grant Program, support could be provided for summer food service by schools.]; and

(5) provide nutritious meals to pre-school-age homeless children in shelters and other facilities serving the homeless.

[General Note: Federal commodity assistance would not be available for child care food and summer food service activities under the family nutrition grant.]

B. ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS FOR ASSISTANCE FOR WOMEN, INFANTS, AND CHILDREN

Present law

Under the WIC program, States must carry out cost containment measures in procuring infant formula (and, where practicable, other foods). Cost containment must be by competitive bidding (selection of a single source offering the lowest price) or another method that yields equal or greater savings. Cost savings (e.g., through manufacturer rebates) may be used by the State for WIC program purposes. The Secretary of Agriculture must provide technical assistance for cost-containment bids and offer to solicit multi-State bids for infant formula and infant cereal. In addition, certain rules against bid-rigging and anti-competitive practices are established. [Sec. 17(b) (17)–(20) and (h) (8) & (9) of the Child Nutrition Act, and Sec. 25 of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

Requires that each State ensure that not less than 80% of its family nutrition grant is used to provide nutrition risk assessment, food assistance based on the assessment, and nutrition education and counseling to economically disadvantaged pregnant women, postpartum women, breastfeeding women, infants, and young children.

With respect to assistance provided to women, infants, and young children, requires States to establish and carry out a cost containment system for procuring infant formula. Requires States to use cost containment savings for any of the activities supported under their family nutrition grant. Requires States to submit annual reports to the Secretary (1) describing their infant formula cost containment system and (2) estimating the cost savings from the system for the report year compared to savings from the preceding year, where appropriate.

Requires States to ensure that equitable assistance for economically disadvantaged pregnant women, postpartum women, breastfeeding women, infants, and young children is provided to members of the Armed Forces and their dependents, regardless of their State of residence (see item 10 for definitions).

Senate amendment

Includes findings on the success of the WIC program in improving the health status of women, infants, and children and saving Medicaid expenditures, as well as the importance of manufacturer rebates in helping to fund the WIC program. Provides that it is the sense of the Senate that any legislation not eliminate or in any way weaken present competitive bidding requirements for the purchase of infant formula in programs supported with Federal funds.

Conference agreement

Senate recedes with an amendment creating an optional block grant and making changes to Child Nutrition Act (see Item #1).

C. CHILD CARE FOOD ASSISTANCE ON MILITARY INSTALLATIONS

Present law

Assisted child care facilities must be licensed under Federal, State, or local rules. [Sec. 17(a)(1) of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

Requires States to provide equitable assistance under its program for child care facilities to Defense Department child care programs on military installations—to the extent consistent with the number of children in the programs and after consultation with the programs' representatives.

In carrying out programs for child care facilities, bars States from requiring that those on military installations be licensed under State law if they are licensed by the Defense Department.

(3) title XX of the Social Security Act (relating to provision of social services);

(4) the National School Lunch Act (relating to school-based nutrition block grants); and

(5) the Child Care and Development Block Grant.

Provides that States may not transfer funds to other block grants unless the appropriate State agency makes a determination that sufficient amounts will remain available for the fiscal year to carry out activities under the Family Nutrition Block Grant program.

Provides that family nutrition grant amounts States transfer to other block grants (noted above) will not be subject to the requirements of the Family Nutrition Block Grant program under the revised Child Nutrition Act, but will be subject to the requirements that apply to Federal funds provided directly to the block grant to which they are transferred.

Requires the Secretary of Agriculture to reduce family nutrition grant amounts otherwise payable to a State by any amount paid under the grant that an audit made under the "Single Audit Act" (chapter 75 of title 31 of the United States Code) finds has been used in violation of the revised Child Nutrition Act. However, the Secretary is barred from reducing any quarterly payment to the State by more than 25%.

11. NATIONAL SCHOOL LUNCH ACT

Present law

Authorizes the School Lunch, Summer Food Service, Child and Adult Care Food, and Homeless Children Nutrition programs. Also authorizes commodity assistance for child nutrition programs and school lunch assistance for Defense Department overseas dependents' schools.

Under the School Lunch program, schools choosing to participate receive per-meal Federal subsidies for all lunches they serve that meet Federal nutrition standards. Subsidies are indexed annually and differ depending on whether the meal is served free (to children from families with income below 130% of Federal poverty guidelines), at a reduced price (to children with family income between 130% and 185% of poverty), or at "full price" (so-called "paid" lunches for those with family income above 185% of poverty or who do not apply for free or reduced-price meals). Schools with high proportions of free or reduced-price participants receive an additional per-meal subsidy. [Sec. 4 & 11 of the National School Lunch Act]

The Summer Food Service program provides Federal per-meal/supplement reimbursements for all summer meals and supplements served through public and private nonprofit sponsors (including schools and local governments) to children in areas where 50% or more have family income below 185% of the Federal poverty guidelines (are eligible for free or reduced-price school meals). Summer food service subsidies also are provided to public and private nonprofit summer camps and higher education institutions in the National Youth Sports program. [Sec. 13 of the National School Lunch Act]

The Child and Adult Care Food program provides Federal per-meal reimbursements for all meals and supplements served in public and private nonprofit child care centers, public and private nonprofit adult day care centers, certain for-profit child and adult day care centers, and family day care homes. Reimbursements for meals/supplements in centers vary by the recipient's income, but not in family day care homes. Certain schools with after-school care programs also may receive assistance. [Sec. 17 & 17A of the National School Lunch Act] The Homeless Children Nutrition program grants funds to public and private nonprofit sponsors providing food service (meals and supplements), similar to that provided under the Child and Adult Care Food program, to homeless children under age 6 in shelters.

The Agriculture Department is required to provide commodity support for meals served by institutions in the School Lunch, Child and Adult Care Food, and Summer Food Service programs. Schools and other institutions are "entitled" to a specific dollar value of commodities based on the number of meals served. Schools and other institutions also receive "bonus" commodities donated from Federal stocks at the Agriculture Department's discretion. [Sec. 6 & 14 of the National School Lunch Act]

The Secretary of Agriculture is required to make funds available for school lunch programs in Defense Department overseas dependent's schools to the same degree as for other schools (authority for school breakfast programs in these schools is contained in Sec. 20 of the Child Nutrition Act). [Sec. 17A of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

Retains the designation of the Act as the National School Lunch Act and replaces the Act's current provisions with authority for a School-Based Nutrition Block Grant Program.

Senate amendment

Conference agreement

Senate recedes with an amendment to:

A. CREATE AN OPTIONAL STATE BLOCK GRANT ENTITLED, "SCHOOL NUTRITION OPTIONAL BLOCK GRANT."

OPTIONAL BLOCK GRANT—Under the terms of the optional block grant, not more than 22 States in fiscal year 1996 and, in succeeding years, all States have the option of receiving funds to carry out programs offering school breakfasts and lunches for all school children under a block grant.

DECISION TO PARTICIPATE—States opting to participate in the block grant may reverse a decision to participate in the block grant once prior to the termination date and only after a two-year period of participation. If a State opts out, such State may resume participation under the school lunch and school breakfast programs and the commodity distribution program.

STATE PLAN—States are required to submit a State plan to the Secretary in order to participate in the block grant.

USE OF FUNDS—Allows States to use funds only for school lunches, breakfasts, and supplements and for the purchase of equipment or improvement of facilities needed to improve school food services.

NONPROFIT OPERATION—School lunch and breakfast programs are to be operated on a nonprofit basis.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES—None of the funds under the block grant are to be used for State administrative expenses. (States will continue to receive such funds under current SAE provisions).

NUTRITIONAL REQUIREMENTS—States are to provide minimum nutritional requirements for meals based on the most recent tested nutritional research available. Such requirements shall, to the extent practicable, be consistent with the goals of the most recent Dietary Guidelines for Americans. Meals shall provide, on the average over a week, at least $\frac{1}{3}$ of the recommended dietary allowance for lunches and $\frac{1}{4}$ of the recommended dietary allowance for breakfasts. The Secretary may not impose any additional nutritional requirements beyond those specified in this section.

STATE REVIEW—States will review the meal operations in each school food authority participating in the block grant no later than two years after implementation of the block grant and at the end of each 5-year period thereafter.

INCOME ELIGIBILITY—The State plan will describe how the block grant will serve specific groups of children in the State. The plan will further describe the income eligibility limitations established for free meals and, if available, for low-cost meals.

FREE MEALS—State's plan are required to offer access to free meals to students who are members of families with incomes at or below 130 percent of poverty and who attend a school participating in the block grant.

CONTINUED PARTICIPATION—Each school participating in the current school lunch and breakfast program in a State opting for a block grant is to be given opportunity to participate in State program under the block grant.

CASH/CLOC—States are required to permit a school district, nonprofit private school or DOD domestic dependents' school to receive commodity assistance in the same form they received such assistance as of January 1, 1987.

PRIVACY—States shall provide for safeguarding and restricting the use and disclosure of information about children receiving assistance under this Act. Physical segregation and overt identification of children participating in the block grant is prohibited.

REQUIRED REPORT—In order to participate, States must agree to submit a report to the Secretary each fiscal year describing (a) the number of children receiving assistance; (b) the different types of assistance provided; (c) the extent to which assistance was effective in achieving program goals; (d) the standards and methods used to ensure the nutritional quality of meals and meal supplements and (e) other information the Secretary can reasonably require. Failure to submit the required report will cause a 3 percent reduction in amounts otherwise payable to a State.

COMPLIANCE—The Secretary is required to review and monitor State compliance and withhold funds to the State with respect to the program or activity for which noncompliance is found, until the Secretary determines the problem has been corrected. The Secretary may seek financial restitution for misused funds.

PAYMENTS TO STATES—Payments to States under the block grant shall be on a quarterly basis and may be expended by the State for the current fiscal year or the succeeding fiscal year.

AUDITS—A yearly audit is required.

ALLOTMENT—In the first year of participation, the Secretary is required to allot to each participating State an amount that is equal to the amount the Secretary projects will be made available to the State to carry out the school lunch and breakfast programs (including commodities) for the current fiscal year. In succeeding years, the amount will equal the amount provided in the preceding fiscal year, adjusted to reflect changes in the consumer price index, services for food away from home, and changes in each State's student enrollment.

COMMODITIES—Not less than 8 percent and not more than 10 percent of the amount of a State's allotment will be in the form of commodities.

ALTERNATIVE ASSISTANCE—Requires the Secretary to arrange for the provision of assistance and reduce State allotments accordingly, in cases where a State is prohibited by law from providing assistance to a nonprofit private school or a DOD domestic dependents' school or if a State has substantially failed or is unwilling to provide such assistance to a nonprofit private school, a DOD domestic dependents' school or a public school.

TRANSITION—A State taking the block grant option may use funds and commodities from the preceding fiscal year under the school lunch and breakfast program to transition into the block grant and may use block grant funds to transition out of the block grant if the State decides to end participation before the end of the fiscal year.

EVALUATION—No later than three years after the establishment of the block grant the Secretary is to conduct an evaluation and submit a report to Congress, including the comments of the Comptroller General. The report is to include information on the effects of the block grant on the nutritional quality of meals; the degree to which children, particularly low income children participated in the block grant, the income distribution of children served and the amount of assistance such children received; the types of meals offered under the block grant; how the implementation of the block grant differs from the implementation of the school lunch and breakfast programs; the effect of the block grant on state and school administrative costs, the effect of the block grant on paperwork.

AUTHORIZATION PERIOD—the block grant option is authorized through September 30, 2002.

available or the model nutrition standards developed by the National Academy of Sciences (see item 20);

House bill

Provides that the Secretary of Agriculture make school-based nutrition grants to States if they agree to use their grant to provide assistance to schools for nutritious food service programs that provide affordable meals and supplements to students, including nonprofit:

House bill

Requires that each State ensure that not less than 80% of its school-based grant is used to provide free or low-cost meals to economically disadvantaged children (see item 21 for definitions).

Present law

Lunches served by school food authorities where 60 percent or more of the lunches are served free or at a reduced price (to children with family income below 185 percent of the Federal poverty income guidelines) are reimbursed at a rate 2 cents a meal higher than regular subsidy rates. [Sec. 4(b) of the National School Lunch Act]

26. VALUE OF FOOD ASSISTANCE

Present law

Schools and certain other child nutrition sponsors are "entitled" to commodities valued at a legislatively set, inflation-indexed amount per meal served. The per-meal reimbursement rate is indexed annually to reflect the annual percentage change in a 3-month average value of the Price Index for Food Used in Schools and Institutions, and rounded to the nearest ¼ cent. [Sec. 6(e) of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

No directly comparable provision. [Note: See item 12B.]

Senate amendment

Freezes (for one year) the guaranteed per-meal reimbursement rate for entitlement commodity assistance and revises (by changing rounding rules) the method of calculating this reimbursement rate.

On January 1, 1996, the entitlement commodity reimbursement rate set under current law for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded to the nearest ¼ cent) would be rounded down to the nearest lower cent. For the 1996–1997 school year, the rate would be frozen at the rate for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded down to the nearest lower cent). For the 1997–1998 school year, the rate would be the unrounded rate for the 1995–1996 school year, adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period and rounded down to the nearest lower cent. For following school years, the rate would be the unrounded rate for the preceding year, adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period and rounded down to the nearest lower cent. (p. 348)

[Note: Current-law rules as to the inflation-adjustment factor to be used (i.e., the Price Index for Food Used in Schools and Institutions) are not changed.]

Conference agreement

House recedes with an amendment providing that for the 1996–1997 and 1997–1998 school years the entitlement commodity reimbursement rate is frozen at the rate for the 95–96 school year (as rounded down to the nearest lower cent).

27. LUNCHES, BREAKFASTS, AND SUPPLEMENTS

Present law

"Paid" lunches, breakfasts, and supplements are served to those with family income above 185 percent of the Federal poverty guidelines. Guaranteed Federal reimbursement rates for each paid lunch, breakfast, and supplement are indexed annually to reflect changes in the food away from home series of the Consumer Price Index. When indexed, all reimbursement rates (i.e., for paid, free, and reduced-price meals and supplements) are rounded to the nearest ¼ cent. Present law establishes reduced price lunch reimbursement rates set at 40 cents less than the free lunch rates, and sets a maximum meal charge of 40 cents for these lunches. [Sec. 11(a) of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

No comparable provisions.

Senate amendment

Freezes (for two years) reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements. Revises (by changing rounding rules) the method for calculating reimbursement rates for paid, free, and reduced-price lunches, breakfasts, and supplements. [Note: Reimbursement rates for meals and supplements served in family day care homes and the Summer Food Service program are and would be governed by separate provisions of law (see below).]

On January 1, 1996, reimbursement rates for paid, free, and reduced-price lunches, breakfasts, and supplements set under current law for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded to the nearest ¼ cent) would be rounded down to the nearest lower cent. For the 1996–1997 and 1997–1998 school years, the reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would be frozen at the rates for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded down to the nearest lower cent). For the 1998–1999 school year, the reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would be the unrounded rates for the 1995–1996 school year adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period for which data are available, and rounded down to the nearest lower cent. For following school years, the reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would be the unrounded rates for the preceding year adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period, and rounded down to the nearest lower cent.

Reimbursement rates for free and reduced-price lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would continue to be indexed annually for inflation each school year (i.e., no two-year freeze), but would be rounded down to the nearest lower cent. [Note: Current-law rules as to the inflation-adjustment factor to be used (i.e., the food away from home series of the Consumer Price Index) are not changed.]

Conference agreement

Freezes (for two years) reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements. Revises (by changing rounding rules) the method for calculating reimbursement rates for paid, free, and reduced-price lunches, breakfasts, and supplements. [Note: Reimbursement rates for meals and supplements served in family day care homes and the Summer Food Service program are and would be governed by separate provisions of law (see below).]

On January 1, 1996, reimbursement rates for paid, free, and reduced-price breakfasts and supplements set under current law for the 1995–1996 school year would be rounded down to the nearest one cent. On July 1, 1996, reimbursement rates for paid, free and reduced price lunches would be rounded down to the nearest one cent. For the 1996–1997 and 1997–1998 school years, the reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would be frozen at the rates for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded down to the nearest lower cent). For the 1998–1999 school year, the reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would be the unrounded rates for the 1995–1996 school year adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period for which data are available, and rounded down to the nearest lower cent. For following school years, the reimbursement rates for paid lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would be the unrounded rates for the preceding year adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period, and rounded down to the nearest lower cent.

Reimbursement rates for free and reduced-price lunches, breakfasts, and supplements would continue to be indexed annually for inflation each school year (i.e., no two-year freeze), but would be rounded down to the nearest lower cent. [Note: Current-law rules as to the inflation-adjustment factor to be used (i.e., the food away from home series of the Consumer Price Index) are not changed.]

The differential between free and reduced price lunch reimbursements would be lowered by 5 cents (to 45 cents) effective July 1, 2000, and by an additional 5 cents (to 50 cents) effective July 1, 2001, and corresponding changes would be made to the reduced price meal charge limits.

28. SUMMER FOOD SERVICE PROGRAM FOR CHILDREN

Present law

Under the Summer Food Service program, all meals and supplements served are federally subsidized at legislatively set, inflation-indexed rates that, for the 1995 summer (set in January 1995), were $2.12 for each lunch/supper, $1.18 for each breakfast, and 55.5 cents for each supplement. In addition, sponsors receive payments for administrative costs based on the number of meals/supplements served. Basic Federal payments for lunches, breakfasts, and supplements are indexed for inflation annually based on the food away from home series of the Consumer Price Index, and rounded to the nearest ¼ cent. [Sec. 13(b) of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

No comparable provisions.

Senate amendment

Establishes new, lower reimbursement rates for meals and supplements served in the Summer Food Service program as follows: $2 for lunches/suppers, $1.20 for breakfasts, and 50 cents for supplements. The new rates would become effective January 1, 1996 (for the 1996 summer program), and be adjusted each January thereafter to reflect changes in the food away from home series of the Consumer Price Index (as under current law). However, while each adjustment would be based on the unrounded rates for the prior 12-month period, it would be rounded down to the nearest cent. [Note: Additional administrative-cost payment rates to sponsors are not affected.]

Conference agreement

House recedes with an amendment establishing new, lower rates for meals and supplements served in the Summer Food service program as follows: $1.82 for lunches served; $1.13 each breakfast served and $.46 for each meal supplement served.

29. SPECIAL MILK PROGRAM

Present law

Under the Special Milk program, the minimum per-half-pint reimbursement rate is indexed annually to reflect changes in the Producer Price Index for Fresh Processed Milk, and rounded to the nearest ¼ cent. [Sec. 3(a) of the Child Nutrition Act]

House bill

No comparable provisions.

Senate amendment

Freezes (for one year) the minimum per-half-pint reimbursement rate and revises (by changing rounding rules) the method of calculating the reimbursement rate.

On Jan. 1, 1996, the minimum reimbursement rate set under current law for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded to the nearest ¼ cent) would be rounded down to the nearest cent. For the 1996–1997 school year, the minimum reimbursement rate would be frozen at the rate for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded down to the nearest cent). For the 1997–1998 school year, the minimum reimbursement rate would be the unrounded rate for the 1995–1996 school year adjusted for inflation over the most recent 12-month period for which data are available, and rounded down to the nearest lower cent. For following school years, the minimum reimbursement rate would be the unrounded rate for the preceding year adjusted annually for inflation, and rounded down to the nearest lower cent. [Note: Current-law rules as to the inflation adjustment factor to be used (i.e., the Producer Price Index for Fresh Processed Milk) are not changed.]

Conference agreement

House recedes with an amendment providing that for the 1996–1997 and 1997–1998 school years, the minimum reimbursement rate is frozen at the rate for the 1995–1996 school year (as rounded down to the nearest lower cent).

31. CONFORMING REIMBURSEMENT FOR PAID BREAKFASTS AND LUNCHES

Present law

The per-meal reimbursement for paid breakfasts (paid meals are those served to children with family income above 185 percent of the Federal poverty income guidelines) is higher than the reimbursement rate for paid lunches—by about 2 cents a meal for the 1995–1996 school year. [Sec. 4(b) of the Child Nutrition Act]

[Note: The paid breakfast reimbursement rate is roughly the same as the current-law paid lunch rate for schools with free and reduced-price participation of 60 percent or more. This special lunch rate would be eliminated under Sec. 401 of the Senate amendment (see item 25).]

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

Requires that the reimbursement rate for paid breakfasts be the same as the rate for paid lunches.

Conference agreement

House recedes.

B. IMPROVED TARGETING OF DAY CARE HOME REIMBURSEMENTS

Present law

Federal reimbursement rates for meals and supplements served in family/group day care homes are standard for all homes, established separately from those for day care centers, not differentiated by the participating children's family income (as is the case for day care centers), and set approximately half-way between reimbursements for free and reduced-price meals/supplements in day care centers. They are indexed for inflation each July 1 (see item 36B(2)), and, for the period July 1995–June 1996, they are: $1.5375 for all lunches/suppers, 84.5 cents for all breakfasts, and 45.75 cents for all supplements. Family/group day care home sponsors also receive separate administrative cost reimbursements based on the number of homes sponsored. [Sec. 17(f) of the National School Lunch Act]

Meal and supplement reimbursements for family/group day care homes are indexed annually to reflect changes in the Consumer Price Index for food away from home and rounded to the nearest ¼ cent. [Sec. 17(f) of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

No comparable provisions.

Senate amendment

Restructures reimbursements for meals and supplements served in family/group day care homes. In general, homes would be divided into two "tiers," one of which would receive current-law reimbursements (with indexing adjustments, see item 37B(2) for changes in inflation indexing rules) and the other of which would receive lower reimbursements as set out under the Senate amendment. [Note: Separate payments to sponsors based on the number of homes sponsored are not changed, and current rules barring certain documentation requirements and reimbursements for meals/ supplements served to providers' children are retained.]

Tier I homes would be paid the meal/supplement reimbursements for family/group homes in effect on the date of enactment, adjusted on August 1, 1996, and each July 1 thereafter, to reflect inflation for the most recent 12-month period for which data are available.

Tier I homes would be those (1) located in areas, as defined by the Secretary based on Census data, in which at least half of the children are members of households with income below 185 percent of the Federal poverty income guidelines, (2) located in an area served by a school enrolling elementary students in which at least 50 percent of those enrolled are certified eligible for free or reduced-price school meals (i.e., have family income below 185 percent of the Federal poverty guidelines), or (3) operated by a provider whose family income is verified by its sponsoring organization to be below 185 percent of the poverty guidelines.

In general, tier II homes would be paid reimbursements of $1 for each lunch/supper, 30 cents for each breakfast, and 15 cents for each supplement (all substantially below tier I rates), adjusted on July 1, 1997, and each July 1 thereafter, to reflect inflation for the most recent 12-month period for which data are available.

Tier II homes would be homes that do not meet the tier I low-income area/provider standards.

Tier II homes could, at their option, claim higher tier I reimbursement rates under certain conditions: Tier II homes could elect to receive tier I reimbursements for meals/supplements served to children in households with income below 185 percent of the poverty guidelines, if the sponsoring organization collects the necessary income information and makes the appropriate eligibility determinations (in accordance with the Secretary's rules). Tier II homes also could receive tier I reimbursements for children in or subsidized under (or children of parents in or subsidized under) federally or State supported child care or other benefit programs with an income limit that does not exceed 185 percent of the poverty guidelines, and could restrict their claim for tier I reimbursements to these children if they opt not to have income statements collected from parents/caretakers.

The Secretary would be required to prescribe "simplified" meal counting/reporting procedures for use by tier II homes (and their sponsors) that elect to claim tier I reimbursements for children meeting the income or program participation requirements noted above. These procedures could include: (1) setting an annual percentage of meals/supplements to be reimbursed at tier I rates based on the family income of children enrolled during a specific month or other period, (2) placing a home in a reimbursement category based on the percentage of children with household income below 185 percent of poverty, or (3) other procedures determined by the Secretary.

The Secretary also would be permitted to establish minimum requirements for verifying income and program participation for children in tier II homes opting to claim tier I reimbursement rates.

Requires that reimbursements for family/group day care homes be indexed annually to reflect changes in the Consumer Price Index for food at home, based on the unrounded rates for the preceding 12-month period, and then rounded down to the nearest lower cent.

Requires the Secretary to reserve, from amounts available for the Child and Adult Care Food program in fiscal year 1996, $5 million—to provide grants for (1) training, materials, computer and other assistance to sponsoring organization staff and (2) training and other aid to family/group day care homes in implementing the new reimbursement-rate structure directed by the Senate amendment. The funds would be allocated among the States based on their proportion of participating homes, with a minimum of $30,000 as a State's base funding share, and States would not be allowed to retain more than 30 percent of their grant at the State level (passing the remainder to sponsors and providers).

Requires (1) the Secretary to provide State agencies with Census data necessary for determining homes' tier I status and (2) State agencies to provide the data to day care home sponsoring organizations.

Requires State agencies administering school meal programs to provide approved day care home sponsoring organizations a list of schools serving elementary school children in which at least half those enrolled are certified to receive free or reduced-price meals (one test for an area eligible for tier I reimbursements). The data for the list must be collected annually and provided on a timely basis to any requesting approved sponsoring organization.

Provides that, in determining homes' tier I status, State agencies and sponsoring organizations must use the most current data available.

Provides that a determination that a home is located in an area that qualifies it as a tier I home be in effect for three years, unless the State agency determine the area no longer qualifies the home. In the case of a determination made on the basis of Census data, the determination is to be in effect until more recent data are available.

Makes conforming technical amendments recognizing the new structure of family/group day care home reimbursement rates.

Conference agreement

House recedes with an amendment to establish new lower reimbursement rates for tier II homes for meals and supplements as follows: $.90 for each lunch and supper; $.25 for each breakfast; and $.10 for supplements.

C. DISALLOWING MEAL CLAIMS

Present law

No specific provision.

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

Makes clear that States and sponsoring organizations may recoup reimbursements to day care home providers for improperly claimed meals/supplements.

Conference agreement

House recedes.

D. ELIMINATION OF STATE PAPERWORK AND OUTREACH BURDEN

Present law

Provisions of the National School Lunch Act require (1) States to take affirmative action to expand availability of the Child and Adult Care Food program's benefits (including annual notification of all nonparticipating family/group day care home providers), (2) the Secretary to conduct demonstration projects to test approaches to removing or reducing barriers to participation by homes that operate in low-income areas or primarily serve low-income children, (3) the Secretary and States to provide training and technical assistance to sponsoring organizations in reaching low-income children, and (4) the Secretary to instruct States to provide information/training about child health and development through sponsoring organizations. [Sec. 17(k) of the National School Lunch Act]

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

Repeals existing "outreach" requirements noted under present law and requires that (1) States provide sufficient training, technical assistance, and monitoring to facilitate effective operation of the Child and Adult Care Food program and (2) the Secretary assist States in carrying out this obligation.

Conference agreement

House recedes.

E. STUDY OF IMPACT OF AMENDMENTS ON PROGRAM PARTICIPATION AND FAMILY DAY CARE LICENSING

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

Not later than two years after the date of enactment, requires the Secretary of Agriculture, in conjunction with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, to study the impact of the revisions to the Child and Adult Care Food program under the Senate amendment on:

(1) the number of participating family day care homes, day care home sponsoring organizations, and day care homes that are licensed, certified, registered, or approved by each State;

(2) the rate of growth in the number of participating homes, sponsors, and licensed, certified, registered, or approved homes;

(3) the nutritional adequacy/quality of meals served in family day care homes that no longer receive reimbursements or no longer receive "full" reimbursements; and

(4) the proportion of low-income children participating in the program. (p. 377)

Requires each State agency to submit data on (1) the number of participating family day care homes on July 31, 1996, and July 31, 1997, (2) the number of licensed, certified, registered, or approved family day care homes on July 31, 1996, and July 31, 1997, and (3) other matters needed to carry out the study as required by the Secretary.

Conference agreement

House recedes.

F. EFFECTIVE DATE AND REGULATIONS

Present law

Not applicable.

House bill

No comparable provisions.

Senate amendment

Establishes the effective date for changes in the family/group day care home reimbursement structure—August 1, 1996. Other changes affecting the Child and Adult Care Food program would be effective on enactment (e.g., grants to assist in implementation of the changes, limits on payments to sponsors' employees).

Requires that, by February 1, 1996, the Secretary issue interim regulations to implement (1) the changes in the family/group day care home reimbursement structure and (2) existing provisions of law for the use of sponsoring organizations' administrative expense payments for startup/expansion and outreach and recruitment activities. Final regulations would be required by August 1, 1996.

Conference agreement

House recedes.

SUBTITLE J—FOOD STAMPS AND COMMODITY DISTRIBUTION

FOOD STAMP REFORM

1. DECLARATION OF POLICY

Present law

The Food Stamp Act's declared policy is to safeguard the health and well-being of the Nation's population by raising levels of nutrition among low-income households. To alleviate hunger and malnutrition among low-income households with limited food purchasing power, the Act authorizes the food stamp program to permit low-income households to obtain a more nutritious diet through normal channels of trade by increasing the food purchasing power of all eligible households who apply. [Sec. 2]

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

Adds to the existing Food Stamp Act declaration of policy a statement that Congress intends that the food stamp program support the employment focus and family strengthening mission of public welfare and welfare replacement programs by facilitating transition to economic self-sufficiency through work, promoting employment as the primary means of income support and reducing barriers to employment, and maintaining and strengthening healthy family functioning and family life.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. SHORT TITLE

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Cites this subtitle as "The Food Stamp Simplification and Reform Act of 1995."

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. ESTABLISHMENT OF SIMPLIFIED FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

Present law

The Secretary is directed to establish uniform national standards of eligibility for food stamps (with certain variations allowed for Alaska, Hawaii, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and certain administrative rules). States may not impose any other standards of eligibility as a condition for participation in the program. [Sec. 5(b)]

House bill

Permits States to operate a "simplified food stamp program," either statewide or in any political subdivision. Under this program, households receiving regular cash benefits under the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) block grant established by title I of the Personal Responsibility Act (replacing the current Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program) could be provided food stamp benefits using the rules and procedures established by the State for its TANF block grant program, as an alternative to using regular food stamp rules.

Senate amendment

Explicitly permits non-uniform standards of eligibility. [Note: Also see item 38]

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

4. SIMPLIFIED FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

A. BASIC STATE OPTION

Present law

Households composed entirely of AFDC recipients are automatically eligible for food stamps, with few exceptions (e.g., aliens who do not meet the Food Stamp program's more stringent rules barring illegal aliens). [Sec. 5(a)]

As with other households, food stamp benefits for AFDC households are determined under Food Stamp program rules governing counting of income, expense deductions, and procedural requirements.

House bill

[Note: Sec. 542(a) of the House bill adds a new section 24 to the Food Stamp Act containing rules for the Simplified Food Stamp Program.]

If a State elects to exercise its option to use its TANF block grant rules and procedures for food stamp benefits, requires that (1) households in which all members receive regular cash benefits under a TANF block grant program be automatically eligible for food stamps and (2) food stamp benefits for them be determined under rules and procedures established by the State or locality under the State's TANF block grant program or the regular food stamp program.

Senate amendment

[Note: Sec. 342(a) of the Senate amendment adds a new section 24 to the Food Stamp Act containing rules for the Simplified Food Stamp Program]

Permits a State to exercise an option to use rules and procedures established for its family assistance block grant (under title I of the Senate amendment) to determine food stamp benefits for households in which all members receive family assistance block grant aid: (1) households in which all members receive aid under a family assistance block grant program would be automatically eligible for food stamps; and (2) their food stamp benefits could be determined by using rules and procedures established by the State for its family assistance block grant program, regular food stamp program rules and procedures, or a combination of the two. States also would be allowed to apply a single "shelter standard" to households that receive a housing subsidy and another to households that do not.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment deleting the specific reference to use of a single shelter standard.

B. FEDERAL COST CONTROL

Present law

No comparable provisions.

House bill

Requires that, when approving a State's plan to exercise its option for a simplified food stamp program, the Secretary certify that the average per-household food stamp benefit received by participating TANF households is not expected to exceed the average food stamp benefit level for AFDC or TANF recipients in the preceding fiscal year—adjusted for any changes in the "Thrifty Food Plan" (the basis for food stamp benefit levels). The Secretary also is required to compute the "permissible" average per-household benefit for each State or locality exercising the simplified program option.

Requires that, if average food stamp benefits under the simplified program exceed the permissible level (the Thrifty-Food-Plan-adjusted prior year amount), the State must pay the Federal Government the benefit cost of the excess within 90 days of notification.

Senate amendment

Provides that a State may not operate a simplified food stamp program unless it has an approved plan and requires the Secretary to approve any State plan if the Secretary determines it complies with the provisions of law governing the simplified food stamp program option and would not increase Federal costs under the Food

Stamp Act. Federal costs for this purpose are defined to exclude research, demonstration, and evaluation costs.

Requires the Secretary to determine whether a State's simplified food stamp program is increasing Federal costs under the Food Stamp Act. In making the determination, the Secretary (1) could not require States to collect or report any information on households not included in the simplified food stamp program and (2) could approve State requests to use alternative accounting periods. If the Secretary determines that a simplified food stamp program has increased Federal costs, the State must be notified by January 1 of the succeeding fiscal year.

If the Secretary determines that a simplified program has increased Federal costs for a two-year period, the State must pay the Federal Government the amount of any increased costs within 90 days of the determination (or have amounts due it for administrative costs reduced).

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment. The Secretary must, for each fiscal year, determine whether a simplified program is increasing Federal costs above those incurred under the food stamp program in the fiscal year prior to implementation of the simplified program, adjusted for changes in participation, the non-public-assistance income of participants, and the cost of the Thrifty Food Plan. The Secretary must notify the State of a determination of increased Federal costs, and the State must submit for approval a corrective action plan designed to prevent increased Federal costs. If a State fails to submit a plan or carry out an approved plan, the Secretary must terminate approval of the State's simplified program, and the State is ineligible for future participation under simplified program rules.

C. DISQUALIFICATION

Present law

Households penalized for an intentional failure to comply with a Federal, State, or local welfare program may not, for the duration of the penalty, receive an increased food stamp allotment because their welfare income has been reduced. [Sec. 8(d)]

[Note: This has been interpreted by regulation to apply only to reductions in welfare income due to repayment of overpayments resulting from a welfare violation, although a revision of the regulation is scheduled.]

House bill

Provides that (1) households receiving food stamps under the simplified program option who are sanctioned (disqualified or have their benefits reduced) under a State's TANF program may have the same penalty applied for food stamp purposes and (2) food stamp benefits to households participating under the simplified program option may not be increased as the result of a reduction in their TANF benefits caused by a sanction. Any household disqualified from food stamps as the result of a TANF program sanction would be eligible to apply for food stamps (as a new applicant) after the disqualification period has expired.

Senate amendment

[Note: See items 10 and 43.]

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

D. EXTENDING RULES TO "MIXED" HOUSEHOLDS

Present law

No comparable provisions.

House bill

Allows States the further option of applying their TANF rules and procedures to food stamp households in which some, but not all, members receive TANF benefits. These households would not be automatically eligible for food stamps (they would have to meet normal food stamp eligibility rules), but their benefits could be determined under the State's TANF rules and procedures, so long as the Secretary ensures that the State's plan provides for an "equitable" distribution of benefits among all household members.

Senate amendment

No comparable provisions.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The conferees encourage the Secretary to work with States to test methods for applying a single set of rules and procedures to households in which some, but not all, members receive cash welfare benefits under State rules.

E. CASH ASSISTANCE

Present law

No comparable provisions.

House bill

Allows States exercising the simplified program option to pay food stamp benefits in cash to some participating households. Cash benefits could be paid to households with 3 or more consecutive months' earned income of at least $350 a month from a private sector employer.

Provides that: (1) cash assistance in lieu of food stamps be considered the food stamp benefit of the earner's household, (2) the value of food stamp benefits provided in cash be treated as food stamp coupons for taxation and other purposes (i.e., disregarded), and (3) the State opting for cash payments increase the payments (at State expense) to offset the effect of any food sales taxes, unless the Secretary determines it unnecessary because of the limited nature of items taxed (sales taxes on food purchases with food stamp benefits are barred by existing law).

Requires States electing the cash benefit option to submit a written evaluation of the effect of cash assistance after 2 years' operation.

Senate amendment

[Note: See item 55.]

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

F. FEDERAL FOOD STAMP RULES

Present law

The Federal Government shares 50% of any State food stamp administrative costs (except that certain States with very low rates of erroneous benefit and eligibility determinations can receive up to 60%). States also may retain certain proportions of any overissued benefits they recoup. Special Federal cost-sharing rules apply in the case of employment and training programs for food stamp recipients. States are subject to a quality control system under which the extent of erroneous benefit and eligibility decisions is measured. Those with high rates of erroneous benefit and eligibility decisions are subject to fiscal sanctions. [Sec. 16]

House bill

Requires States exercising the simplified program option to, at a minimum, comply with certain rules mandated under the Food Stamp Act:

(1) requirements governing issuance procedures for food stamp benefits;

(2) the requirement that benefits be calculated by subtracting 30% of a household's income (as determined by State-established, not Federal, rules under the simplified program option) from the maximum food stamp benefit;

(3) the bar against counting food stamp benefits as income or resources in other programs;

(4) the requirements that State agencies assume responsibility for eligibility certification and issuance of benefits and keep records for inspection and audit;

(5) the bar against discrimination by reason of race, sex, religious creed, national origin, or political beliefs;

(6) requirements related to submission and approval of plans of operation and administration of the food stamp program on Indian reservations;

(7) limits on the use and disclosure of information about food stamp households;

(8) requirements for notice to and fair hearings for aggrieved households (or comparable requirements established by the State under its TANF program);

(9) requirements for submission of reports and other information required by the Secretary;

(10) the requirement to report illegal aliens to the Immigration and Naturalization Service;

(11) requirements for use of certain Federal and State data sources in verifying recipients' eligibility;

(12) requirements to take measures to ensure that households are not receiving duplicate benefits; and

(13) requirements for the provision of social security numbers as a condition of eligibility and for their use by State agencies.

States electing the simplified program option would be subject to normal food stamp program cost-sharing rules.

States electing the simplified option would be subject to the food stamp quality control system (including fiscal sanctions).

Senate amendment

Permits States exercising the option for a simplified food stamp program to apply rules and procedures under their family assistance block grant, the rules/procedures of the regular food stamp program, or the rules/procedures of one program to certain matters and those of the other in remaining matters. Permits States to standardize food stamp expense "deductions," but, in doing so, States would be required to give consideration to the work expenses, dependent care costs, and shelter costs of participating households.

Otherwise, the Senate amendment is the same as the House bill, except that it also would (1) require that States follow the revised rule in the Senate amendment (see item 43) as to not increasing food stamp benefits when other public assistance benefits are decreased (see item 4C in the House bill), (2) require that eligible households be certified and receive benefits not later than 30 days after application (as now required under the regular food stamp program), and (3) require that States issue "expedited" benefits to very low-income households (as required under the regular food stamp program).

Same as House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill with an amendment (1) allowing States to standardize deductions and (2) requiring States to follow the revised rule in the Senate amendment as to not increasing food stamp benefits when other public assistance benefits are decreased.

G. STATE PLANS

Present law

No comparable provision.

House bill

Requires that State plans for those States electing to exercise the simplified program option include the rules and procedures to be followed in determining benefits under the option, whether the program will include households in which not all members receive TANF grant benefits, and the method by which the State or political subdivision participating in the simplified program will carry out its quality control obligations.

Senate amendment

Requires that State plans for those States electing to exercise the simplified program option include the rules and procedures to be followed in determining benefits under the option, how the States will address the needs of households with high shelter costs, and a description of the method by which the State will carry out its quality control obligations.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

5. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS: SIMPLIFIED FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

Present law

Allows the Secretary to operate pilot projects similar to the simplified food stamp program State option proposed in the House bill. [Sec. 8(e) and Sec. 17(i)]

House bill

Deletes provisions for pilot projects similar to the simplified food stamp program State option.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill with an amendment to add necessary conforming amendments.

6. THRIFTY FOOD PLAN

Present law

Maximum monthly food stamp benefits are defined as 103% of the cost of the Agriculture Department's "Thrifty Food Plan," adjusted for food-price inflation each October according to the plan's cost in the immediately preceding June and rounded down to the nearest dollar by household size. [Sec. 3(o)]

House bill

Provides that current maximum monthly food stamp benefits (103% of the cost of the Thrifty Food Plan in June 1994) be increased by 2% a year, beginning with the October 1995 adjustment, and rounded down to the nearest dollar by household size.

Senate amendment

Sets maximum monthly food stamp benefits at 100% of the cost of the Thrifty Food Plan, effective October 1, 1995, adjusted annually, as under existing law and rounded down to the nearest dollar by household size. Requires that the October 1, 1995, adjustment not reduce maximum benefit levels.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment making it effective October 1, 1996.

7. INCOME DEDUCTIONS AND ENERGY ASSISTANCE

A. ENERGY ASSISTANCE

Present law

Payments or allowances for energy assistance provided by State or local law are, under rules set by the Secretary, disregarded ("excluded") as income. [Sec. 5(d)(11) and 5(k)]

Payments or allowances for weatherization assistance are disregarded as energy assistance. [Sec. 5(d)(11) and 5(k)] [Note: Weatherization payments could otherwise be disregarded as lump-sum payments, vendor payments, or reimbursements.]

Federal Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) benefits are disregarded as income. [Sec. 5(d)(11) and 5(k) of the Food Stamp Act and sec. 2605(f) of the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act]

Certain utility allowances under Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) programs are disregarded. [Sec. 5(d)(11) and 5(k)]

Shelter expense deductions may be claimed for utility costs covered by LIHEAP benefits, but not in the case of other disregarded energy assistance unless the household has additional out-of-pocket expenses. [Sec. 5(e) of the Food Stamp Act and Sec. 2605(f) of the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act]

House bill

Requires that State/local energy assistance be counted as income.

Continues to disregard as income payments or allowances for weatherization assistance under a Federal energy assistance program. Other weatherization assistance could be disregarded as lump-sum payments, vendor payments, or reimbursements.

Bars claiming shelter expense deductions for utility costs covered either directly or indirectly by the LIHEAP and other disregarded energy assistance.

Senate amendment

Requires that State/local energy assistance be counted as income..

Requires an income disregard for one-time payments/allowances under a Federal or State law for the costs of weatherization or emergency repair/replacement of unsafe/inoperative furnaces or other heating/cooling devices.

Counts Federal LIHEAP benefits as income.

Counts HUD utility allowances as income.

Allows claiming shelter expense deductions for utility costs covered directly or indirectly by the LIHEAP and other counted energy assistance.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. STANDARD DEDUCTIONS

Present law

For purposes of determining food stamp benefits and eligibility, applicant/recipient households may claim standard deductions from their otherwise countable income. Standard deductions are indexed annually (each October 1) for inflation based on the Consumer Price Index for items other than food and rounded down to the nearest dollar. For fiscal year 1995, standard deductions are set at: $134 a month for the 48 States and the District of Columbia, $229 for Alaska, $189 for Hawaii, $269 for Guam, and $118 for the Virgin Islands. For fiscal year 1996, they were "scheduled" to rise to: $138, $236, $195, $277, and $122, respectively, but this was barred by the fiscal year 1996 agriculture appropriations act. [Sec. 5(e)]

House bill

Sets standard deductions at their fiscal year 1995 levels, effective October 1, 1995.

Senate amendment

Reduces standard deductions:

(1) for fiscal year 1996, they would be $132, $225, $186, $265, and $116; and

(2) for fiscal year 1997–2002, they would be $124, $211, $174, $248, and $109.

Inflation indexing of standard deductions would resume October 1, 2002 (using existing indexing rules).

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill and continues to set standard deductions at their fiscal year 1995 levels.

C. EARNED INCOME DEDUCTION

Present law

Households may claim a deduction for 20% of any earned income. This deduction is not allowed with respect to any income that a household willfully or fraudulently fails to report in a timely manner (as proven in a fraud hearing proceeding)—i.e., it is not allowed when determining the amount of a benefit overissuance. [Sec. 5(e)]

House bill

Denies an earned income deduction for the food stamp benefit portion of income earned under a work supplementation/support program. [Note: See item 15.]

Senate amendment

Disallows an earned income deduction for any income not reported in a timely manner—i.e., the deduction would not be allowed in determining the amount of any overissued benefits.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment denying an earned income deduction for the public assistance portion of income earned under a work supplementation/support program.

D. EXCESS SHELTER EXPENSE DEDUCTION

Present law

For purposes of determining food stamp benefits and eligibility, applicant/recipient households may claim excess shelter expense deductions from their otherwise countable income—in the amount of any shelter expenses (including utility costs) above 50% of their countable income after all other deductions have been applied. For households with elderly or disabled members, these deductions are unlimited. For other households, they are limited by law through December 1996; limits are lifted as of January 1, 1997. For fiscal year 1995, excess shelter expense deductions were capped at: $231 a month for the 48 States and the District of Columbia, $402 for Alaska, $330 for Hawaii, $280 for Guam, and $171 for the Virgin Islands. For October 1995 through December 1996, the caps rose to $247, $429, $353, $300, and $182, respectively. [Sec. 5(e)]

States may use "standard utility allowances" (as approved by the Secretary) in calculating households' shelter expenses. However, households may claim actual expenses instead of the allowance and may switch between an actual expense claim and the standard allowance at the end of any certification period and one additional time during any 12-month period. [Sec. 5(e)]

House bill

Sets the limits on excess shelter expense deductions at fiscal year 1995 levels.

Senate amendment

Permits States to make the use of standard utility allowances mandatory for all households if (1) the State has developed separate standards that include the cost of heating and cooling and do not include these costs and (2) the Secretary finds that the standards will not result in increased Federal costs.

Removes the option for households to switch between a standard utility allowance and actual costs once during every 12-month period.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment that establishes excess shelter expense deduction limits at the October 1995/December 1996 levels.

E. HOMELESS SHELTER DEDUCTION

Present law

For homeless households not receiving free shelter throughout the month, States may develop a homeless shelter expense estimate (a standard amount) to be used in calculating an excess shelter expense deduction. States must use this amount unless the household verifies higher expenses. The Secretary may prohibit the use of the deduction for households with extremely low shelter costs. The amount is inflation indexed, and, for fiscal year 1995, it is limited to $139 a month; effective October 1, 1995, it is scheduled to rise to $143. [Sec. 11(e)(3)]

House bill

Sets the homeless shelter deduction at the fiscal year 1995 $139 a month amount and requires that it be used in establishing homeless households' excess shelter expense deductions when they do not receive free shelter throughout the month.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except that States may prohibit the use of the deduction for households with extremely low shelter costs.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

8. VEHICLE ALLOWANCE

A. THRESHOLD FOR COUNTING A VEHICLE'S VALUE

Present law

In determining a household's liquid assets for food stamp eligibility purposes, a vehicle's fair market value in excess of $4,550 is counted. This threshold rose to $4,600 in October 1995 and is scheduled to be annually indexed for inflation beginning in fiscal year 1997. [Sec. 5(g)(2)] [Note: Eligible households may have liquid assets of no more than $2,000 ($3,000 for households with elderly members).]

House bill

Sets the threshold above which the fair market value of a vehicle is counted as an asset at $4,550.

Senate amendment

Eliminates the October 1, 1995 increase in the threshold to $4,600 and requires that the $4,550 threshold begin to be inflation adjusted on October 1, 1996.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill, with an amendment setting the threshold at $4,600.

B. VEHICLES CARRYING FUEL OR WATER

Present law

In determining a household's liquid assets for food stamp eligibility purposes, the value of a vehicle that the household depends on to carry fuel for heating or water for home use is excluded. [Sec. 5(g)(2)]

House bill

Deletes the asset exclusion for vehicles used to carry fuel or water.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

9. WORK REQUIREMENTS

Non-exempt recipients between 16 and 60 are ineligible for food stamps if they refuse to register for employment, refuse to participate in an employment/training program when required to do so by the State, or refuse a job offer meeting minimum standards. [Sec. 6(d)]

Exempt individuals are: (1) those who are not physically or mentally fit, (2) those subject to and complying with a work/training requirement under the AFDC program or the unemployment compensation system (although failure to comply with an AFDC/unemployment system requirement is treated as a failure to comply with food stamp rules, if the requirement is "comparable"), (3) parents and other household members with the responsibility for care of a dependent child under age 6 or an incapacitated person, (4) postsecondary students enrolled at least half-time (separate rules bar eligibility for most postsecondary students who are not working or do not have dependents), (5) regular participants in drug addiction or alcoholic treatment programs, (6) persons employed at least 30 hours a week or receiving the minimum wage equivalent, and (7) persons between 16 and 18 who are not head of household and are in school at least half time. [Sec. 6(d)(1) and (2)]

In addition, if a non-exempt head of household fails to comply with one of the above-noted requirements or voluntarily quits a job without good cause, or if any non-exempt household member is on strike, the entire household is ineligible for food stamps. [Sec. 6(d)(1) & (3)]

A. JOB SEARCH

Present law

As noted above, non-exempt individuals refusing to participate in an employment/training program when required to do so by the State are ineligible for food stamps (if they are head of household, the entire household is ineligible). State-designed employment and training programs may include a requirement to perform job search activities. [Sec. 6(d)(1) & (2)]

House bill

Makes ineligible non-exempt individuals (and their households if they are head of household) who refuse to participate in a State-established job search program. [Note: Able-bodied non-elderly adults without dependents would be subject to new work requirements, see below.]

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. COMPARABLE WORK REQUIREMENTS

Present law

As noted above, individuals are exempt from food stamp employment/training requirements if they are subject to and complying with an AFDC or unemployment compensation work/training requirement, and failure to comply with such an AFDC or unemployment compensation requirement is treated as failure to comply with food stamp employment/ training requirements, if the requirement is "comparable." [Sec. 6(d)(2)]

House bill

Requires that failure to comply with an TANF or unemployment compensation system work/training requirement be treated as failure to comply with a food stamp employment/training requirement, whether or not the requirement is "comparable."

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. NEW WORK REQUIREMENT

Present law

As noted above, non-exempt individuals are ineligible for food stamps if they refuse to participate in an employment/training program when required to do so by the State. [Sec. 6(d)(1)]

House bill

Deletes provisions of law barring eligibility to those refusing to participate in State-established employment/training programs.

In their place, adds a new work requirement: non-exempt recipients (see below) would be disqualified if they are not employed a minimum of 20 hours a week or are not participating in the work program newly established under the House bill (see below) within 90 days of certification of eligibility.

Allows individuals who have been disqualified under the new work requirement to re-establish food stamp eligibility if they become exempt (under the rules noted immediately below), become employed at least 20 hours a week during any consecutive 30-day period, or participate in a work program (see below).

Exempt from the new requirement would be: (1) those under 18 or over 50, (2) those medically certified as physically or mentally unfit for employment, (3) parents or other household members responsible for the care of a dependent child, and (4) those who are otherwise exempt from work registration and job search rules (see present law description above).

Upon a State's request, allows the Secretary to waive application of the new work requirement for some or all individuals in all or part of a State if the Secretary determines that the area (1) has an unemployment rate over 10% or (2) does not have sufficient jobs to provide employment for those subject to the new requirement. The Secretary would be required to report to the Agriculture Committees the basis for any waiver based on lack of sufficient jobs.

Senate amendment

Adds a new work requirement: non-exempt persons (see below) would be ineligible if, during the preceding 12-month period, they received food stamps for 6 months or more while not working 20 hours or more a week (averaged monthly) or participating in and complying with a work/training program (see note regarding exemptions below) for at least 20 hours a week.

Exempt from the new requirement would be: (1) those under 18 or over 50, (2) those certified by a physician as physically or mentally unfit for employment, (3) parents or other household members responsible for the care of a dependent, (4) those participating a minimum of 20 hours a week in (and complying with the requirements of) a Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) program, a Trade Adjustment Assistance Act training program, or a State or local government employment or training program meeting Governor-approved standards, and (5) those otherwise exempt from work registration and job search rules (see present law description above.) [Note: The new work requirement could be met by those participating in and complying with (for 20 hours a week or more) a JTPA program, a Trade Adjustment Assistance training program, or a State/local employment or training program meeting Governor-approved standards (including a food stamp program employment/training activity other than job search or job search training).]

As in the House bill, waivers are allowed, except that the unemployment rate threshold is 8% and the Secretary must report the basis for any waiver.

Provides for a transition to the new work requirement. Prior to October 1, 1996, administrators would not "look back" a full 12 months in determining whether a recipient had been receiving food stamps and not meeting the new requirement; they would look back only to October 1, 1995.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill, with an amendment. Non-exempt persons (see below) are ineligible if, during the preceding 12-month period, they received food stamps for 4 months or more while not working 20 hours or more a week (averaged monthly), participating in and complying with a work program (see below) for at least 20 hours a week, or participating in a workfare program.

Exempt from the new requirement are: (1) those under 18 or over 50, (2) those medically certified as physically or mentally unfit for employment, (3) parents or other household members responsible for the care of a dependent child, (4) those otherwise exempt from work registration or job search rules (e.g., those caring for incapacitated persons), and (5) pregnant women.

Work programs allowing an exemption are programs under the JTPA or the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act, or employment/training programs operated or supervised by a State or locality meeting standards approved by the Governor (including a food stamp employment/training program)—except for job search or job search training programs.

Waiver reports are required for any waiver based on unemployment rates (over 10%) or lack of sufficient jobs.

The disqualification imposed by the new work requirement ceases to apply if, during a 30-day period, an individual works 80 hours or more, participates in and complies with a work program for at least 80 hours, or participates in a workfare program. In the subsequent 12-month period, an individual is eligible for food stamps for up to 4 months while not working for at least 20 hours a week, participating in a work program for at least 20 hours a week, or participating in a workfare program.

As in the Senate amendment, a transition to the new work requirement is provided.

D. DISQUALIFICATION

Present law

[Note: See present law description above. In addition, disqualification periods for failure to fulfill work requirements are (1) 2 months or until compliance (whichever is first) for most failures and (2) 90 days in case of a voluntary quit.]

House bill

No comparable provisions. [Note: The House bill creates new disqualification penalties for those covered by its new work requirement.]

Senate amendment

Rewrites and adds to rules governing disqualification for violation of work and employment/training requirements (other than those for the new work requirement noted above).

In addition to existing provisions for disqualification (e.g., job refusal, failure to participate in an employment/training program), makes ineligible (1) individuals who refuse without good cause to provide sufficient information to allow a determination of their employment status or job availability, (2) all individuals (in addition to heads of household) who voluntarily and without good cause quit a job, and (3) individuals who voluntarily and without good cause reduce their work effort (and, after the reduction, are working less than 30 hours a week).

Establishes a new household ineligibility rule: if any individual who is head of household is disqualified under a work rule, the entire household would, at State option, be ineligible for the lesser of the duration of the individual's ineligibility or 180 days—as determined by the State.

Establishes new mandatory minimum work-rule disqualification periods for individuals. For the first violation, individuals would be ineligible until the later of the date they fulfill work rules, for 1 month, or a period (determined by the State) not to exceed 3 months. For the second violation, individuals would be ineligible until the later of the date they fulfill work rules, for 3 months, or a period (determined by the State) not to exceed 6 months. For a third or subsequent violation, individuals would be ineligible until the later of the date they fulfill work rules, 6 months, a date determined by the State, or (at State option) permanently. These disqualification periods also would apply to those failing to meet any workfare requirements.

In establishing good cause, voluntary quits, and reduction of work effort, the Secretary would determine the meaning of the terms. States would determine the meaning of other terms and the procedures for making compliance decisions, but could not make a determination that would be less restrictive than a comparable one under the State's family assistance block grant program.

States would be required to include the standards and procedures they use in making work-rule disqualification/compliance decisions in their State plan.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

E. CARETAKER EXEMPTION

Present law

Parents or other household members with responsibility for the care of a dependent child under age 6 or of an incapacitated person are exempt from food stamp work rules. [Sec. 6(d)(2)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits States to lower the age at which a child "exempts" a parent/caretaker from 6 to not under the age of 1.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

F. WORK AND EMPLOYMENT/TRAINING PROGRAMS

Present law

States must operate employment and training programs for non-exempt food stamp recipients and place at least 15% of those covered in a program component. Exempt are those listed above and those States opt to exempt under Federal rules. Program components can range from job search or education activities to work experience/training and "workfare" assignments. [Sec. 6(d)(4)]

Work experience/training program components must limit assignments to projects serving a useful public purpose, use the prior training/experience of assignees, not provide work that has the effect of replacing others, and provide the same benefits and working conditions provided to other comparable employees. [Sec. 6(d)(4)(B)]

States and political subdivisions also may operate workfare programs under which non-exempt recipients may be required to perform work in return for the minimum wage equivalent of their household's monthly food stamp allotment. In general, those exempt are those listed above (p. 16). [Sec. 20]

Workfare assignments may not have the effect of replacing or preventing the employment of others and must provide the same benefits and working conditions provided to other comparable employees. [Sec. 20(d)]

The total hours of work required of a household under an employment/training program (including workfare) cannot in any month exceed the minimum wage equivalent of the household's monthly food stamp benefit. The total hours of participation in an employment and training program required of any household member cannot in any month exceed 120 hours (when added to other work). And, workfare hours (when added to other work) cannot exceed 30 hours a week for a household member. [Sec. 6(d)(4)(F) and Sec. 20(c)]

Under employment and training programs for food stamp recipients, States must provide or pay for transportation and other costs directly related to participation (up to $25 a month for each participant) and necessary dependent care expenses (in general, up to $175 or $200 a month for each dependent, depending on the dependent's age). Under workfare programs, States must reimburse participants for transportation and other costs directly related to participation (up to $25 a month for each participant). [Sec. 6(d)(4)(I) and Sec. 20 (d)(3)]

House bill

Deletes the requirement for States to operate employment and training programs and current provisions for work experience/ training and workfare programs.

Instead, requires the Secretary to permit any State that applies and submits a plan in compliance with the Secretary's guidelines to operate a work program for food stamp recipients subject to the new work requirement (see above) in the State or any political subdivision. A State's work program would require those accepting an offer of a work position in order to maintain food stamp eligibility to perform work on the State or local jurisdiction's behalf, or on behalf of a private nonprofit entity. The Secretary's guidelines would be required to allow States and localities to operate a work program that is consistent and compatible with similar programs they might operate.

Requires that, in order to be approved, a State's work program provide that participants work no more than the minimum wage equivalent of their household's monthly food stamp benefit (i.e., the number of hours equivalent to their household's monthly benefit divided by the minimum wage).

Limits the degree to which a State or locality can assign participants to replace other workers. No State/locality could replace an employed worker with a work program participant, but participants could be placed in (1) new positions, (2) positions that became available during the normal course of business, (3) positions that involve performing work that would otherwise be performed on an overtime basis, or (4) positions that became available by shifting current employees to an alternate position. [Note: States would receive Federal cost sharing for work program participant expenses (see below).]

Senate amendment

Revises the existing requirements for State-operated employment/training programs for food stamp recipients: (1) makes clear the work experience is a purpose of employment/training programs; (2) requires that each component of an employment/training program be delivered through a "statewide workforce development system," unless the component is not available locally; (3) expands the existing State option to apply work rules to applicants at application to all work requirements, not only job search; (4) removes specific rules governing job search components (i.e., tied to those for the AFDC program); (5) removes provisions for employment/training components related to work experience requiring that they be in public service work and use (to the extent possible) recipients' prior training and experience; (6) removes specific Federal rules as to States' authority to exempt categories and individuals from employment/training requirements; (7) removes the requirement to serve volunteers in employment/training programs; (8) removes the requirement for "conciliation procedures" for resolution of disputes involving participation in an employment or training program; (9) limits employment/training funding provided by the food stamp program for services to AFDC or family assistance block grant funding recipients to the amount used by the State for AFDC recipients in fiscal year 1995; and (10) removes Federal performance standards on States for employment/training programs for food stamp recipients.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

G. FUNDING WORK AND EMPLOYMENT/TRAINING PROGRAMS

Present law

To support employment and training programs for food stamp recipients, States receive a formula share of $75 million a year (based partially on their share of food stamp recipients not exempt from work registration and employment/training requirements and partially on their share of those placed in employment/training program components). Minimum State annual allocations are $50,000.

In addition to its portion of the $75 million annual grant, each State is entitled to (1) 50% of any additional costs incurred, (2) 50% of any transportation or other participant costs paid or incurred up to half of $25 a month for each participant, and (3) 50% of any dependent care costs paid or incurred up to half of certain limits (generally, $175/$200 a month for each dependent, depending on the dependent's age). [Sec. 16(h)]

House bill

To support work programs for food stamp recipients, requires the Secretary to allocate among States and localities operating them $75 million a year, based on their share of recipients subject to the new work requirement (see above). Minimum State allocations would be $50,000.

Requires States to notify the Secretary as to their intention to operate a work program, and requires the Secretary to reallocate unclaimed portions of the $75 million annual grant to other States, as the Secretary deems appropriate and equitable.

Requires that, in addition to its portion of the $75 million annual grant, the Secretary pay each State (1) 50% of any additional costs incurred and (2) 50% of any transportation or other participant costs paid or incurred up to half of $25 a month for each participant.

Allows the Secretary to suspend or cancel some or all payments made to States for the work program, or withdraw approval, on a finding of noncompliance.

Senate amendment

To support employment/training programs for food stamp recipients, requires the Secretary to "reserve for allocation" to States: $77 million for fiscal year 1996, $80 million for fiscal year 1997, $83 million for fiscal year 1998, $86 million for fiscal year 1999, $89 million for fiscal year 2000, $92 million for fiscal year 2001, and $95 million for fiscal year 2002. Allocations would be based on a "reasonable formula" (determined by the Secretary) that gives consideration to States' shares of the population affected by the new work requirement (see above). Minimum State allocations would be $50,000.

Requires reallocations as in the House bill.

Continues existing provisions for payments for additional costs, but adds explicit permission for a 50% Federal share of State case management costs.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

H. CONFORMING AMENDMENT

Present law

There is authorized a demonstration project similar to the new work requirement in the House bill; it has not been implemented. [Sec. 17(d)]

House bill

Deletes authorization for a demonstration project similar to the new work requirement in the House bill.

Senate amendment

Makes several technical and conforming amendments to employment and training provisions.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill and makes technical and conforming amendments.

10. COMPARABLE TREATMENT OF DISQUALIFIED INDIVIDUALS

Present law

[Note: See item 4C.]

House bill

Requires that individuals who have been disqualified for noncompliance with requirements under a TANF program not be eligible to participate for food stamps during the disqualification period.

Senate amendment

If an individual is disqualified for failure to perform an action required under a Federal, State, or local welfare/public assistance program, permits States to impose the same disqualification for food stamps.

If a disqualification is imposed under the family assistance block grant, permits States to use the family assistance block grant's rules and procedures to impose the same disqualification for food stamps.

Permits individuals disqualified from food stamps because of failure to perform a required action under another welfare/public assistance program to apply for food stamps as new applicants after the disqualification period has expired—except that a prior disqualification under food stamp work requirements must be considered in determining eligibility.

Requires States to include the guidelines they use in carrying out food stamp disqualification for failure to perform a required action in another welfare/public assistance program in their State plans.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment changing references to welfare or public assistance programs to references to needs-tested public assistance programs.

11. ENCOURAGE ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER SYSTEMS

A. REGULATION E

Present law

The Federal Reserve Board has ruled that, as of March 1997 and with some minor modifications, its "Regulation E" will apply to electronic benefit transfer systems. Regulation E provides certain protections for consumers using cards to access their accounts. It limits the liability of cardholders for unauthorized withdrawals (to $50, if notification is made) and requires periodic account statements and certain error resolution procedures. [Federal Register of Mar. 7, 1994]

House bill

[Note: See item 56 for optional block grants for States fully implementing electronic benefit transfer systems.]

Provides that Regulation E not apply to any electronic benefit transfer program (distributing needs-tested benefits) established or administered by States or localities.

Senate amendment

Provides that Regulation E not apply to food stamp benefits delivered through any electronic benefit transfer system.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. CHARGING FOR ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER CARD REPLACEMENT

Present law

No specific provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Provides that States may charge recipients for the cost of replacing a lost or stolen electronic benefit transfer card and may collect the charge by reducing the recipient's food stamp benefit.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows Senate amendment.

C. PHOTOGRAPHIC IDENTIFICATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Requires that each electronic benefit transfer card bear a photograph of the members of the household to which the card is issued.

Senate amendment

Permits States to require that electronic benefit transfer cards contain a photograph of 1 or more household members and requires that, if a State requires a photograph, it shall establish procedures to ensure that other appropriate members of the household and authorized representatives may use the card.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

D. RULES FOR ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER SYSTEMS

Present law

State agencies, with the Secretary's approval, may implement on-line electronic benefit transfer systems for delivering food stamp benefits, in lieu of coupons. No State may implement or expand an electronic benefit transfer system without prior approval from the Secretary. States are responsible for 50% of any electronic benefit transfer system costs (as with any benefit issuance system), including equipment and electronic benefit transfer cards. [Sec. 7(i)]

The Secretary's regulations for approval must (1) include standards that require that, in any one year, the operational cost of an electronic benefit transfer system does not exceed costs of prior issuance systems and (2) include system security standards. [Sec. 7(i)]

House bill

Deletes requirements for the Secretary's prior approval, "encourages" State agencies to implement on-line electronic benefit transfer systems for delivering food stamp benefits, and authorizes States to procure and implement these systems (under terms, conditions and designs that the State deems appropriate).

Allows the Secretary to waive, on a State's request, any provision of the Food Stamp Act that prohibits effective implementation of an electronic benefit transfer system for food stamp benefits.

Requires re-issuance and revision of regulations governing food stamp electronic benefit transfer systems (current regulations for approval of these systems were issued in April 1992).

Deletes the requirement that the Secretary's regulations for electronic benefit transfer systems require that costs of the electronic benefit transfer system in any one year not exceed costs of prior issuance systems.

Adds requirements that the Secretary's standards for electronic benefit transfer systems include (1) measures to maximize system security using the most recent technology the State considers appropriate (including personal identification numbers, photographic identification on electronic benefit transfer cards, and other measures to protect against fraud and abuse) and (2) effective not later than 2 years after enactment, measures that permit electronic benefit transfer systems to differentiate food items that may be acquired with food stamp benefits from those that may not.

Senate amendment

Permits States to implement EBT systems under rules separate from those in existing law as amended, if a State notifies the Secretary of its intent to convert to a statewide system within 3 years of enactment. The Secretary may not provide coupons to a State beginning 3 years after the chief executive gives notification of intent to convert under the EBT option—but the State may extend this deadline by 2 years and the Secretary may grant a waiver of up to 6 months for good cause. [Note: The Secretary is authorized to provide coupons for disaster relief.]

Places requirements on the Secretary under the EBT option. The Secretary must:

(1) assist States in converting to an EBT system and (in consultation with the Inspector General and the Secret Service) inform States about proper security features, management techniques, and counterfeit deterrence;

(2) reimburse States for purchasing and issuing EBT cards [Note: The Secretary may charge recipients (through allotment reduction or otherwise) for the cost of replacing lost or stolen cards, unless stolen by force or threat of force];

(3) assign additional employees to investigate and monitor compliance with EBT and retailer participation rules;

(4) establish a Transition Conversion Account (TCA) to be funded with transaction fees of no more than 2 cents a transaction (maximum of 16 cents a month) taken from each EBT household's benefits [Note: Fees would be imposed during the 10-year period beginning on enactment and placed in the TCA at the beginning of each year during the 10-year period beginning with the first full fiscal year after enactment. They would be imposed to the extent necessary to not increase the Secretary's costs under the EBT option and could not be greater than needed for the purposes of the TCA (see below). Fees could be reduced for households receiving maximum benefits.]

(5) from the TCA and, to the extent necessary, from food stamp appropriations, provide funds to States choosing the EBT option for (1) reasonable purchase and installation costs (including reimbursements to retailers) of single-function point-of-sale equipment to be used only for Federal/State assistance programs, (2) reasonable start-up purchase and installation costs for telephone equipment and connections to the point-of-sale equipment, and (3) modification of existing EBT systems to the extent necessary to operate Statewide or interstate;

(6) from the TCA, provide funds to implement the EBT option and for (1) start-up training, (2) reasonable one-time costs of converting to a system capable of interstate and law enforcement functions, (3) liabilities assumed by the Secretary under the EBT option (e.g., for replaced benefits), and (4) implementing and expanding a nationwide program for compliance with EBT and retailer rules; and

(7) consult with government, food industry, financial services, and food advocacy representatives in the conversion to EBT as to (1) integrating EBT systems into commercial networks, (2) EBT system security, (3) use of laser scanner technology to ensure that only eligible items are purchased, (4) use of EBT system data to identify fraud, (5) means of ensuring confidentiality, (6) using existing terminals and systems to reduce costs, and (7) using EBT systems for multiple benefits.

Places requirements and conditions on States under the EBT option. States:

(1) must take into account generally accepted operating rules based on commercial technology and the need to permit interstate operations and law enforcement monitoring and investigations;

(2) may use paper-based and other benefit transfer approaches for special-need retailers (located in very rural areas, without access to dependable electricity or regular telephone service, farmers' markets, and house-to-house trade routes);

(3) must purchase and install (or reimburse for) single-function point-of-sale (and related telephone) equipment, usable

only for Federal/State assistance, for retailers that do not have point-of-sale EBT equipment and do not intend to obtain it in the near future [Note: Equipment must be capable of interstate operations (based on commercial operating principles) that permit law enforcement monitoring and be capable of giving recipients access to multiple benefits.];

(4) must purchase (or reimburse for) point-of-sale paper-based or alternative benefit transfer equipment for special-need retailers without this equipment who do not intend to obtain it in the near future (equipment would be usable only for Federal/State assistance);

(5) must use competitive bidding systems in purchasing EBT equipment and cards [Note: States may not have purchase agreements conditioned on buying additional services or equipment, the Secretary must monitor prices paid, and the Inspector General must investigate possible wrongdoing,];

(6) must advise recipients how to promptly report lost, stolen, damaged, improperly manufactured, dysfunctional, or destroyed EBT cards;

(7) must not (following the Secretary's regulations) replace benefits lost due to unauthorized use of an EBT card, but recipients would receive replacement benefits for losses caused by (1) force or threat of force, (2) unauthorized use after the State gets notice a card was lost/stolen, or (3) problems with the EBT system [Note: Except for losses caused by force or threat of force, States must reimburse the Secretary for benefit replacements, and States may obtain reimbursement from service providers for losses caused by system problems.];

(8) may require an explanation from recipients on occasions where they report lost or stolen cards or cards are used for an unauthorized transaction;

(9) must, in appropriate circumstances, investigate and act on (through administrative disqualification or court referral) cases of lost or stolen cards or unauthorized use;

(10) must (1) take into account the needs of law enforcement personnel and the need to permit and encourage technological/scientific advances, (2) ensure security is protected, (3) provide for recipient privacy, ease of EBT card use, and access to and service by retailers, (4) provide for financial accountability and system capability for interstate operations and law enforcement monitoring, (5) prohibit retailer participation unless appropriate equipment is operational and reasonably available to recipients, and (6) provide for monitoring and investigation by law enforcement agencies;

(11) must, on a recipient's request, provide, once a month, a statement of benefit transfers and balances for the preceding month; and

(12) must design systems to timely resolve disputes over errors. [Note: Recipients able to obtain error corrections under the system would not be entitled to a fair hearing.].

Provides that retailers may return equipment provided by the State and obtain equipment with their own funds and that the cost of documents or systems under the EBT option may not be imposed on retailers.

Provides that EBT retailer fraud and related activities be governed by the Food Stamp Act and 18 U.S.C. 1029.

Makes technical and conforming amendments and defines electronic benefit transfer system, retail food store, special-need retail food store, and electronic benefit transfer card.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill, with an amendment. States are required to implement an electronic benefit transfer system ('on-line' or 'off-line') before October 1, 2002, unless the Secretary waives the requirement because a State agency faces unusual barriers to implementation, and State are encouraged to implement an electronic benefit transfer system as soon as practicable. Subject to Federal standards, States are allowed to procure and implement an electronic benefit transfer system under terms, conditions, and design that they consider appropriate, and a new requirement for Federal procurement standards is added. A requirement is added for electronic benefit transfer standards following generally accepted standard operating rules based on commercial technology, the need to permit interstate operation and law enforcement, and the need to permit monitoring and investigations by authorized law enforcement officials. A requirement that regulations regarding replacement of benefits under an electronic benefit transfer system be similar to those in effect for a paper food stamp issuance system is added. Provisions in the House bill that are retained are: a provision deleting the requirement that electronic benefit transfer systems be cost-neutral in any one year, requirements as to measures to maximize security, and a provision requiring measures to permit electronic benefit systems to differentiate among food items (to the extent practicable). The House bill provision allowing the Secretary to waive Food Stamp Act provisions that prohibit effective implementation of electronic benefit transfer systems is deleted.

12. VALUE OF MINIMUM ALLOTMENT

Present law

The minimum monthly allotment for 1- and 2-person households is set at $10. It is scheduled to rise to $15 in fiscal year 1997 or 1998 (depending on food-price inflation). [Sec. 8(a)]

House bill

Sets the minimum monthly allotment for 1- and 2-person households at $10.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

13. INITIAL MONTH BENEFIT DETERMINATION

Present law

Recipient households not fulfilling eligibility recertification requirements in the last month of their certification period are allowed a 1-month "grace period" in which to fulfill the requirements before their benefits are pro-rated (reduced) to reflect the delay in meeting recertification requirements. [Sec. 8(c)(2)(B)]

House bill

For those who do not complete all eligibility recertification requirements in the last month of their certification period, but are then determined eligible after their certification period has expired, requires that they receive reduced benefits in the first month of their new certification period (i.e., their benefits would be pro-rated to the date they met the requirements and were judged eligible).

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

14. IMPROVING FOOD STAMP MANAGEMENT

A. QUALITY CONTROL FISCAL SANCTIONS

Present law

States are assessed fiscal sanctions if their "quality control" combined (overpayment and underpayment) error rate for a given fiscal year is higher than the national average for that year. The amount of each State's sanction is determined by using a "sliding scale" so that its penalty assessment reflects the degree to which its combined error rate exceeds the national average tolerance level. In effect, the current system requires that States be sanctioned for a portion of every benefit dollar that exceeds the tolerance level. For example, if the tolerance level were 10% and the State's combined error rate were 12%, or 2 percentage points (20%) above the tolerance level, the State would be assessed a penalty of .2% of benefits issued in the State that year (i.e., 20% of the excess above the threshold). [Sec. 16(c)]

House bill

Requires the assessment of fiscal sanctions if a State's combined error rate is above a tolerance level set at the lowest national average combined error rate ever achieved, plus 1 percentage point. States would be assessed a dollar penalty for each dollar in error above the tolerance level. For example, if a State's combined error rate were 2 percentage points above the lowest ever national average tolerance level, plus 1 percentage point, it would be assessed a penalty of 2% of benefits issued in the State that year.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. QUALITY CONTROL ADMINISTRATIVE RULES

Present law

Errors resulting from the application of new regulations are not included in a State's error rate for assessing sanctions during the first 120 days from required implementation of the regulations. [Sec. 16(c)(3)(A)]

Specific time frames are set out for completion of quality control reviews, determining final error rates, and various steps of the appeals process. Administrative law judges are required to consider all grounds for denying a sanction claim against a State, including contentions that a claim should be waived for good cause. [Sec. 16(c)(8)]

For judging to what degree a State should be sanctioned, "good cause" is defined as including: (1) a natural disaster or civil disorder that adversely affects food stamp operations, (2) a strike by State employees who are necessary for food stamp operations, (3) a significant growth in food stamp caseload, (4) a change in the Food Stamp program (or other Federal or State program) that has a substantial adverse impact on the management of the Food Stamp program, and (5) a significant circumstance beyond the control of a State agency. [Sec. 16(c)(9)]

If a State appeals a quality control sanction claim, interest on any unpaid portion of the claim accrues from the date of the decision on the administrative appeal or from a date that is 1 year after the date a bill for the sanction is received, whichever is earlier. [Sec. 13(a)(1)]

House bill

Bars inclusion of errors resulting from the application of new regulations for 60 days (or 90 days at the Secretary's discretion).

Deletes specific time frames for reviews, error rates, and the appeals process. Deletes the directive that administrative law judges consider all grounds for denying a sanction claim against a State.

Deletes the Act's definition of good cause for the quality control system.

Requires that interest on sanction claims begin to accrue from the date of the administrative appeal decision or 2 years after the sanction bill is received, whichever is earlier.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

15. WORK SUPPLEMENTATION OR SUPPORT PROGRAM

Present law

No provisions.

House bill

Permits States having a work supplementation or support program (under which public assistance benefits are provided to employers who hire public assistance recipients and then used to pay part of their wages) to include the cash value of a recipient's household food stamp benefits in the amount paid the employer to subsidize wages paid. Work supplementation/support programs would be required to meet standards set by the Secretary in order to avail themselves of the option to include food stamp benefits. The food stamp benefit value of the supplement could not be considered income for other purposes, and the household of the participating member would not receive regular food stamp allotments while the member was in a work supplementation/support program. States would be required to include any plans for including food stamp recipients in work supplementation or support programs in their State plans.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except (1) a qualified work supplementation/support program may not allow participation of any individual for longer than one year (unless the Secretary approves a longer period), and (2) a qualified work supplementation/support program must be used for hiring and employing new employees.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill, with an amendment to provide that (1) States must provide a description of how recipients in the program will, within a specific period of time, be moved to employment that is not supplemented or supported and (2) programs not displace employment of those who are not supplemented or supported.

16. OBLIGATIONS AND ALLOTMENTS

Present law

The Food Stamp Act authorizes to be appropriated such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year 1991–1995. [Sec. 18(a)]

House bill

Provides that the amount obligated under the Act will not be in excess of the cost estimate of the Congressional Budget Office for fiscal year 1996, with adjustments for additional fiscal years—in both cases reflecting amendments made by the Personal Responsibility Act.

Requires the Secretary to file reports (each February, April, and July) stating whether there is a need for additional obligational authority and authorizes the Secretary to provide recommendations as to how to equitably achieve spending reductions if allotments must be limited in any fiscal year.

Senate amendment

Authorizes such sums as are necessary through fiscal year 2002.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

17. REAUTHORIZATION OF PUERTO RICO NUTRITION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Present law

The Food Stamp Act requires the Secretary to pay specific sums for Puerto Rico's nutrition assistance block grant for fiscal year 1991–1995. The fiscal year 1995 amount is $1.143 billion. [Sec. 19(a)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the following payments for Puerto Rico's nutrition assistance block grant: $1.143 billion for each of fiscal year 1995 and fiscal year 1996, $1.182 billion for fiscal year 1997, $1.223 billion for fiscal year 1998, $1.266 billion for fiscal year 1999, $1.310 billion for fiscal year 2000, $1.343 billion for fiscal year 2001, and $1.376 billion for fiscal year 2002.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment to require the following payments for Puerto Rico's block grant: $1.143 billion for fiscal year 1996, $1.182 billion for fiscal year 1997, $1.223 billion for fiscal year 1998, $1.266 billion for fiscal year 1999, $1.310 billion for fiscal year 2000, $1.357 billion for fiscal year 2001, and $1.404 billion for fiscal year 2002.

18. AUTHORITY TO ESTABLISH AUTHORIZATION PERIODS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Requires the Secretary to establish specific time periods during which retail food stores' and wholesale food concerns' authorization to accept and redeem food stamp coupons (or redeem food stamp benefits through an electronic benefit transfer system) will be valid.

Senate amendment

Permits the Secretary to issue regulations establishing specific time periods during which authorization to accept and redeem food stamp coupons will be valid.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

19. CONDITION PRECEDENT FOR APPROVAL OF RETAIL FOOD STORES AND WHOLESALE FOOD CONCERNS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Provides that no retail food stores or wholesale food concerns be approved for participation in the Food Stamp program unless an Agriculture Department employee (or, whenever possible, a State or local government official designated by the Department) has visited it.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill, with an amendment limiting stores and food concerns that must be visited to those of a type, determined by the Secretary, based on factors that include size, location, and type of items sold.

20. WAITING PERIOD FOR RETAIL FOOD STORES AND WHOLESALE FOOD CONCERNS THAT ARE DENIED APPROVAL TO ACCEPT COUPONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Provides that retail food stores and wholesale food concerns that have failed to be approved for participation in the Food Stamp program may not submit a new application for approval for 6 months from the date they receive a notice of denial. Current law provisions granting denied retailers and wholesalers a hearing on a refusal are retained.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except that stores and concerns may not submit a new application for 6 months from the date of the denial.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment providing that stores and concerns denied approval because they do not meet the Secretary's approval criteria may not, for at least 6 months, submit a new application. The Secretary is allowed to establish longer waiting periods, including permanent disqualification, that reflect the severity of the basis for denial.

21. DISQUALIFICATION OF RETAIL FOOD STORES AND WHOLESALE FOOD CONCERNS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Requires that a retail food store or wholesale food concern that is disqualified from participation in the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) also be disqualified from participating in the Food Stamp program for the period of time it is disqualified from the WIC program.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary to issue regulations providing criteria for disqualifying from food stamps retail food stores and wholesale food concerns disqualified from the WIC program. Disqualification must be for the same period as under the WIC program, may begin at a later date, and would not be subject to food stamp administrative/judicial review procedures.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a technical amendment.

22. AUTHORITY TO SUSPEND STORES VIOLATING PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS PENDING ADMINISTRATIVE AND JUDICIAL REVIEW

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Requires that, where a retail food store or wholesale food concern has been permanently disqualified (for its third offense or for certain instances of trafficking), the disqualification period will be effective from the date it receives notice of disqualification, pending administrative and judicial review.

Senate amendment

Permits regulations establishing criteria under which authorization of a retail food store or wholesale food concern may be suspended at the time the store/concern is initially found to have committed a violation that would result in permanent disqualification; the suspension may coincide with the period of administrative/judicial review. The Secretary would not be liable for the value of any lost sales during any suspension/ disqualification period.

Requires notice in suspension cases. Stipulates that a suspension period remains in effect pending administrative/judicial review and that the suspension period be part of any disqualification imposed.

Removes provisions for courts temporarily staying administrative actions against stores, concerns, and States pending judicial appeal.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment providing that any permanent disqualification of a store or concern be effective from the date the notice of disqualification is received. If the disqualification is reversed through administrative or judicial review, the Secretary is not liable for the value of lost sales during the disqualification period.

23. CRIMINAL FORFEITURE

Present law

"Administrative forfeiture" rules allow the Secretary to subject property involved in a program violation to forfeiture to the United States. [Sec. 15(g)]

House bill

Establishes "criminal forfeiture" rules. Requires courts, in imposing sentence on those convicted of trafficking in food stamp benefits, to order that the person forfeit property to the United States (in addition to any other sentence imposed). Property subject to forfeiture would include all property (real and personal) used in a transaction (or attempted transaction) to commit (or facilitate the commission of) a trafficking violation (other than a misdemeanor); proceeds traceable to the violation also would be subject to forfeiture. An owner's property interest would not be subject to forfeiture if the owner establishes that the violation was committed without the owner's knowledge or consent. (p. 246)

Requires that the proceeds from any sale of forfeited properties, and any money forfeited, be used (1) to reimburse the Justice Department for costs incurred in initiating and completing forfeiture proceedings, (2) to reimburse the Agriculture Department's Office of Inspector General for costs incurred in the law enforcement effort that led to the forfeiture, (3) to reimburse Federal or State law enforcement agencies for costs incurred in the law enforcement effort that led to the forfeiture, and (4) by the Secretary to carry out store approval, reauthorization, and compliance activities.

Senate amendment

Removes provisions for administrative forfeiture for property "intended to be furnished" in trafficking cases.

Establishes "criminal forfeiture" rules similar to those in the House bill, but applied only in trafficking cases involving benefits of $5,000 or more. Property subject to forfeiture would include: (1) food stamp benefits, and any property constituting, derived from, or traceable to any proceeds obtained directly or indirectly as the result of the violation and (2) food stamp benefits, and any property used or intended to be used to commit or facilitate the violation.

Food stamp benefits and property subject to criminal forfeiture, any seizure or disposition of the benefits/property, and any administrative/ judicial proceeding relating to the benefits/property would be subject to forfeiture provisions of the Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 (where consistent with Food Stamp Act provisions). [Note: No specific Food Stamp Act provisions for use of the proceeds from forfeited property are included]

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

24. EXPANDED DEFINITION OF "COUPON"

Present law

The Act defines "coupon" to mean any coupon, stamp, or type of certificate issued under the provisions of the Food Stamp Act. [Sec. 3(d)]

House bill

In order to expand the types of items to which trafficking penalties apply, revises the current definition of "coupon" to include authorization cards, cash or checks issued in lieu of coupons, and "access devices" for electronic benefit transfer systems (including electronic benefit transfer cards and personal identification numbers).

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

25. DOUBLED PENALTIES FOR VIOLATING FOOD STAMP REQUIREMENTS

Present law

The disqualification penalty for the first intentional violation of program requirements is 6 months. The penalty for a second intentional violation (and the first violation involving trading of a controlled substance) is 1 year. [Sec. 6(b)(1)]

House bill

Increases the disqualification penalty for a first intentional violation to 1 year. Increases the disqualification penalty for a second intentional violation (and the first violation involving a controlled substance) to 2 years.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

26. DISQUALIFICATION OF CONVICTED INDIVIDUALS

Present law

Permanent disqualification is required for the third intentional violation of program requirements, the second violation involving trading of a controlled substance, and the first violation involving trading of firearms, ammunition, or explosives. [Sec. 6(b)(1)]

House bill

Adds a requirement for permanent disqualification of persons convicted of trafficking in food stamp benefits where the benefits trafficked have a value of $500 or more.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill, with a technical amendment.

27. CLAIMS COLLECTION

A. FEDERAL INCOME TAX REFUNDS

Present law

Otherwise uncollected overissued benefits may, except for claims arising out of State agency error, may be recovered from Federal pay or pensions. [Sec. 13(d) and Sec. 11(e)(8)]

House bill

Requires collection of otherwise uncollected overissued benefits, other than those arising out of State agency error, from Federal pay or pensions and from Federal income tax refunds.

Senate amendment

Permits collection of all otherwise uncollected overissued benefits from Federal pay or pensions and from Federal income tax refunds.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. AUTHORITY TO COLLECT OVERISSUANCES

Present law

State collection of overissued benefits is limited in certain circumstances. In the case of overissuances due to an intentional program violation, households must agree to repayment by either a reduction in future benefits or cash repayment; States also are required to collect overissuances to these households through other means, such as tax refund or unemployment compensation collections (if a cash repayment or reduction is not forthcoming), unless they demonstrate that the other means are not cost effective. In cases of overissuance because of inadvertent household "error," States must collect the overissuance through a reduction in future benefits—except that households must be given 10 days' notice to elect another means, and collections are limited to 10% of the monthly allotment or $10 a month (whichever would result in faster collection)—and may use other means of collection. In cases of overissuances because of State agency error, States may request repayment or use other means of collection (not including reduction in future benefits). [Sec. 13(b)] States may retain 25% of "non-fraud" collections not caused by State error and 50% of "fraud" collections (increased from 10% and 25% on October 1, 1995). [Sec. 16(a)}

House bill

No provisions.

Senate amendment

Replaces existing overissuance collection rules with provisions requiring States to collect any overissuance of benefits by reducing future benefits, withholding unemployment compensation, recovering from Federal pay or income tax refunds, or any other means—unless the State demonstrates that all of the means are not cost effective. Bars the use of future benefit reductions as a claims collection mechanism if it would cause a hardship on the household (as determined by the State) and limits benefit reductions (absent intentional program violations) to the greater of 10% of the monthly benefit or $10 a month. Provides that States must collect overissued benefits in accordance with State-established requirements for notice, electing a means of payment, and setting a schedule for payment.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment (1) deleting the specific bar against collections in hardship cases and (2) setting the percentage of collections (other than in cases of State agency error) that a State may retain at a uniform 25%.

28. DENIAL OF FOOD STAMP BENEFITS FOR 10 YEARS TO INDIVIDUALS FOUND TO HAVE FRAUDULENTLY MISREPRESENTED RESIDENCE IN ORDER TO OBTAIN BENEFITS SIMULTANEOUSLY IN 2 OR MORE STATES

Present law

Disqualification periods ranging from 6 months to permanent disqualification are prescribed for intentional violations of Food Stamp program requirements. [Sec. 6(b)]

House bill

Disqualifies from food stamps for 10 years an individual found to have fraudulently misrepresented the individual's place of residence in order to receive food stamp, Medicaid, TANF, or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits in two or more States.

Senate amendment

Disqualifies from food stamps permanently an individual found to have fraudulently misrepresented the individual's place of residence in order to receive food stamps in two or more States.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment disqualifying from food stamps for 10 years an individual found by a State agency or court to have made a fraudulent misrepresentation of identity or residence in order to receive multiple benefits. The conferees note that State agency hearing processes have sufficient recipient protections to warrant a decision to impose a 10-year disqualification in these cases.

29. DISQUALIFICATION RELATING TO CHILD SUPPORT ARREARS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Disqualifies individuals during any period the individual has an unpaid liability that is under a court child support order, unless the court is allowing delayed payments.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, except that States are permitted to apply a child support arrears disqualification and compliance with a child support agency payment plan also exempts individuals from disqualification.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment that requires disqualification.

30. ELIMINATION OF FOOD STAMP BENEFITS WITH RESPECT TO FUGITIVE FELONS AND PROBATION AND PAROLE VIOLATORS

A. DISQUALIFICATION OF FLEEING FELONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Disqualifies individuals while they are (1) fleeing to avoid prosecution or custody after conviction for a crime (or crime attempt) which is a felony or (2) violating a condition of parole under Federal or State law.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a technical amendment.

B. EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

Present law

Requires State agencies to immediately report to the Immigration and Naturalization Service a determination that a food stamp household member is ineligible for food stamps because the individual is present in the United States in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act. [Sec. 11(e)(17)]

House bill

Requires State food stamp agencies to make available to law enforcement officers the address of a food stamp recipient if the officer furnishes the recipient's name and notifies the agency that (1) the individual is fleeing to avoid prosecution or custody for a felony crime (or attempt) or the individual has information necessary for the officer to conduct official duties, (2) the location or apprehension of the individual is within the officer's official duties, and (3) the request is made in the proper exercise of official duties.

Senate amendment

Similar to the House bill, requires State food stamp agencies to make available to law enforcement officers the address, social security number, and (when available) photograph of a food stamp recipient if the officer furnishes the recipient's name and notifies the agency as stipulated in the House bill.

Requires State agencies to furnish the Immigration and Naturalization Service with the name of, address of, and identifying information on any individual the agency knows is unlawfully in the United States.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

31. EFFECTIVE DATES

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Except for amendments dealing with the Food Stamp program's quality control system (effective October 1, 1994), the food stamp and commodity distribution program amendments made by the Personal Responsibility Act would be effective October 1, 1995.

Senate amendment

Provides that Food Stamp Act amendments would be effective October 1, 1995.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement provides that (1) provisions affecting deduction levels are effective October 1, 1996, and (2) all other provisions are effective on enactment.

32. SENSE OF CONGRESS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Provides that it is the sense of Congress that States operating electronic benefit transfer systems to provide food stamp benefits should operate systems that are compatible with each other.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

33. DEFICIT REDUCTION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Provides that it is the sense of the House Committee on Agriculture that reductions in outlays resulting from Food Stamp Act (and commodity distribution program) provisions of the Personal Responsibility Act not be taken into account for purposes of Section 252 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act (relating to enforcement of "pay-as-you-go" provisions of the Budget Act).

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

34. CERTIFICATION PERIOD

Present law

For households subject to periodic (monthly) reporting of their circumstances, eligibility certification periods must be 6–12 months, except that the Secretary may waive this rule to improve program administration. For households receiving federally aided public assistance or general assistance, certification periods must coincide with the certification periods for the other public assistance. For other households, certification periods generally must be not less than 3 months—but they can be (1) up to 12 months for those consisting entirely of unemployable, elderly, or primarily self-employed persons or (2) as short as circumstances require for those with a substantial likelihood of frequent changes in income or other household circumstances and for any household on initial eligibility determination (as judged by the Secretary). The Secretary may waive the maximum 12-month limit to improve program administration. [Sec. 3(c)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Replaces existing provisions as to certification periods with a requirement that certification periods not exceed 12 months—but can be up to 24 months if all adult household members are elderly, disabled, or primarily self-employed.

Requires State agencies to have at least 1 personal contact with each certified household every 12 months.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment allowing certification periods of up to 24 months for households whose adult members are all elderly or disabled and deleting the reference to a "personal" contact.

35. TREATMENT OF CHILDREN LIVING AT HOME

Present law

Parents and their children 21 years of age or younger who live together must apply for food stamps as a single household (thereby reducing aggregate household benefits)—except for children who are themselves parents living with their children and children who are married and living with their spouses. [Sec. 3(i)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Removes the existing exception for children who are themselves parents living with their children and children who are married and living with their spouses.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

36. OPTIONAL ADDITIONAL CRITERIA FOR SEPARATE HOUSEHOLD DETERMINATIONS

Present law

Certain persons who live together may apply for food stamps as separate households (thereby increasing aggregate household benefits) if they (1) are unrelated and purchase food and prepare meals separately or (2) are related but are not spouses or children living with their parents (See item 35). In addition, elderly persons who live with others and cannot purchase food and prepare meals separately because of a substantial disability may apply a separate households as long as their co-residents' income is below prescribed limits (165% of the Federal poverty income guidelines). [Sec. 3(i)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits States to establish criteria that prescribe when individuals living together, and would otherwise be allowed to apply as separate households, must apply as a single household (without regard to common purchase of food and preparation of meals).

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

37. DEFINITION OF HOMELESS INDIVIDUAL

Present law

For food stamp eligibility and benefit determination purposes, a "homeless individual" is a person lacking a fixed/regular nighttime residence or one whose primary nighttime residence is a shelter, a residence intended for those to be institutionalized, a temporary accommodation in the residence of another, or a public or private place not designed to be a regular sleeping accommodation for humans. [Sec. 3(s)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Provides that persons whose primary nighttime residence is a temporary accommodation in the home of another may only be considered homeless if the accommodation is for no more than 90 days.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

38. STATE OPTIONS IN REGULATIONS

Present law

The Secretary is directed to establish uniform national standards of eligibility for food stamps (with certain variations allowed for Alaska, Hawaii, Guam, and the Virgin Islands) and in other cases (e.g., imposition of monthly reporting requirements). States may not impose any other standards of eligibility as a condition of participation in the program. [Sec. 5(b)]

House bill

No directly comparable provision. [Note: See item 3.]

Senate amendment

Explicitly permits non-uniform standards of eligibility.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

39. EARNINGS OF STUDENTS

Present law

The earnings of an elementary/secondary student are disregarded as income until the student's 22nd birthday. [Sec. 5(d)(7)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires that earnings of an elementary/secondary student be counted as income once the student turns age 20.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment requiring that earnings be counted for students who are 19 or younger.

40. BENEFITS FOR ALIENS

A. DEEMING SPONSORS' INCOME AND RESOURCES

Present law

A portion of the income and resources of the sponsor of a lawfully admitted alien must be deemed as available to the sponsored alien for 3 years after the alien's entry. Income is deemed to the extent it exceeds the appropriate food stamp income eligibility limit (130% of the Federal income poverty guidelines); liquid resources are deemed to the extent they exceed $1,500. [Sec. 5(i)]

House bill

No directly comparable provision.

Senate amendment

Extends the deeming period for sponsored legal aliens to 5 years from lawful admittance or the period of time agreed to in the sponsor's affidavit, whichever is longer. [Note: See conference comparison for title IV in the House bill and title V in the Senate amendment.]

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. COUNTING ALIENS' INCOME AND RESOURCES

Present law

The income (less a pro rata share) and all resources of aliens who are ineligible for food stamps under provisions of the Food Stamp Act are counted as income/resources to the rest of the household living with the alien. [Sec. 6(f)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits States to count all of the income and resources of aliens ineligible for food stamps under the provisions of the Food Stamp Act as income/resources to the rest of the household.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

41. COOPERATION WITH CHILD SUPPORT AGENCIES

A. CUSTODIAL PARENTS

Present law

No provisions.

House bill

No provisions.

Senate amendment

Permits States to disqualify custodial parents of children under the age of 18 who have an absent parent unless the custodial parent cooperates with the State child support agency in establishing the child's paternity and obtaining support for the child and the custodial parent. Cooperation would not be required if the State finds there is good cause (in accordance with Federal standards taking into account the child's best interest). Fees or other costs for services could not be charged.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. NON-CUSTODIAL PARENTS

Present law

No provisions.

House bill

No provisions.

Senate amendment

Permits States to disqualify putative or identified non-custodial parents of children under 18 if they refuse to cooperate with the State child support agency in establishing the child's paternity and providing support for the child. The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services would develop guidelines for what constitutes a refusal to cooperate, and States would develop procedures (using these guidelines) for determining whether there has been a refusal to cooperate. Fees or other costs for services could not be charged. States would be required to provide safeguards to restrict the use of information collected by the child support agency to the purposes for which it was collected.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

42. OPTIONAL COMBINED ALLOTMENT FOR EXPEDITED HOUSEHOLDS

Present law

For households applying after the 15th day of the month, States may provide an allotment that is the aggregate of the initial (pro-rated) allotment and the first regular allotment—but combined allotments must be provided to households applying after 15th of the month who are entitled to expedited service. [Sec. 8(c)(3)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Makes provision of combined allotments a State option both for regular and expedited service applicants.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

43. FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH OTHER WELFARE AND PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Present law

Households penalized for an intentional failure to comply with a Federal, State, or local welfare program may not, for the duration of the penalty, receive an increased food stamp allotment because their welfare income has been reduced. [Sec. 8(d)]

[Note: This has been interpreted by regulation to apply only to reductions in welfare income due to repayment of overpayments resulting from a welfare violation, although a revision of the regulation is scheduled.]

House bill

[Note: See item 4C.]

Senate amendment

Bars increased food stamp allotments because the benefits of a household are reduced under a Federal, State, or local welfare or public assistance program for failure to perform a required action. In carrying out this requirement, States may, in determining food stamp allotments for the duration of the public assistance reduction, use the household's pre-reduction welfare benefits.

Permits States also to reduce the household's food stamp allotment by up to 25%. If the allotment is reduced for failure to perform an action required under a family assistance block grant program, the State may use the rules and procedures of that program to reduce the food stamp allotment.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment changing references to welfare or public assistance programs to references to mean-tested public assistance programs.

44. ALLOTMENTS FOR HOUSEHOLDS RESIDING IN INSTITUTIONS

Present law

Homeless shelters and residential drug or alcoholic treatment centers may be designated as recipients' authorized representatives. [Note: In the case of residential treatment centers, benefits generally are provided to the center.]

Permits States to require residents of shelters/centers to designate the shelter/center as authorized representative.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment deleting homeless shelters from those institutions covered by the amendment.

45. OPERATION OF FOOD STAMP OFFICES

A. STATE PLAN REQUIREMENTS

Present law

States must:

(1) allow households contacting the food stamp office in person during office hours to make an oral/written request for aid and receive and file an application on the same day;

(2) use a simplified, uniform federally designed application, unless a waiver is approved;

(3) include certain, specific information in applications;

(4) waive in-person interviews under certain circumstances (they may use telephone interviews or home visits instead);

(5) provide for telephone contact and mail application by households with transportation or similar difficulties;

(6) require an adult representative of the household to certify as to household members' citizenship/alien status;

(6) provide a method of certifying and issuing benefits to homeless households;

(7) assist households in obtaining verification and completing applications;

(8) not require additional verification of currently verified information (unless there is reason to believe that the information is inaccurate, incomplete, or inconsistent);

(9) not deny an application solely because a non-household member fails to cooperate;

(10) process applications if the household meets cooperation requirements;

(11) provide households (at certification and recertification) with a statement of reporting responsibilities;

(12) provide a toll-free or local telephone number at which households may reach State personnel;

(13) display and make available nutrition information; and

(14) use mail issuance in rural areas where low-income households face substantial difficulties in obtaining transportation (with exceptions for high mail losses). [Sec. 11(e)(2), (3), (14), & (25)]

House bill

No provisions.

Senate amendment

Replaces noted existing State plan requirements with requirements that the State:

(1) establish procedures governing the operation of food stamp offices that it determines best serve households in the State, including those with special needs (such as households with elderly or disabled members, those in rural areas, the homeless, households residing on reservations, and households speaking a language other than English);

(2) provide timely, accurate, and fair service to applicants and participants;

(3) permit applicants to apply and participate on the same day they first contact the food stamp office during office hours; and

(4) consider an application filed on the date the applicant submits an application that contains the applicant's name, address, and signature.

Permits States to establish operating procedures that vary for local food stamp offices to reflect regional and local differences.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. APPLICATION AND DENIAL PROCEDURES

Present law

A single interview for determining AFDC and food stamp benefits is required. Food stamp applications generally are required to be contained in public assistance applications, and applications and information on how to apply for food stamps must be provided local general assistance applicants. Applicants (including those who have recently lost or been denied public assistance) must be certified eligible for food stamps based on the information in their public assistance casefile (to the extent it is reasonably verified).

No household may be terminated from or denied food stamps solely on the basis that it has been terminated from or denied other public assistance and without a separate food stamp eligibility determination.

House bill

No provisions.

Senate amendment

Deletes noted existing requirements for single interviews, applications, and food stamp determinations based on public assistance information.

Permits disqualification for food stamps based on another public assistance program's disqualification for failure to comply with its rules or regulations.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

46. STATE EMPLOYEE AND TRAINING STANDARDS

Present law

States must employ agency personnel doing food stamp certifications in accordance with current Federal "merit system" standards. States must provide continuing, comprehensive training for all certification personnel. States may undertake intensive training of certification personnel to ensure they are qualified for certifying farming households. States may provide or contract for the provision of training/assistance to persons working with volunteer or nonprofit organizations that provide outreach and eligibility screening activities. [Sec. 11(e)(6)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Deletes noted existing provisions for merit system standards and training.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

47. EXPEDITED COUPON SERVICE

Present law

States must provide expedited benefits to applicant households that (1) have gross income under $150 a month (or are "destitute" migrant or seasonal farmworker households) and have liquid resources of no more than $100, (2) homeless households, and (3) households that have combined gross income and liquid resources less than the household's monthly shelter expenses.

Expedited service means providing an allotment no later than 5 days after application. [Sec. 11(e)(9)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

48. FAIR HEARINGS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits households to withdraw fair hearing requests orally or in writing. If it is an oral request, the State must provide a written notice to the household confirming the request and providing the household with another chance to request a hearing.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment providing that permission for households to withdraw fair hearing requests orally or in writing is a State option.

49. INCOME AND ELIGIBILITY VERIFICATION SYSTEM

Present law

States must use the "income and eligibility verification systems" established under Sec. 1137 of the Social Security Act to assist in verifying household circumstances; this includes a system for verifying financial circumstances (IEVS) and a system for verifying alien status (SAVE). [Sec. 11(e)(19) of the Food Stamp Act and Sec. 1137 of the Social Security Act.]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Makes use of IEVS and SAVE optional with the States.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

50. TERMINATION OF FEDERAL MATCH FOR OPTIONAL INFORMATION ACTIVITIES

Present law

If a State opts to conduct informational ("outreach") activities for the food stamp program, the Federal Government shares half the cost. [Sec. 11(e)(1) & Sec. 16(a)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Terminates the Federal share of optional State outreach activities. [Note: Sec. 333(b) makes a technical amendment to Sec. 16(g) of the Food Stamp Act.]

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment that does not terminate the Federal share of optional State outreach activities but bar a Federal share for "recruitment activities."

51. STANDARDS FOR ADMINISTRATION

Present law

The Secretary is required to (1) establish standards for efficient and effective administration of the program, including standards for review of food stamp office hours to ensure that employed individuals are adequately served, and (2) instruct States to submit reports on administrative actions taken to meet the standards. [Sec. 16(b)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Deletes provisions on standards for administration.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

52. WAIVER AUTHORITY

Present law

The Secretary may waive Food Stamp Act requirements to the degree necessary to conduct pilot/demonstration projects, but no project may be implemented that would lower or further restrict food stamp income/resource eligibility standards or benefit levels (other than certain projects involving the payment of the average value of allotments in cash and certain work program demonstrations). [Sec. 17(b)(1)]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Replaces existing waiver authority with authority for the Secretary to waive Food Stamp Act requirements to the extent necessary to conduct pilot/experimental projects, including those designed to test innovative welfare reform, promote work, and allow conformity with other assistance programs.

Requires that any project involving the payment of benefits in the form of cash maintain the average value of allotments for affected households.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

53. AUTHORIZATION OF PILOT PROJECTS

Present law

Existing pilot projects for the payment of food stamp benefits in the form of cash to households composed of elderly persons or SSI recipients are authorized to continue through October 1, 1995, if a State requests. [Sec. 17(b)(1)]

Extends the authorization for elderly/SSI cash-out projects through October 1, 2002.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

54. RESPONSE TO WAIVERS

Present law

No provisions.

House bill

No provisions.

Senate amendment

Requires that, not later than 60 days after receiving a demonstration project waiver request, the Secretary (1) approve the request, (2) deny the request and explain any modifications needed for approval, (3) deny the request and explain the grounds for denial, or (4) ask for clarification of the request. If a response is not forthcoming in 60 days, the waiver would be considered approved. If a waiver request is denied, the Secretary must provide a copy of the waiver request and the grounds for denial to the House and Senate Agriculture Committees.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

55. PRIVATE SECTOR EMPLOYMENT INITIATIVES

Present law

No provisions.

House bill

[Note: See item 4E.]

Senate amendment

Allows certain States to operate "private sector employment initiatives" under which food stamp benefits could be paid in cash to some participating households. States would be eligible to operate private sector employment initiatives if not less than 50% of the households that received food stamp benefits in the summer of 1993 also received AFDC benefits. Households would be eligible to receive cash payments if an adult member so elects and (1) has worked in unsubsidized private sector employment for not less than the 90 preceding days, (2) has earned not less than $350 a month from that employment, (3) is eligible to receive family assistance block grant benefits (or was eligible when cash payments were first received and is no longer eligible because of earned income), and (4) is continuing to earn not less than $350 a month from private sector employment. States operating a private sector employment initiative for 2 years must provide a written evaluation of the impact of cash assistance (the content of the evaluation would be determined by the State).

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment requiring States that select this option to increase benefits to compensate for State or local sales taxes on food purchases.

56. OPTIONAL BLOCK GRANTS

Present law

No provisions.

House bill

[Note: Sec. 556 (b) of the House bill adds a new section 25 to the Food Stamp Act containing provisions for an optional block grant.]

Allows States that have fully implemented an electronic benefit transfer system to elect an annual block grant to operate a low-income nutrition assistance program in lieu of the food stamp program.

Grants funds to States electing a block grant—States would receive (1) the greater of: the total fiscal year 1994 amount they received as food stamp benefits; or the fiscal years 1992–1994 average they received as food stamp benefits and (2) the greater of: the fiscal year 1994 Federal share of administrative costs; or the fiscal years 1992–1994 average they received as the Federal share of administrative costs. Grant payments would be made at times and in a manner determined by the Secretary.

Requires annual submission of a State plan specifying the manner in which the block grant nutrition assistance program will be conducted. The plan must:

(1) certify that the State has implemented a State-wide electronic benefit transfer system under Food Stamp Act conditions;

(2) designate a single State agency responsible for administration;

(3) assess the food and nutrition needs of needy persons in the State;

(4) limit assistance to the purchase of food;

(5) describe the persons to whom aid will be provided;

(6) assure that assistance will be provided to the most needy;

(7) assure that applicants for assistance have adequate notice and fair hearing rights comparable to those under the regular food stamp program;

(8) provide that there be no discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, national origin, or political beliefs; and

(9) include other information as required by the Secretary.

In general, permits block grant payments to be expended only in the fiscal year in which they are distributed to a State. States may reserve up to 5% of a fiscal year's grant to provide assistance in subsequent years, but reserved funds may not total more than 20% of the total grant received for a fiscal year.

Requires States to keep records concerning block grant program operations and make them available to the Secretary and the Comptroller General.

If the Secretary finds there is substantial failure by a State to comply, requires the Secretary to (1) suspend all or part of a grant payment until the State is determined in substantial compliance, (2) withhold all/part of a grant payment until the Secretary determines that there is no long a failure to comply, or (3) terminate the State's authority to operate a nutrition assistance block grant program.

Requires States to provide for biennial audits of block grant expenditures, provide the Secretary with the audit, and make it available for public inspection.

Requires an annual "activities report" comparing actual spending for nutrition assistance in each fiscal year with the spending predicted in the State plan; the report must be made available for public inspection.

Requires that whoever knowingly and willfully embezzles, misapplies, steals, or obtains by fraud, false statement, or forgery any funds or property provided or financed under a nutrition assistance block grant be fined not more than $10,000, imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

Requires that the State plan provide that there will be no discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, national origin, or political beliefs.

Requires that all assistance provided under the block grant be limited to the purchase of food. [Note: Because the State would have fully implemented an electronic benefit transfer system, benefits would be provided through these systems.]

Senate amendment

[Note: Sec. 343(a) of the Senate amendment adds a new section 25 to the Food Stamp Act containing provisions for an optional block grant]

Requires the Secretary to establish a program to make grants to States, in lieu of the food stamp program, to provide food assistance to needy individuals and families, wage subsidies and payments in return for work for needy individuals, funds to operate an employment and training program for needy individuals, and funds for administrative costs incurred in providing assistance.

Grants funds to States electing a block grant—States would receive (1) the greater of: the total fiscal year 1994 amount they received as food stamp benefits; or the fiscal years 1992–1994 average they received as food stamp benefits and (2) the greater of: the fiscal year 1994 Federal share of administrative costs and employment/ training program costs; or the fiscal years 1992–1994 average they received as the Federal share of administrative costs and employment/training program costs. If total allotments for a fiscal year would exceed the amount of funds made available to provide them, the Secretary is required to reduce allotments on a pro rata basis to the extent necessary. Grant payments would be made by issuing 1 or more letters of credit, with necessary adjustments for overpayments and underpayments.

Requires annual submission of a State plan containing information as required by the Secretary. The plan:

(1) must have an assurance that the State will comply with block grant requirements;

(2) must identify a "lead agency" responsible for administration, development of the plan, and coordination with other programs;

(3) must provide that the State will use grant funds as follows:

(a) to give food assistance to needy persons (other than certain residents of institutions);

(b) at State option, to provide wage subsidies and workfare for needy persons;

(c) to administer an employment and training program for needy persons (and provide reimbursement for support services); and

(d) to pay administrative costs incurred in providing assistance;

(4) must describe how the program will serve specific groups of persons (and how that treatment will differ from the regular food stamp program) including the elderly, migrants or seasonal farmworkers, the homeless, those under the supervision of institutions, those with earnings, and Indians;

(5) must provide that benefits be available statewide;

(6) must provide that applicants and recipients are provided with notice and fair hearing rights;

(7) may coordinate block grant assistance with aid under the family assistance block grant;

(8) may reduce food assistance or otherwise penalize persons or families penalized for violating family assistance block grant rules;

(9) must assess the food and nutrition needs of needy persons in the State;

(10) must describe the income and resource eligibility limits established under the block grant;

(11) must establish a system to ensure that no persons receive block grant benefits in more than 1 jurisdiction;

(12) must provide for safeguarding and restricting the use and disclosure of information about recipients; and

(13) must contain other information as required by the Secretary.

Same as the House bill, except that States may reserve up to 10% a year and reserved funds may not total more than 30% of the total grant received.

Requires the Secretary to review and monitor State compliance with block grant rules and State plans. If the Secretary (after notice and opportunity for a hearing) finds that there has been a failure to substantially comply with the State's plan or the provisions of the block grant, the Secretary must notify the State and no further payments would be made until the Secretary is satisfied that there is no longer a failure to comply or that noncompliance will be promptly corrected.

Allows the Secretary (in cases of noncompliance) to impose other appropriate sanctions on States in addition to, or in lieu of, withholding block grant payments; these sanctions may include recoupment of money improperly spent and disqualification from receipt of a block grant. The Secretary also is required to establish procedures for (1) receiving, processing, and determining the validity of complaints about States' failure to comply with block grant obligations and (2) imposing sanctions. In addition, the Secretary is permitted to withhold not more than 5% of a State's annual allotment if the State does not use an "income and eligibility verification system" established under Sec. 1137 of the Social Security Act.

Requires States to arrange for annual independent audits of block grant expenditures. Each annual audit must include an audit of payment accuracy based on a statistically valid sample and be submitted to the State legislature and the Secretary. States must repay any amounts the audit determines have not been expended in accordance with the State plan, or the Secretary can offset amounts against any other amount paid the State under the block grant.

Provides that a State that elects a food assistance block grant option may subsequently reverse that choice only once.

Finds that the Senate has adopted a resolution that Congress should not enact/adopt any legislation that will increase the number of hungry children, that it is not its intent to cause more children to be hungry, that the food stamp program serves to prevent child hunger, and that a State's election for a food assistance block grant should not serve to increase the number hungry children in the State.

Provides that a State's election for a food assistance block grant be permanently revoked 180 days after the Secretary of Health and Human Services has made 2 successive findings (over a 6-year period) that the "hunger rate" among children is significantly higher in a food assistance block grant State than it would have been if the State had not made the choice.

Specifies procedures for a finding that a State's child hunger rate has risen significantly. Every 3 years, the Secretary must develop data and report with respect to any significant increase in child hunger in States that have elected a food assistance block grant. The Secretary must provide the report to States that have elected a block grant and must provide States with a higher child hunger rate with an opportunity to respond. If the State's response does not result in a reversal of the Secretary's determination that the child hunger rate is significantly higher than it would have been without the State's block grant election, the Secretary must publish a determination that the State's block grant choice is revoked.

Requires States to designate a lead administrative agency. The agency must administer (either directly or through other agencies) the food assistance block grant aid, develop the State plan, hold at least 1 hearing for public comment on the plan, and coordinate food assistance block grant aid with other government assistance. In developing the State plan, the lead agency must consult with local governments and private sector organizations so that services are provided in a manner appropriate to local populations.

Provides that nothing in the new food assistance block grant section of the Food Stamp Act entitles anyone to assistance or limits the right of States to impose additional limits or conditions.

Requires that no funds under the food assistance block grant be spent for the purchase or improvement of land, or for the purchase, construction, or permanent improvement of any building/facility.

Requires that no alien otherwise ineligible to participate in the regular food stamp program be eligible to participate in a food assistance block grant program, and that the income of the sponsor of an alien be counted as in the regular food stamp program.

Requires that (1) no person be eligible to receive food assistance block grant benefits if they do not meet regular food stamp program work requirements and (2) that each State operating a food assistance block grant implement an employment and training program under regular food stamp program rules.

Bars the Secretary from providing assistance for any program, project, or activity under a food assistance block grant if any person with operational responsibilities discriminates because of race, religion, color, national origin, sex, or disability. Also provides for enforcement through title VI of the Civil Rights Act.

Requires that, in each fiscal year, at least 80% of Federal funds expended under a State's block grant be for food assistance and not more than 6% be for administrative expenses. A State could provide food assistance to meet the 80% requirement in any manner it determines appropriate (such as electronic benefit transfers, coupons, or direct provision of commodities), but "food assistance" would be limited to assistance that may only be used to obtain food (as defined in the Food Stamp Act).

Provides that the Secretary may conduct research on the effects and costs of a State food assistance block grant program.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill with and amendment. States that meet one of three conditions may elect to receive an annual block grant to operate a food assistance program for needy persons in lieu of the food stamp program. Eligible States may opts for a block grant at any time, but, if the State chooses to withdraw from the block grant or is disqualfied, it may not again opt for a block grant. Eligible States include: (1) those that have fully implemented a statewide electronic benefit transfer system, (2) those for which the dollar value of erroneous benefit and eligibility determinations (overpayments, payments to ineligibles, and underpayments) in the food stamp program or their food assistance block grant program is 6% of benefits issued or less (a 'payment error rate' of 6% or less), and (3) those with a payment error rate higher than 6% that agree to contribute, from non–Federal sources, a dollar amount equal to the difference between their payment error rate and a 6% rate to pay for benefits and administration of their food assistance block grant program. A States's payment error rate for block grant purposes is the most recent rate available, as determined by the Secretary.

States electing a block grant would be provided an annual grant equal to: (1) the greater of the fiscal year 1994 amount they received as food stamp benefits, or the 1992–1994 average they received as food stamp benefits and (2) the greater of the fiscal year 1994 Federal share of administrative costs, or the 1992–1994 average they received as the Federal share of administrative costs. However, grants to States with payment error rates above 6 % would be reduced by the amount they are required to contribute (i.e., the dollar amount equal to the difference between their payment error rate and a 6% rate). In general, block grant payments must be expended in the fiscal year for which they were distributed; but States may reserve up to 10% a year, up to a total of 30% of the block grant. If total allotments for a fiscal year would exceed the amount of funds made available to provide them, the Secretary is required to reduce allotments or a pro rata basis to the extent necessary. Grant payments would be made by issuing letters of credit.

Block grant funding may only be used for food assistance and administrative costs related to its provision, and, in each fiscal year, not more than 6% of total funds expended (including State funds required to be spent) may be used for administrative costs.

Each participating block grant State is required to maintain a food stamp quality control program to measure erroneous benefit and eligibility determinations, and block grant States would continue to be subject to the food stamp program's quality control system (including eligibility for incentive payments and imposition of fiscal sanction for very high payment error rates). Each participating State is required to implement an employment and training program under Food Stamp Act terms and conditions and is eligible to receive Federal funding for employment and training activities (in addition to the food stamp block grant amount).

In order to receive a block grant, a State must annually submit a State plan for approval by the Secretary. The State plan must: (1) identify a lead administering agency, (2) describe how and to what extent the State's program serves specific groups (e.g., the elderly, migrant and seasonal farmworkers, the homeless, those with earnings, Indians) and how the treatment differs from their treatment under the food stamp program, (3) provide that benefits are available statewide, (4) provide for notice and an opportunity for a hearing to those adversely affected, (5) assess the food and nutrition needs of needy persons in the State, (6) describe the State's eligibility standards for assistance under the block grant program, (7) establish a system for exchanging information with other States to verify recipients' identity and the possible receipt of benefits in another State, (8) provide for safeguarding and restricting the use and disclosure of information about recipients, and (9) other information required by the Secretary.

Eligibility for assistance under the block grant is determined by the State, and there is no individual entitlement to assistance. However, certain Federal rules apply: (1) aliens who would not be eligible under the food stamp program are not eligible for block grant aid; and (2) persons and households who would be ineligible under the food stamp program's work rules are not eligible for block grant aid.

If the Secretary finds that there has been a failure to comply with provisions of the block grant or the State's approved plan or finds that, in the operation of any program or activity for which assistance is provided, there is a State failure to comply substantially with block grant provisions—the Secretary must withhold funding, as appropriate, until satisfied there is no longer a failure to comply or that the noncompliance will be promptly corrected. In addition, the Secretary may impose other appropriate penalities, including recoupment of improperly spent money and disqualification from the block grant. States must be provided notice and an opportunity for a hearing in this process.

The Secretary is authorized to conduct research on the effects and costs of a State food assistance block grant.

57. SPECIFIC PERIOD FOR PROHIBITING PARTICIPATION OF STORES BASED ON LACK OF BUSINESS INTEGRITY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Authorizes the Secretary to issue regulations establishing specific time periods during which retailers/wholesalers that have been denied approval or had approval withdrawn on the basis of "business integrity and reputation" may not submit a new application for approval. The periods established would be required to reflect the severity of the business integrity infractions on which the denial/withdrawal was based.

Conference agreement

See Item #20 above.

58. INFORMATION FOR VERIFYING ELIGIBILITY FOR AUTHORIZATION

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits the Secretary to require that retailers and wholesalers seeking approval submit relevant income and sales tax filing documents. Permits regulations requiring retailers and wholesalers to provide written authorization for the Secretary to verify all relevant tax filings and to obtain corroborating documentation from other sources in order to verify the accuracy of information provided by retailers and wholesalers.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

59. BASES FOR SUSPENSIONS AND DISQUALIFICATIONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires criteria for finding violations by retailers and wholesalers (and their suspension or disqualification) on the basis of evidence including on-site investigations, inconsistent redemption data, or electronic benefit transfer system transaction reports.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill. The Conferees note that the Secretary currently has the authority contained in the Senate amendment.

60. PERMANENT DEBARMENT OF RETAILERS WHO INTENTIONALLY SUBMIT FALSIFIED APPLICATIONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires regulations permanently disqualifying retailers and wholesalers that knowingly submit an application for approval that contains false information about a substantive matter. A permanent disqualification for a knowingly false application would be subject to administrative and judicial review, but the disqualification would remain in effect pending the review.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment permitting the Secretary to disqualify a store or concern, including permanently, upon knowing submission of false information on an application.

61. CATEGORICAL ELIGIBILITY

Present law

Households in which all members are recipients of AFDC are categorically eligible for food stamps. [Sec. 5(a)]

Child support payments received by a household and excluded under the AFDC program may be disregarded for food stamps, at State option and expense. [Sec. 5(d)(13)]

Household members who are AFDC recipients are considered to have met food stamp resource (asset) eligibility standards. [Sec. 5(j)]

Persons who are AFDC recipients are exempt from food stamp rules barring eligibility to most postsecondary students. [Sec. 6(e)]

In general, food stamp eligibility is barred to those with total (gross) household income above 130% of the Federal income poverty guidelines. [Sec. 5(c)]

Households exempt from food stamp work rules because of participation in an AFDC community work experience program are subject to a limit on the number of hours of work—their cash assistance plus food stamps, divided by the minimum wage (but no person can be required to work more than 120 hours a month). [Sec. 20(a)]

House bill

No provision. [Note: TANF households would presumably be categorically eligible for food stamps under existing provisions of law.]

No provision. [Note: TANF recipients would presumably be considered to have met food stamp resource standards under existing provisions of law.]

No provision. [Note: TANF recipients would presumably not be exempt from food stamp postsecondary student rules under existing provisions of law.]

Senate amendment

Provides that households in which all members are recipients of benefits under a State's family assistance block grant program be categorically eligible for food stamps, if the Secretary determines that the program complies with Secretarial standards that ensure that State program standards are comparable to or more restrictive than those in effect June 1, 1995.

Deletes the existing provision for a State-option child support disregard. [Note: A separate provision (Sec. 5(m) of the Food Stamp Act) providing for State funding of the disregard is not deleted.]

Provides that persons receiving benefits under a State's family assistance block grant program will be considered to have met food stamp resource eligibility standards, if the Secretary determines that the program complies with Secretarial standards that ensure that State program standards are comparable to or more restrictive than those in effect June 1, 1995.

Provides that persons receiving benefits under a State's family assistance block grant program are exempt from food stamp rules barring eligibility to most postsecondary students, if the Secretary determines that the program complies with Secretarial standards that ensure that State program standards are comparable to or more restrictive than those in effect June 1, 1995.

Provides that households may not receive food stamp benefits as the result of eligibility under a State's family assistance block grant program unless the Secretary determines that households with income above 130% of the poverty guidelines are not eligible for the State's program—notwithstanding any other provision of the Food Stamp Act.

Deletes the existing provision allowing compliance with food stamp workfare rules by operating a workfare program under title IV of the Social Security Act.

Deletes the existing rule placing limits on hours worked for food stamp recipients in community work experience programs.

Makes various technical amendments to the Food Stamp Act conforming its existing references to the AFDC program to cite the new family assistance block grant program.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment deleting references to standards comparable to June 1, 1995, and revising various amendments conforming Food Stamp Act references to the AFDC program to the new family assistance block grant program.

62. PROTECTION OF BATTERED INDIVIDUALS

Present law

No provision. [Note: Certain work rules contain a "good cause" exemption.]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

In the case of individuals who were battered or subjected to extreme cruelty, permits States to exempt them from the following provisions of food stamp law (or modify their application) if their physical, mental, or emotional well-being would be endangered:

(1) the requirement that the income and resources of a sponsor of an alien be deemed to the sponsored alien;

(2) the requirement that custodial parents cooperate with child support agencies (as added by the Senate amendment); and

(3) all work requirements (including the new work requirement added by the Senate amendment).

Conference agreement

COMMODITY DISTRIBUTION

1. SHORT TITLE

Present law

The Emergency Food Assistance Act (EFAA), The Hunger Prevention Act of 1988, The Commodity Distribution Reform Act and WIC Amendments, The Charitable Assistance and Food Bank Act of 1987, The Food Security Act of 1985, The Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, and The Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990.

House bill

Combines several existing commodity donation programs and authorities under one title, the Commodity Distribution Act of 1995.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The Conference agreement follows the House bill with an amendment striking the House provision and replacing it with a provision combining the emergency food assistance program (TEFAP) with the soup kitchen/food bank program into one program to be known as the TEFAP. The revised TEFAP is reauthorized through 2002, and the Secretary is required to purchase $300 million of commodities each year through 2002 for distribution through the TEFAP. The requirement to purchase $300 million of commodities is included in the Food Stamp Act authorization for appropriations.

2. AVAILABILITY OF COMMODITIES

Present law

Requires the Secretary to purchase a variety of nutritious and useful commodities using the resources of the CCC or Section 32 to supplement commodities acquired from the excess inventories of CCC for distribution to emergency feeding organizations. [Sec. 214(c) of Emergency Food Assistance Act (EFAA)]

In addition to commodities donated from excess CCC holdings, authorizes the Secretary to donate Section 32 commodities to eligible recipient agencies participating in TEFAP. [Sec. 202(c)]

Requires the Secretary to make available to eligible recipient agencies, CCC commodities in excess of those needed to meet domestic and international obligations and market development and food aid commitments and to carry out farm price and income stabilization features of the AAA of 1938, the AA of 1949, and the CCC Charter. [Sec. 202(a), EFAA]

House bill

For fiscal years 1996–2000, authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to purchase a variety of nutritious and useful commodities to distribute to the States for purposes laid out in the subtitle.

Similar to current law, but also authorizes the use of Section 32 funds not otherwise used or needed, to purchase, process, and distribute commodities for purposes under the new program.

Leaves current general authority untouched; maintains EFAA requirement but adds language stipulating that donations are to be in addition to authorized Section 32 donations.

Senate amendment

Extends existing law purchasing authorities through fiscal year 2002.

Conference agreement

See Item #1 above.

3. BASIS FOR COMMODITY PURCHASES

Present law

Requires that commodities made available under the EFAA include a variety of items most useful to eligible recipient agencies, including diary products, wheat and wheat products, rice, honey, and cornmeal. [Sec. 202(d), EFAA]

House bill

Requires the Secretary to determine the types, varieties, and amounts of commodities purchased under this subtitle, and to make such purchases, to the maximum extent practicable and appropriate, on the basis of agricultural market conditions, State and distributing agency preferences and needs, and the preferences of recipients.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

See Item #1 above.

4. STATE AND LOCAL SUPPLEMENTATION OF COMMODITIES

Present law

Requires the Secretary to establish procedures by which State and local agencies, charitable institutions, or other person may supplement the commodities distributed under TEFAP for use by emergency feeding organizations with donations of nutritious and wholesome commodities. [Sec. 203D(a), EFAA]

Allows States and emergency feeding organizations to use TEFAP funds, equipment, structures, vehicles, and all other facilities and personnel involved in the storage, handling, and distribution of TEFAP commodities to store, handle, or distribute commodities donated to supplement TEFAP commodities. [Sec. 203D(b), EFAA]

Requires States and emergency feeding organizations to continue to use volunteer workers and commodities and foods donated by charitable and other organizations, to the maximum extent practical, in operating TEFAP.

House bill

Similar to current law except that supplementation applies to all programs eligible to receive commodities under the new program, not just TEFAP.

SUBTITLE K—MISCELLANEOUS

1. EXPENDITURE OF FEDERAL FUNDS IN ACCORDANCE WITH LAWS AND PROCEDURES APPLICABLE TO EXPENDITURE OF STATE FUNDS

Present law

According to the National Conference of State Legislatures, there currently are six States in which Federal funds go to the Governor rather than the State legislature. Those States are Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, New Mexico, and Oklahoma.

House bill

No provision.

Stipulates that funds from certain Federal block grants to the States are to be expended in accordance with the laws and procedures applicable to the expenditure of the State's own resources (i.e., appropriated through the State legislature in all States). This provision applies to the following block grants: temporary assistance to needy families block grant under title I, the optional State food assistance block grant under title III, and the child care block grant under title VI of the Senate amendment. The amendment states that the person's flight shall be cause for immediate termination of their housing aid.

Requires specified public housing agencies to furnish any Federal, State, or local law enforcement officer, upon the request of the officer, with the current address, social security number, and photograph (if applicable) of any SSI recipient, if the officer furnishes the public housing agency with the person's name and notifies the agency that the recipient is a fugitive felon (or in the case of New Jersey a person fleeing because of a high misdemeanor) or a probation or parole violator or that the person has information that is necessary for the officer to conduct his official duties, and the location or apprehension of the recipient is within the officer's official duties.

No provision.

Senate amendment

It is the Sense of the Senate that States should pursue child support payments under all circumstances even if the noncustodial parent is unemployed or his or her whereabouts are unknown; and that States are encouraged to pursue pilot programs in which the parents of a minor non-custodial parent who refuses or is unable to pay child support contribute to the child support owed.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

5. FOOD STAMP ELIGIBILITY

Present law

For purposes of determining eligibility and benefits under the Food Stamp program, the income—less a pro rata share—and financial resources of an ineligible alien are included in the income and resources of the household of which the alien is a member. [Sec. 6(f) of the Food Stamp Act]

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits States to include all of an ineligible alien's income and resource in the income and resources of the household of which the alien is a member. (Note: This provision applies only to those aliens made ineligible under present food stamp law, not to those who might be made ineligible for food stamps under new provisions in the Senate amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

6. SENSE OF THE SENATE ON LEGISLATIVE ACCOUNTABILITY FOR UNFUNDED MANDATES IN WELFARE REFORM LEGISLATION

Present law

P.L. 104–4, the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995, enacted March 22, 1995, responds to the concern of many State and local officials regarding costs placed upon them by "unfunded mandates." The Act addresses this issue by requiring the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) to estimate the costs to State, local, and tribal governments and the private sector of unfunded intergovernmental mandates that exceed a specified amount and to make the information available to the Congress before a final vote on a given piece of legislation is taken.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Includes the "purposes" section of P.L. 104–4 as findings and states that it is the Sense of the Senate that before the Senate acts on the conference agreement on H.R. 4 (or any other welfare reform legislation), CBO include in its 7-year estimates the costs to States of meeting all work requirements (and other requirements) in the conference agreement, including those for single-parent families, two-parent families, and those who have received cash assistance for 2 years; the resources available to the State to meet these work requirements and what States are projected to spend under current welfare law; and the amount of additional revenue needed by the States to meet the work requirements. In addition, the Senate would like CBO to estimate how many States would pay a penalty rather than raise the additional revenue needed to comply with the specified work requirements.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

7. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING COMPETITIVE BIDDING FOR INFANT FORMULA

Present law

Under the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), States must carry out cost containment measures in procuring infant formula (and, where practicable, other foods). Cost containment must be by competitive bidding or another method that yields equal or greater savings. Any cost savings may be used by the State for WIC program purposes. [Sec. 17(b) and (h) of the Child Nutrition Act]

House bill

With respect to assistance provided to women, infants, and young children under the Family Nutrition Block Grant, States are required to establish and carry out a cost containment system for procuring infant formula. States must use cost containment savings for any of the activities supported under the Family Nutrition Block Grant and must report on their system and the estimated cost savings compared to the previous year.

Senate amendment

Includes findings on the success of the WIC program in: improving the health status of women, infants, and children, saving Medicaid expenditures, and establishing the importance of infant formula manufacture rebates in helping to fund the WIC program. The amendment states that it is the sense of the Senate that any legislation enacted by Congress must not eliminate or in any way weaken present competitive bidding requirements for the purchase of infant formula in programs supported with Federal funds.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

8. ESTABLISHING NATIONAL GOALS TO PREVENT TEENAGE PREGNANCIES

A. GOALS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary of HHS to establish and implement by January 1, 1997, a strategy for:

(1) preventing an additional 2% of out-of-wedlock teenage pregnancies a year; and

(2) assuring that at least 25% of U.S. communities have teenage pregnancy programs in place.

HHS is required to report to Congress by June 30, 1998, on progress made toward meeting these 2 goals.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

B. PREVENTION PROGRAMS

Present law

The Social Services block grant (SSBG) (sec. 2002 of SSA, 42 USC 1397a) entitles States to an allotment for services not limited to, but including: child day care; protective services for children and adults; services for children and adults in foster care; home management services; adult day care; transportation; family planning services; training and related services; employment services; information, referral and counseling; meal preparation and delivery; health support services; and, combinations of services to meet the special needs of children, the aged, the mentally retarded, the blind, the emotionally disturbed, the physically handicapped, alcoholics, and drug addicts. Also, Title XX of the Public Health Service Act establishes the Adolescent Family Life (AFL) program to encourage adolescents to delay sexual activity and to provide services to alleviate the problems surrounding adolescent parenthood. One-third of all funding for AFL program services go to projects that provide "prevention services." The purpose of the prevention component is to find effective means within the context of the family of reaching adolescents, both male and female, before they become sexually active to maximize the guidance and support of parents and other family members in promoting abstinence from adolescent premarital sexual relations. (The fiscal year 1995 appropriation for AFL was $6.7 million.)

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends the Social Services block grant (SSBG) (sec. 2002 of the Social Security Act) to require the Secretary to conduct a study of the relative effectiveness of different State programs to prevent out-of-wedlock and teenage pregnancies and to require States conducting programs under this provision to provide data required by the Secretary to evaluate these programs.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

9. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING ENFORCEMENT OF STATUTORY RAPE LAWS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Includes Sense of the Senate that States and local jurisdictions should aggressively enforce statutory rape laws.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

10. SANCTIONING FOR TESTING POSITIVE FOR CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES

Present law

Eligibility and benefit status for most of the Federal welfare programs are not affected by a recipient's use of illegal drugs. Even under the SSI program, as long as a recipient who is classified as a drug addict or alcoholic participates in an approved treatment plan when so directed and allows his or her treatment to be monitored, he or she is in compliance with the SSI rules, and in most cases the SSI benefit would continue without interruption.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Stipulates that States shall not be prohibited by the Federal Government from sanctioning welfare recipients who test positive for use of controlled substances.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

11. ABSTINENCE EDUCATION

Present law

The Maternal and Child Health (MCH) block grants (title V of the SSA, 42 USC 701) provides grants to States and insular areas to fund a broad range of preventive health and primary care activities to improve the health status of mothers and children, with a special emphasis on those with low income or with limited availability of health services. Sec. 502 includes a set-aside program for projects of national or regional significance. (The fiscal year 1995 appropriation for MCH was $684 million.) See also: Title XX of the Public Health Service Act establishes the Adolescent Family Life (AFL) program to encourage adolescents to delay sexual activity and to provide services to alleviate the problems surrounding adolescent parenthood. One-third of all funding for AFL program services go to projects that provide "prevention services." The purpose of the prevention component is to find effective means within the context of the family of reaching adolescents, both male and female, before they become sexually active to maximize the guidance and support of parents and other family members in promoting abstinence from adolescent premarital sexual relations. (The fiscal year 1995 appropriation for AFL was $6.7 million.)

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Amends the Maternal and Child Health (MCH) block grants (title V of the SSA) to set aside $75 million to provide abstinence education—defined as an educational or motivational program that has abstaining from sexual activity as its exclusive purpose—and to provide at the option of the State mentoring, counseling and adult supervision to promote abstinence with a focus on those groups most likely to bear children out-of-wedlock. Also increases the authorization level of MCH to $761 million.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

12. SCORING

Present law

In 1985, Congress passed legislation aimed at bringing the Federal budget into balance by the early 1990's. That legislation, the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, commonly referred to as Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act after its primary sponsors, establishes a series of declining annual deficit targets and creates a process (known as sequestration) intended to insure that the deficit targets are adhered to even if Congress and the President fail to reduce the deficit sufficiently through legislative action. Under the sequestration process, across-the-board reductions in spending for many Federal programs are made automatically toward the start of the fiscal year if the deficit for that year is estimated to exceed the statutory target.

House bill

The House bill specifies that the discretionary spending limits in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 are to be adjusted each year based on actual appropriations compared to the level appropriated for fiscal year 1995. Thus, if appropriations equaled the authorized amounts, the discretionary spending limits would be increased by the difference between the authorization level under H.R. 4 and the 1995 appropriation. (Under the House bill AFDC-related child care expenditures would change from mandatory spending to discretionary spending.)

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

13. PROVISIONS TO ENCOURAGE ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER SYSTEMS

Present law

In 1978, Congress passed the Electronic Fund Transfer Act to provide a basic framework establishing the rights, liabilities, and responsibilities of participants in electronic fund transfer systems and required the Federal Reserve Board to develop implementing regulations, which generally are referred to as Regulation E.

House bill

The House bill exempts from Regulation E requirements any electronic benefit transfer program (distributing needs-tested benefits) established under State or local law or administered by a State or local government.

Senate amendment

See Sec. 320 in Senate amendment, which exempts from Regulation E any food stamp electronic benefit transfers.

Conference agreement

This provision was dropped from the Reconciliation bill because it violates the Byrd Rule (section 313 of Congressional Budget Act of 1974).

13. SOCIAL SERVICES BLOCK GRANT

Present law

The Social Services Block Grant (Title XX) provides funds to States in order to provide a wide variety of social services, including:

(1) Child care;
(2) Family planning;
(3) Protective services for children and adults;
(4) Services for children and adults on foster care; and
(5) Employment services.

States have wide discretion over how they use Social Services Block Grant funds. States set their own eligibility requirements and are allowed to transfer up to 10 percent of their allotment to certain Federal health block grants, and for low-income home energy assistance (LIHEAP).

States can also use their block grant funds for staff training in the field of social services. This includes training at workshops, conferences, seminars, and educational institutions.

Funding for the Social Services Block Grant is capped at $2.8 billion a year. Funds are allocated among States according to the State's share of its total population. No State matching funds are required to receive Social Services Block Grant money.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Beginning in fiscal year 1997, the Social Services Block Grant will be reduced by 20 percent.

Conference agreement

The House recedes.

SUBTITLE L—REFORM OF THE EARNED INCOME CREDIT (SECS. 13701–13703 OF THE HOUSE BILL AND SECS. 7460–7466 OF THE SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

In general

Certain eligible low-income workers are entitled to claim a refundable credit on their income tax return. The amount of the credit an eligible individual may claim depends upon whether the individual has one, more than one, or no qualifying children and is determined by multiplying the credit rate by the individual's earned income up to an earned income threshold. The maximum amount of the credit is the product of the credit rate and the earned income threshold. For individuals with earned income (or adjusted gross income (AGI), if greater) in excess of the phaseout threshold, the maximum credit amount is reduced by the phaseout rate multiplied by the amount of earned income (or AGI, if greater) in excess of the phaseout threshold. For individuals with earned income (or AGI, if greater) in excess of the phaseout limit, no credit is allowed.

For taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995, an individual is not eligible for the credit if the aggregate amount of "disqualified income" of the individual for the taxable year exceeds $2,350. Disqualified income is the sum of:

(1) interest (taxable and tax-exempt),
(2) dividends, and
(3) net rent and royalty income (if greater than zero).

The parameters for the credit depend upon the number of qualifying children the individual claims. For 1996, the parameters are given in the following table (dollar amounts are projections expressed in 1996 dollars):

	Two or more qualifying children	One qualifying child	No qualifying children
Credit rate (percent)	40.00	34.00	7.65
Phaseout rate (percent)	21.06	15.98	7.65
Earned income threshold	$8,910	$6,340	$4,230
Maximum credit	3,564	2,156	324
Phaseout threshold	11,630	11,630	5,290
Phaseout limit	28,553	25,119	9,520

For years after 1996, the credit rates and the phaseout rates will be the same as in the preceding table. The earned income threshold and the phaseout threshold are indexed for inflation; because the phaseout limit depends on those amounts as well as the phaseout rate and the credit rate, the phaseout limit will also increase if there is inflation.

In order to claim the credit, an individual must either have a qualifying child or meet other requirements. A qualifying child must meet a relationship test, an age test, an identification test, and a residence test. In order to claim the credit without a qualifying child, an individual must not be a dependent and must be over age 24 and under age 65.

To satisfy the identification test, individuals must include on their tax return the name and age of each qualifying child. For returns filed with respect to tax year 1996, individuals must provide a taxpayer identification number (TIN) for all qualifying children born on or before November 30, 1996. For returns filed with respect to tax year 1997 and all subsequent years, individuals must provide TINs for all qualifying children, regardless of their age. An individual's TIN is generally that individual's social security number.

Mathematical errors

The IRS may summarily assess additional tax due as a result of a mathematical error without sending the taxpayer a notice of deficiency and giving the taxpayer an opportunity to petition the Tax Court. Where the IRS uses the summary assessment procedure for mathematical or clerical errors, the taxpayer must be given an explanation of the asserted error and a period of 60 days to request that the IRS abate its assessment. The IRS may not proceed to collect the amount of the assessment until the taxpayer has agreed to it or has allowed the 60-day period for objecting to expire. If the taxpayer files a request for abatement of the assessment specified in the notice, the IRS must abate the assessment. Any reassessment of the abated amount is subject to the ordinary deficiency procedures. The request for abatement of the assessment is the only procedure a taxpayer may use prior to paying the assessed amount in order to contest an assessment arising out of a mathematical or clerical error. Once the assessment is satisfied, however, the taxpayer may file a claim for refund if the taxpayer believes the assessment was made in error.

Return preparer penalties

An income tax return preparer is subject to a penalty of $250 if any part of an understatement of tax on a return or refund claim is due to the return preparer taking a position for which there was not a realistic possibility of the position being sustained. The return preparer must have known (or reasonably should have known) of the unrealistic position and not disclosed that position. In addition, an income tax return preparer is subject to a penalty of $1,000 if any part of an understatement of tax on a return or refund claim is due to the return preparer's willful attempt in any manner to understate tax or to the return preparer's negligent or intentional disregard of rules and regulations. An income tax return preparer is also subject to a penalty of $50 for each failure to (1) furnish a copy of a return or refund claim to the taxpayer, (2) sign the return or refund claim, (3) furnish his or her identifying number, (4) furnish certain copies or lists of returns or refund claims, or (5) file certain information returns regarding his or her employees. In addition, tax return preparers who endorse or negotiate checks made to taxpayers pay a penalty of $500 for each check endorsed or cashed.

House bill

Deny eligibility for individuals without qualifying children

In order to claim the credit, an individual must have a qualifying child.

Modify definition of adjusted gross income used for phasing out the credit

The House bill modifies the definition of AGI used for phasing out the credit by including the following items:

(1) Social Security benefits not subject to income tax, and

(2) nontaxable distributions from pensions, annuities, and individual retirement arrangements (but only if not rolled over into similar vehicles during the applicable rollover period).

Credit rate for individuals with two or more qualifying children

No provision.

Phaseout of the credit

The phaseout rate of the credit is increased to 23 percent for individuals with two or more qualifying children and to 18 percent for individuals with one qualifying child. With these changes, the parameters of the credit for 1996 will be as follows:

	Two or more qualifying children	One qualifying child
Credit rate (percent)	40.00	34.00
Phaseout rate (percent)	23.00	18.00
Earned income threshold	$8,910	$6,340
Maximum credit	3,564	2,156
Phaseout threshold	11,630	11,630
Phaseout limit	27,126	23,608

For years after 1996, the credit rates and the phaseout rates will be the same as in the preceding table. The dollar values will continue to be indexed, as under present law.

Expand definition of disqualified income

No provision.

Deny credit to individuals not authorized to be employed in the United States

Under the House bill, individuals are not eligible for the credit if they do not include their taxpayer identification number (and, if married, their spouse's taxpayer identification number) on their tax return. Solely for these purposes and for purposes of the present-law identification test for a qualifying child, a taxpayer identification number is defined as a social security number issued to an individual by the Social Security Administration other than a number issued under section 205(c)(2)(B)(i)(II) (or that portion of sec. 205(c)(2)(B)(i)(III) relating to it) of the Social Security Act (regarding the issuance of a number to an individual applying for or receiving Federally funded benefits).

Use mathematical error procedures for certain omissions

If an individual fails to provide a correct taxpayer identification number, such omission will be treated as a mathematical or clerical error. If an individual who claims the credit with respect to net earnings from self-employment fails to pay the proper amount of self-employment tax on such net earnings, the failure will be treated as a mathematical or clerical error.

Increase return preparer penalties

No provision.

Effective date

The provision is effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

Senate amendment

Deny eligibility for individuals without qualifying children

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Modify definition of adjusted gross income used for phasing out the credit

The Senate amendment modifies the definition of AGI used for phasing out the credit by including certain nontaxable income and by disregarding certain losses. The nontaxable items included are:

(1) tax-exempt interest,

(2) Social Security benefits not subject to income tax,

(3) nontaxable distributions from pensions, annuities, and individual retirement arrangements (but only if not rolled over into similar vehicles during the applicable rollover period), and

(4) child support payments received pursuant to a divorce or separation instrument, but only in excess of $6,000.

The losses disregarded are:

(1) net capital losses (if greater than zero),

(2) net losses from sole proprietorships (other than in farming),

(3) net losses from sole proprietorships in farming,

(4) net losses from other trades and businesses,
(5) net losses from nonbusiness rents and royalties,
(6) net losses from trusts and estates, and
(7) net operating losses.

Credit rate for individuals with two or more qualifying children

The increase in the credit rate for individuals with two or more qualifying children that was supposed to take effect for 1996 is repealed. Thus, for 1996 and following years the credit rate for individuals with two or more qualifying children is 36 percent.

Phaseout of the credit

The Senate amendment changes the method of phasing out the credit. Rather than specifying a phaseout rate (which, given a maximum credit that is indexed for inflation, results in a phaseout range that increases with inflation), the size of the phaseout range is fixed in nominal dollars. The maximum amount of credit that may be claimed by an individual is reduced by a certain percentage for each $100 (or portion thereof) by which the individual's earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) exceeds the applicable phaseout threshold. For individuals with one qualifying child, the applicable percentage is 0.86 percent, meaning that the credit is phased out over a $11,600 range. For individuals with two or more qualifying children, the applicable percentage is 0.66 percent, meaning that the credit is phased out over a $15,100 range. The size of these phaseout ranges is not indexed for inflation, although the phaseout thresholds continue to be indexed for inflation.

With these changes, the parameters of the credit for 1996 are as follows:

	Two or more qualifying children	One qualifying child
Credit rate (percent)	36	34
Earned income threshold	$8,910	$6,340
Maximum credit	3,208	2,156
Phaseout threshold	11,630	11,630
Phaseout limit	26,730	23,230

For years after 1996, the credit rates will be the same as in the preceding table. The dollar values for the earned income threshold and the phaseout threshold will continue to be indexed, as under present law. The phaseout limit will always be $15,100 greater than the phaseout threshold for individuals with two or more qualifying children and will always be $11,600 greater than the phaseout threshold for individuals with one qualifying child.

Expand definition of disqualified income

For purposes of the disqualified income test for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995, the following items would be added to the definition of disqualified income: net capital gain income (if greater than zero) and net passive income (if greater than zero).

Deny credit to individuals not authorized to be employed in the United States

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Use mathematical error procedures for certain omissions

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill.

Increase return preparer penalties

The Senate amendment doubles the civil penalties applicable to income tax return preparers. Also, the Secretary of the Treasury is encouraged to use the maximum feasible review process to insure that originators of electronic income tax returns involving the credit comply with the law.

Effective date

The effective date is the same as the House bill.

Conference agreement

Deny eligibility for individuals without qualifying children

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

Modify definition of adjusted gross income used for phasing out the credit

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

Credit rate for individuals with two or more qualifying children

The conference agreement provides that the credit rate for individuals with two or more qualifying children is maintained at 36 percent for 1996 and future years. The base to which this rate is applied, however, is changed for some individuals. In general, the maximum amount of the credit an eligible individual with two or more qualifying children may claim is determined by multiplying an enhancement factor times the credit rate times the individual's earned income up to the earned income threshold.

For married couples filing joint returns for whom earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) is less than or equal to $17,000, the enhancement factor is 10/9ths. For married couples filing joint returns for whom earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) is greater than $21,000, the enhancement factor is 1. For married couples filing joint returns for whom earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) is greater than $17,000 but less than or equal to $21,000, the enhancement factor is ratably reduced from 10/9ths to 1. For example, a married couple filing a joint return with an earned income (and modified AGI) of $18,000 has an income one-fourth [= ($18,000 − $17,000)/($21,000 − $17,000)] of the way into the ratable reduction. Thus, the enhancement factor for this couple is 13/12ths [= (10/9) − (1/4)((10/9) − 1)]. The $17,000 and $21,000 amounts are indexed for inflation after 1996.

For unmarried individuals for whom earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) is less than or equal to $14,000, the enhancement factor is 10/9ths. For unmarried individuals for whom earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) is greater than $18,000, the enhancement factor is 1. For unmarried individuals for whom earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) is greater than $14,000 but less than or equal to $18,000, the enhancement factor is ratably reduced from 10/9ths to 1. For example, an unmarried individual with an earned income (and modified AGI) of $16,500 has an income five-eighths [= ($16,500 − $14,000)/($18,000 − $14,000)] of the way into the ratable reduction. Thus, the enhancement factor for this individual is 25/24ths [= (10/9) − (5/8)((10/9) − 1)]. The $14,000 and $18,000 amounts are indexed for inflation after 1996.

The conferees do not intend that individuals will have to do the above calculations to determine enhancement factors; these rules will be reflected in the credit tables provided with the tax return materials.

Phaseout of the credit

The conference agreement increases the phaseout rate of the credit for individuals with earned income (or modified AGI, if greater) in excess of a second-tier phaseout threshold. For individuals with two or more qualifying children, the second-tier phaseout threshold is $17,750 and the phaseout rate for income in excess of that threshold is 25 percent. For individuals with one qualifying child, the second-tier phaseout threshold is $14,850 and the phaseout rate for income in excess of that threshold is 20 percent. These second-tier phaseout threshold are indexed for inflation after 1996. The phaseout rate applied to income between the present-law phaseout threshold and the new, second-tier phaseout threshold is the same as would apply under present law for 1996 and future years. With these changes, the parameters of the credit for 1996 will be as follows:

	Two or more qualifying children	One qualifying child
Credit rate (percent)[1]	36.00	34.00
Earned income threshold	$8,910	$6,340
Maximum credit	$3,564	$2,156
First-tier phaseout threshold	$11,630	$11,630
First-tier phaseout rate (percent)	21.06	15.98
Second-tier phaseout threshold	$17,750	$14,850
Second-tier phaseout rate (percent)	25.00	20.00
Phaseout limit	$25,425	$23,055

[1] Subject to enhancement factor for individuals with two or more qualifying children.

For years after 1996, the credit rates and the phaseout rates will be the same as in the preceding table. The dollar values will continue to be indexed, as under present law.

Expand definition of disqualified income

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except that net capital gain income would not be added to the definition of disqualified income.

Deny credit to individuals not authorized to be employed in the United States

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

Use mathematical error procedures for certain omissions

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

Increase return preparer penalties

The conference agreement doubles the civil penalties applicable to income tax return preparers. The conferees encourage the Secretary of the Treasury to use the maximum feasible review process to insure that originators of electronic income tax returns involving the credit comply with the law.

Effective date

The conference agreement follows the House bill and the Senate amendment.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND RELATED PROVISIONS

FOREIGN AFFAIRS AGENCIES CONSOLIDATION

House bill

Section 6002 of the House bill would have enacted into law division A of H.R. 1561, the Foreign Affairs Agencies Consolidation Act of 1995. The Act reforms the foreign affairs institutions that have grown up over the last forty years and adapts them to the requirements of the post-Cold Ware era.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contained no comparable provision.

Conference agreement

The conferences concluded that the application of the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act) against the relevant provision of the House bill could not be avoided if reported as part of the conference agreement and, accordingly, agreed to omit the provision from the conference agreement.

CUBAN LIBERTY AND DEMOCRATIC SOLIDARITY (LIBERTAD) ACT OF 1995

House bill

The House bill would have enacted legislation identical to H.R. 927, as passed by the House of Representatives. H.R. 927 would reaffirm the U.S. policy continuing the economic and political isolation of the Castro regime and would protect the property interests of U.S. citizens whose property was confiscated by that regime. The bill would also have required immediate planning for U.S. support for a democratic transition in Cuba.

Senate amendment

Senate amendment contained no comparable provision.

Conference agreement

The conferences concluded that the application of the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act) against the relevant provision of the House bill could not be avoided if reported as part of the conference agreement and, accordingly, agreed to omit the provision from the conference agreement.

LEASE-PURCHASE

House bill

The House bill contained no comparable provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment would authorize the Department of State to acquire housing and other facilities overseas through lease-purchase arrangements. Authority is granted only within appropriated amounts and upon certification that the arrangement will result in less cost than direct purchase or construction.

Conference agreement

The conferences concluded that this provision would likely be subject to the application of the Byrd Rule (section 313 of the Congressional Budget Act) and, accordingly, agreed to omit the provision from the conference agreement.

BUDGET ENFORCEMENT

DISCRETIONARY SPENDING LIMITS

House bill

Reduces the discretionary spending limits from current law levels for fiscal years 1996, 1997, and 1998. Extends spending limits through fiscal year 2002. Further reduces spending limits by $12 billion for 1997-2002 levels in budget resolution conference report.

Senate amendment

There is no comparable provision in the Senate amendment.
